THE materials of the following pages have been collected in the course of several years.—One object in gathering them from the extensive ground they occupied, was to afford the writer a particular acquaintance with his own native place. As thus brought together, he has been advised to make them public.—Should they contribute to the amusement and information of any;—exhibit facts for the correction of errors, and examples for the encouragement of virtue and the restraint of vice;—his publication of them will not be in vain.

When, in his researches, he saw some authorities differing from others in point of date or fact, he of course sided with those generally deemed most correct.

It would have been gratifying to his feelings, could he, without charge of singularity, have presented dates of the Old Style so as to accord with those of the New,—not only with reference to years, but also to days. He has done the former; but not the latter.—It will be recollected, as a reason for what in these Annals may seem to be a discrepancy with ancient records,—that Chronology, for three-fourths of a century, has been computed in a manner different from what it was before. It is well known that formerly the year began the 25th of March; but that in 1752 it commenced the 1st of January; and that the 3d of September of the same year was called the 14th. In compliance with such an arrangement the writer has put down the years as beginning the 1st of January instead of the 25th of March. Should any however be desirous for bringing Old Style to New in respect to days, they can apply the rule of adding ten days to the monthly dates of the 17th century, eleven to those of the 18th, and twelve to those of the present or 19th century.

When giving extracts from ancient letters, the writer has clothed them, for the most part, according to modern orthography. In some instances, he has presented them literally, as specimens of alteration in the same language of different periods.

To exhibit a full view of Salem in its historical concerns, the writer was constrained to adduce legislative proceedings and current events, which had a bearing on its interests as well as on those of other towns. He is aware that the opinion of some on this point, may not coincide with his own. But as disagreement of this kind carries with it no offence to any thing, except doubtful criticism, he does not regard it as an important matter.

To the memory of the dead, whose writings have assisted him; and for the kindness of the living, who have granted him the use of manuscripts;—he would be long and sincerely grateful.

ANNALS OF SALEM.

REFLECTION on the past is essential to a reputable, beneficial and satisfactory guidance of conduct in future. Such an exercise of our mental powers is accompanied both with pleasure and pain. But however attended with mixed experience of this sort, it has stronger claims for being indulged than discouraged. Especially when referring to the spot of our first days, diversions, instructions, and employments,—does it appear with greater lights than shades;—with more on which remembrance fondly dwells, than from which it turns with aversion.—These remarks now bring us to the object in view.

SALEM was indebted for its first settlement to the failure of a planting, fishing, and trading enterprise at Cape Ann.

It appears that this fruitless attempt was made by a number of gentlemen belonging to Dorchester, in England. Among them the Rev. John White took the principal lead. His heart was strongly set on the establishment of colonies in Massachusetts. His chief desire and exertion for them were, that they might become places of refuge from the corruptions and oppressions, which prevailed at home under the countenance of James I. He had learned, that some persons of the Plymouth Plantation were obliged with their families to leave and reside at Nantasket. The occasion of such a separation was their siding with the Rev. John Lyford, who was ordered to quit the former place, for his disagreement with most of its inhabitants, on several subjects. Of those thus seceded, Mr. White and his associates chose Roger Conant to take charge of the planting and fishing; John Oldham, (afterwards murdered by the Indians of Block Island,) to superintend the trade with the natives; and Mr. Lyford to officiate as minister.—After a year's trial their prospect of gain was closed. As a consequence they gave up the idea of continuing there. On this failure, Roger Conant, John Woodbury, John Balch, Peter Palfrey, and others, removed to Naunkeag. The most of them, however, were at first dissatisfied with their new abode. The dread of Indian hostilities and present necessities seriously affected them. Besides this, they had an invitation to accompany their late Pastor to Virginia. Being partakers of his trials, and strongly attached to him, several expressed a wish to go with him. But through reasoning and persuasion, they were induced to continue. Mr. Lyford left them for Virginia, where he soon died. In the mean while, Mr. White wrote them,—that he would have the settlement at Naunkeag by no means relinquished. He promised to exert his influence for the speedy supply of their wants. There were also others at home, besides this gentleman, who earnestly seconded his views.

In reference to them, Governor Dudley writes to the Countess of Lincoln:—"About the year 1627 some friends being together in Lincolnshire, fell into discourse about New-England and the planting of the Gospel there; and after some deliberation, we imparted our reasons by letters and messengers to some in London and the West Country; where it was likewise deliberately thought upon, and at length with often negotiation so ripened" as to have proposals made for a patent.—Informed by Mr. White of such proceedings, and solicited by him to persevere, Messrs. Conant, Woodbury, Balch, Palfrey, and their associates, confided in his word, and were influenced by his advice. The proof they had received of his virtues, as exhibited for their welfare while at Cape Ann, led them to face the toils, privations and perils which thronged them, and hold the ground which they occupied.—Indeed to the agency of Mr. White, as much as to that of any individual, may be imputed the permanent settlement of Naumkeag.

Through the endeavours of him and his friends a grant was obtained from the Council, "established at Plymouth, in the County of Devon, for the planting, ruling, ordering and governing of New-England."—This Council by a written document of March 19th, 1627, O. S., but 1628, N. S., conveyed the soil, then demominated Massachusetts Bay, to Sir Henry Roswell, Sir John Young, Knights, John Southcot, John Humphreys, John Endicott, Simon Whetcombe, and their heirs, assigns, and associates.

The territory of this new company extended "three miles to the Northward of Merrimack River, and three miles to the Southward of Charles River, and in length, within the described breadth, from the Atlantic Ocean to the South Sea."—One condition of their grant was, that a fifth part of all silver and golden ore, discovered within their bounds, should be reserved for the Crown.

Desirous of having a person immediately interested in the plantation, at Naunkeag, they selected Capt. John Endicott. They made known to him their wishes. He accordingly complied. He set sail for the land, where his various talents, attainments and virtues were to be severely tested. He arrived here the 6th of September.

He found that previously to his arrival, an assessment had been laid on this and other plantations to the amount of £12 7. The proportion of this place was £1 10. Such a tax was made a common charge, because it referred to a general concern. This was as follows. It appears that Thomas Morton, afterwards a persevering and influential opposer of New-England policy, had been apprehended by the noted Miles Standish at Mount Wollaston, now in Quincy. The cause assigned for his apprehension was conduct on his part, which threatened to subvert the industry, temperance, peace and welfare of the country. Being thus taken, he was sent home. An account of his proceedings was forwarded to His Majesty's Council in the vessel, by which he was transported. It was dated 9th of June.

Capt. Endicott was accompanied hither by a hundred adventurers. Some of them were actuated by motives of religious liberty, and others by hopes of gain. He brought with him goods of the company, in order to traffic with the natives for beaver, otter, and other furs. For his dwelling, he purchased the materials of a house, which had been located at Cape Ann, and belonged to the Dorchester Company. It was then two stories high. Some remains of it are said to be still contained in the Old Tavern, at the corner of Court and Church Streets. It was the building, in reference to which Mr. Higginson remarked,—“we found a faire house newly built for the Governor.”

Soon after his arrival he commissioned Messrs. Ralph, Richard and William Sprague to explore the country about Mishawum, now Charlestown. Here they met with a tribe of Indians, called Aberginians. By the consent of these they commenced a plantation. They were followed by other respectable colonists the next year.—Capt. Endicott appears to have had special reason for causing this settlement to be made. The reason was, that William Blackstone and William Jeffries were empowered, by the son of Sir Fernando Gorges, to put John Oldham in possession of the territory occupied by the Messrs. Spragues. This seems to be a fact, because it is mentioned in a letter from the Company the following Spring.

They who remained at Naumkeag were called to endure severe afflictions. Their refuge from civil and religious persecution presented a scene of no common calamities. Some had scarcely a suitable place to lay their head, or food to satisfy the cravings of their hunger. A large proportion of them died with the scurvy and other diseases. While sickness was making its ravages among them, they were destitute of medical assistance. That so great and dangerous a deficiency might have a temporary supply, Mr. Endicott wrote to Gov. Bradford of Plymouth.

Dr. Fuller, having come, in answer to his request, continued a few months, and afforded seasonable relief. This gentleman, while here, preserved the reputation of eminence in medicine, beneficence and piety, which had been previously attributed to him. On his return, Mr. Endicott sent the following letter to Gov. Bradford.

“ Right Worshipful Sir,—It is a thing not usual, that servants to one Master, and of the same household, should be strangers: I assure you I desire it not; nay, to speak more plainly, I cannot be so to you. God's people are all marked with one and the same mark, and sealed with one and the same seal, and have, for the main, one and the same heart, guided by one and the same spirit of truth; and where this is, there can be no discord; nay, here must needs be a sweet harmony; and the same request, with you, I make unto the Lord, that we may, as Christian brethren, be united by a heavenly and unfeigned love, bending all our hearts and forces in furthering a work beyond our strength, with reverence and fear, fastening our eyes always on Him, that is only able to direct and prosper all our ways. I acknowledge myself much bound to you for your kind love and care in sending Mr. Fuller amongst us, and rejoice much that I am by him satisfied, touching your judgment of the outward form of God's worship; it is, as far as I can yet gather, no other than is warranted by the evidence of truth, and the same which I have professed and maintained ever since the Lord in mercy revealed himself unto me, being far from the common report, that hath been spread of you touching that particular; but God's children must not look for less here below; and it is a great mercy of God that he strengtheneth them to go through with it. I shall not need, at this time, to be tedious unto you, for (God willing) I purpose to see your face shortly; in the mean time I humbly take my leave of you, committing you to the Lord's blessing and protection, and rest your assured friend,

JOHN ENDICOTT.

Neunkeek, May 11th, 1629."

Mr. Endicott in this letter delicately touches on the jealousy which had existed between the supporters of Plymouth and Massachusetts colonies, in reference to ecclesiastical discipline. The former leaned more to what was termed Brownism than the latter. Hence, while those could approve of Mr. Lyford's expulsion from their boundaries, these could encourage him and his followers with protection and support.—Mr. Endicott, also, refers to the time of his own religious reformation. The instrument of so important an alteration was the Rev. Samuel Skelton, to whom he was ardently attached, and whose society he was soon to enjoy.

He received an interesting communication from Matthew Cradock, Governor of the Company. It was dated February 16th. Some remarks of it will throw light on the progress of the Colony. Mr. Cradock stated, that the company at home had purchased a ship of 200 tons, and hired two more of a similar size, well armed. Their purpose was to have these vessels for traders between the colony and England. He requested Mr. Endicott to provide houses for about 300 persons, who intended to take passage in the ships. He also wished him to prepare, as return cargoes, wood, timber, staves, sassafras, sarsaparilla, sumach, silk grass, two or three hundred firkins of sturgeon, and other fish and beaver. He expressed a satisfaction as to the motives and conduct of Mr. Endicott. He observes—“We trust you will not be unmindful of the mayne end of our plantation by endeavouringe to bringe the Indians to the knowledge of the Gospel, which that it may be the speedier and better effected, the earnest desire of our whole company is that you have diligent and watchful eye over our own people, that they live unblamable and without reproach, and demeane themselves justlye and corteous to the Indians, thereby to draw them to affect our persons and consequentlie our religion; as alsoe to endeavour to gett some of the children to trayne up to reading and consequentlie to religion while they are yonge; herein to yonge or olde to omit no good opportunitys that may bring them out of that woeful state and condition they now are in;—in which case our predecessors in this our land sometyes were, and but for the mereye and goodness of our good God might have continued to this day.”—His further remarks show that the Rev. Hugh Peters, then in Holland, was destined and expected to settle in the Colony ;—and that two of the clergymen coming hither were to be sent through the approbation of the Rev. Messrs. White and Davenport. It seems from his letter, that Mr. Endicott had complied with solicitations of the Planters, so that they were allowed to cultivate Tobacco. The cultivation of this plant was warmly opposed by the Company, as highly injurious to the health and morals of the emigrants. Mr. Cradock also advised Mr. Endicott to be on his guard against too much confidence in the Indians. He referred him to the sufferings of the English in Virginia as a reason for hearkening to such a caution. The gentleman who forwarded so valuable instructions to Mr. Endicott, was a relative of his through Mrs. Endicott.

While the Agent of the Company was faithfully discharging his duty here, they were averse to a further prosecution of their design under existing circumstances. The Council, superintending the Plantations of New-England, had granted them soil, but no adequate right to administer its government. They wished for a surer claim to their territory, as it had been already disputed by Gorges, and also for an enlargement of their number. The latter they soon obtained. The Company, thus increased, applied for a Charter to the King. He allowed their petition the 4th of March, 1628, O. S., but 1629, N. S. They received the title of Governor and Company of Massachusetts Bay in New-England. Their Seal was in part the representation of an Indian, having a bow in one hand, and an arrow in the other. and a label from his mouth with the Scriptural expression—“Come over and help us.”—Emigrants under their patronage were privileged to import and export articles of commerce free from duties for the period of seven years. They were, also, required to keep in view, as a principal object, the dissemination of Christianity among the Aborigines.

While pursuing their laudable object, civil and ecclesiastical restrictions were not slackened by their sovereign, Charles I. He of his own choice and through the influence of Bishop Laud, was opposed to Calvinistic clergymen. He reduced them to the alternative, either to withhold some of their opinions and read in time of public worship the Book of Sports, which encouraged an open profanation of the Sabbath; or submit to prosecutions, fines, imprisonment, and deposition from the ministry.

The spirit of emigration hither gathered strength from such opposition. A considerable number, of highly respectable character, devised measures for a speedy change of residence. Before, however, they would trust themselves in a new world, they determined on obtaining spiritual guides. They were fully convinced, that, let temporal prosperity be ever so great for a season, still, if unattended with the precepts and sanctions of the Gospel, it would draw in its train abounding corruptions, and become an instrument of ruin to its possessors.

Thus properly impressed, they sought for men worthy to bear the Ark of God. Their choice fell on the Rev. Francis Higginson of Leicester, Rev. Samuel Skelton of Lincolnshire, and Rev. Francis Bright. These persons had been prevented from freely exercising their holy office by the edicts of conformity, which had been promoted by Elizabeth, and rendered more severe by her successors, James and Charles. In reference to them, the Company's letter of April 17th to Mr. Endicott, contains the following observations.

“For that the propagation of the Gospel is the thing we do profess above all to be our aim in settling this Plantation, we have been careful to make plentiful provision of godly ministers, by whose faithful preaching, godly conversation, and exemplary life, we trust not only those of our own nation will be built up in the knowledge of God, but also the Indians may, in God's appointed time, be reduced to the obedience of the Gospel of Christ;—one of them is well known to yourself, viz. Mr. Skelton, whom we have rather desired to bear a part in this work, for that we are informed yourself hath formerly received much good by his ministry;—another is Mr. Higginson, a grave man and of worthy commendations. The third is Mr. Bright, sometime trained up under Mr. Davenport. We pray you accommodate them all with necessaries as well as you may;—and in convenient time let there be houses built them according to agreement we have made with them. For the manner of exercising their ministry and teaching both our own people and the Indians, we leave that to themselves, hoping they will make God's word the rule of their actions and mutually agree in the discharge of their duties;—and because their doctrine will hardly be well esteemed whose persons are not revered, we desire, that both by your own example and by commanding all others to do the like, our ministers may receive due honour.”

Besides them the Rev. Ralph Smith requested a passage to this country. The same letter remarks of him that he “hath desired passage in our ships, which was granted him before we understood of his difference in judgment in some things from our ministers, but his provisions for his voyage being shipped before notice was taken thereof, through many occasions, where-with those interested with this business have been exemplary, and forasmuch as from hence it is feared there may grow some distractions among you, if there should be any siding, though we have a very good opinion of his honesty. We therefore thought fit to give you this order, that unless he will be conformable to our Government, you suffer him not to remain within the limits of our grant.”—It appears that this person, of whom they thus speak, had been solicited by the Church of Plymouth Colony to become their Pastor. The Company being of the opinion, that this Church were excessively independent, as to their ecclesiastical discipline, and probably understanding that Mr. Smith's views coincided with their's on such a point, it is not matter of surprise, that they should be fearful of the course which he would take if residing within their territory. The Company's caution to Mr. Endicott with respect to him, and circumstances accompanying it, show that they were careful to guard against what they deemed too great a deviation from the Episcopal Establishment, as well as against what they considered its oppressive corruptions.

The four clergymen, already named, set sail in a fleet, which contained as passengers 300 men, 60 women, and 26 children. There were, also, on board 115 neat cattle, some horses, sheep, goats, and 6 cannon with stores suitable for a fort. The emigrants unhappily lost most of their live stock during the voyage. They depended much on them for provisions.—The ship Talbot arrived with Messrs. Higginson and Smith, at Cape Ann, June 27th. There they spent the Sabbath, and came to Naumkeag the 29th.

During the passage the small pox prevailed on board. Two died with this disorder, then far more dreadful than at present. One of them was a daughter of Mr. Higginson, 4 years old.

Previously to embarking for America, the Company contracted with him for his support. They agreed April 8th, to pay him £30 for outfits; £10 for books; £30 salary per ann. for 3 years; to find him a house, food and wood for this period; to be at the expense of transporting him and family; and to do the same for them at the end of three years, if they should prefer to return home. They stipulated that should he tarry here such a length of time, they would grant him 100 acres of land for his own;—and in case of his decease.

while in their service, they would maintain his wife during her widowhood and abode in the country; and also his children while they remained on the Plantation. The parsonage was to be for his use while living, and at his death to descend to succeeding ministers. The Company further agreed with him,—“that the milk of two kyne shall bee appointed towards the chardges of diett for him and his family, and half the increase of calves during the said three years: But the said two kyne and the other halfe of the increase to return to the Company at the end of the said three years.” They moreover pledged themselves that should he remain here seven years, they would give him another 100 acres of land.

About the time of his making this contract, he published “General considerations for the plantation in New-England, with an answer to several objections.” He stated that an object of this sort ought to be pursued; that the Church would be thus extended and occupy ground, which, if not so possessed, might be sought and settled by Jesuits; that America might be a refuge from apprehended desolations, such as scourged the churches of Europe; that England began to be burdened with paupers, who could have ample support here; that a general corruption had extended to national living and business, to schools of learning and religion, which might be remedied in a new country; that it was a laudable work to build up the colonial church now in its infancy; that trials in such an enterprise would manifest purity of motives; interest the people of God in behalf of the Plantation; and encourage others to seek it for a residence.

He answered several objections to his reasons for effecting a settlement in New-England. Among them was this:—“What warrant have we to take the land, which is and hath been of long time possessed of others, the sons of Adam?” His reply was partly as follows:

“That which is common to all is proper to none. This savage people ruled over many lands without title or property;—for they enclose no ground, neither have they cattle to maintain it, but remove their dwellings as they have occasion, or as they can prevail against their neighbours. And why may not Christians have liberty to go and dwell among them in their waste lands and woods (leaving them such places as they have manured for corn) as lawfully as Abraham did among the Sodomites? For God hath given to the sons of men a two fold right to the earth; there is a natural right and a civil right. The first right was natural when men held the earth in common, every man sowing and feeding where he pleased. Then as men and cattle increased they appropriated some parcels of ground by enclosing and peculiar manurance, and this in time got them a civil right.” He further stated, that there was more land than the English and Indians needed; that the Indians had been swept away by a plague, and left their country void of inhabitants; and that emigrants would have “good leave of the natives.” This question about occupying the land of the Aborigines was afterwards the occasion of much controversy, through Mr. Williams, both at Plymouth and Salem. It was one which received much deliberation from the original proprietors and settlers of New-England. Whatever may have been thought, said, or written of them on this subject, they were evidently willing to satisfy every fair claim of the Indians for the soil, which they possessed. The Company of Massachusetts gave Mr. Endicott instructions to discharge all just demands of the natives for territory within his jurisdiction.

Another principal objection urged against emigration to this country, and which Mr. Higginson answered, was, that “these plantations that have been formerly made succeeded ill.” On this he remarked, that no public enterprise was to be condemned or justified by immediate consequences; that the colonists, who had failed, were actuated more by temporal than religious motives, were persons of immorality, and had neglected to choose a suitable form of government, and to these causes the relinquishment of their settlements might be traced.

Indeed, for his moving hither, Mr. Higginson gave ingenious and forcible reasons.

The appearance of the new colonists served to dissipate much of the gloom, which hovered over the minds of those who had preceded them.

Aware of what the Planters had suffered from want of a physician, permanently located with them, the Company provided one. They write;—"We have entertained Lambert Wilson, Chirurgion, to remain with you in the service of the Plantation, with whom we are agreed that he shall serve this Company and the other Planters that live in the Plantation for three years, and in that time apply himself to cure not only such as came for the general and particular accounts, but also for the Indians, as from time to time he shall be directed by yourself or your successor, and the rest of the Council. And moreover he is to educate and instruct in his art one or more youths, such as you and the said Council shall appoint, that may be helpful to him, and if occasion serve, succeed him in the Plantation, which youth or youths, fit to learn that profession, let be placed with him, of which Mr. Higginson's son, if his father approve thereof, may be one, the rather because he hath been trained up in Literature, but if not, then such other as you shall judge most fit."

Besides information of this sort, the Company were very particular in their orders to Mr. Endicott, concerning the cultivation and use of Tobacco. They absolutely forbid the colonists, under their immediate controul, ever to use it, "unless upon urgent occasion for the benefit of health and taken privately." In reference to the first settlers, over whom they had no direct power, they earnestly wished to have them discouraged in their cultivation of Tobacco. As much excitement had been sustained in England for a series of years with respect to this article by Sir Walter Raleigh's first introduction of it into polite circles, and especially by the proclamations, excises, and writings of James against it, as contained in his book, called the Counter Blast, there is no great matter of surprise, that the Company should repeatedly express themselves about Tobacco as they did.—Would it not be well for cleanliness, temperance, and comfort, if some of the Puritanical feelings as to this plant, had come down to the present age, and exerted a restraining influence on the habits of multitudes?

In the last fleet came Messrs. John and Samuel Brown. They were worthy men; but trials awaited them. They brought a recommendation to Mr. Endicott from the Governor and Deputy Governor. It was dated April 21st, and runs thus:—"Through many businesses wee had almost forgotten to recommend unto you two brethren of our Company, Mr. John and Mr. Samuel Browne, who though they be noe adventurers in the generall stock, yet are they men wee doe much respect, being fully perswaded of their sincere affecons to the good of the Plantation;—the one, Mr. John Browne, is sworne an Assistant here and by vs chosen one of the Councill there; a man experienced in the lawes of our Kingdom and such an one as wee are perswaded will worthylie deserve your favour and furtherance, which wee desire he may have, and that in the first division of lands there may be allotted to either of them 200 acres."

Mr. Smith moved to Nantasket, and thence to Plymouth, as the Church there had requested. He served them as minister five or six years.—After this period, which had not quite elapsed on the departure of Mr. Williams from that Plantation, he took his leave. The occasion appears to have been his own disinclination to stay on account of his burdensome duties, and his people's indifference to his continuance, because they considered him as not possessing competent abilities.— After this separation he officiated at Manchester.

Mr. Bright, in accordance with the instructions of the company, went to Charlestown. They wrote, "That there be no difference arise about the appointing of one to be minister, with those you send to inhabit at Massachusetts Bay, we will have you (in case the ministers cannot agree among themselves who shall undertake that place) to make choice of one of the three by lot, and on whom the lot shall fall, he to go with his family to perform that work." This appears to differ from a highly respectable Biographer, who says, that Mr. Bright left Salem for Charlestown on account of "disagreeing in judgment with his two brethren." He continued there more than a year. When, however, he perceived his congregation inclined to depart more from the Church of England than he deemed expedient, he embarked for home.

Being agreeably reinforced with the last colonists, Mr. Endicott, among his various instructions, was informed that he had been selected as Governor of the Colony. On this subject the executive officers of the Company, when assembled in London, 30th of April, express themselves in the subsequent terms: "Having taken into due consideration the merits, worth, and good desert of Capt. John Endicott and others, lately gone over from hence with purpose to reside and continue there, we have with full consent and authority of this Court, and by erection of hands, chosen and elected the said Capt. John Endicot, to the place of present Governor in our said Plantation. Also, by the same power and with the like full and free consent, we have chosen and elected Mr. Francis Higginson, Mr. Samuel Skelton, Mr. Francis Bright, Mr. John Brown, Mr. Samuel Brown, Mr. Thomas Graves, and Mr. Samuel Sharp, these seven to be the Council, and do hereby give power and authority to the said Governor and those seven to make choice of three others, such as they or the greater number of them in their discretion shall esteem and conceive most fit thereunto, to be also of the said Council. And to the end that the former Planters there may have no just occasion of exception as being excluded out of the privileges of the Company, this Court are content and do order by erection of hands, that such of the said former planters as are willing to live within the limits of our Plantation, shall be enabled, and are hereby authorized, to make choice of two such as they shall think fit to supply and make up the number of twelve of the said Council, one of which twelve is by the Governor and Company, or major part of them to be chosen Deputy to the Governour for the time being.”—The Colonial Authorities here specified were empowered to choose a Secretary and other needed officers. One was appointed to administer an oath of fidelity to the Governour; the Governour was then to administer an oath to him, and either of these two was to do the same for members of the Council. The persons composing this body, were to hold their office one year. The whole, or a majority of them, were authorized to fill vacancies, occasioned by death, incompetency, or immorality. The Governour had power to call Courts, and, with the Council, enact needful laws, so far as consonant with the statutes of Parliament, and punish offenders according to their desert. Mr. Endicott took the oath of his office, in compliance with these regulations. In case of his decease, Messrs. Skelton and Sharp were to govern according to order.

It appears that, previously to his becoming formally Governour, he had written to the Company as to the manufacture of salt and the cultivation of vineyards. They remark to him, on these objects of enterprise: "We take notice, that you desire to have Frenchmen sent you that might be experienced in making of salt and planting vines. We have inquired diligently for such, but cannot meet with any of that nation; nevertheless, God hath not left us altogether unprovided of a man, able to undertake that work; for that, we have entertained Mr. Thomas Graves, a man commended to us as well for his honesty as skill in many things very useful." "We pray you take his advice touching the premises, and where you intend to sit down in, to fortify and build a town that it may be qualified for good air and water, according to your first instructions, and may have as much natural help, as may be, whereby it may with the less labour and cost be made to resist an enemy?"

They informed him that cloth and leather apparel was provided for the colonists.

They counsel Mr. Endicott in reference to the Natives:—"For avoiding the hurt that may follow through our much familiarity with the Indians, we conceive it fit that they be not permitted to come to your Plantation but at certain times and places to be appointed them. If any of the savages pretend right of inheritance to all or any part of the lands granted in our Patent, we pray you endeavour to purchase their title, that we may avoid the least scruple of intrusion."

The Company's advice to Mr. Endicott show how careful they were to have the Lord's day kept holy. They observe, "To the end the Sabbath may be celebrated in a religious manner, we appoint that all that inhabit the Plantation, both for the general and particular employments, may surcease their labour every Saturday throughout the year at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and that they spend the rest of that day in chatechizing and preparing for the Sabbath as the ministers shall direct."

They were equally desirous to have family order and religion kept up. On this subject they say: "For the better accommodation of business we have divided the servants belonging to the Company into several families, as we desire and intend they should live together, a copy whereof we send you here enclosed, that you may accordingly appoint each man his charge and duty; yet it is not our intent to tie you so strictly to this direction, but that in your discretion, as you shall see cause, from time to time, you may alter or displace any as you should think fit. Our earnest desire is that you take special care in settling these families, that the chief in the family (at least some of them) be grounded in religion, whereby morning and evening family duties may be duly performed, and a watchful eye held over all in each family, by one or more in each family to be appointed hereto, that so disorders may be prevented and ill weeds nipt before they take too great a head." Such regulations accord with the principles of sound wisdom and the claims of general welfare, however they may greatly differ from the language of modern custom.

Mr. Endicott forwarded a letter to the Company in London of May 27th. They received it July 23th. In it he related, that some within his jurisdiction paid no regard to the law of 1622 for regulating trade with the Indians. He requested that they would petition for a renewal of the law by proclamation. They complied with his wish; succeeded in their effort, and sent him power to prevent the sale of ammunition to the natives. He had felt it his duty as superintendant of the Province, to visit Mount Wollaston, where such infractions, as he complained of, were frequently committed. He went thither in the purifying spirit of just authority. He found that Morton had not yet returned from England. He cut down a May pole, to which this person had been in the habit of affixing pieces of satirical composition against those, who opposed his wishes and practices. He, also, rebuked the inhabitants there, and “admonished them to look to it that they walked better.”

A letter from the Company to him, of May 28th, touches again on the interesting subject of obtaining a full right to the soil granted them. They say,—“Whereas in our last we advised you to make composition with such of the savages, as did pretend any title or lay claim to the land within the territories granted us by his Majesty's Charter,—we pray you now be careful to discover and find out all pretenders, and by advice of the Council there, to make such reasonable compensation with them as may free us and yourselves from any sample of intrusion ;—and to this purpose it might be conveniently done, to compound and conclude with them all, or as many as you can at one time not doubting but by your discreet ordering of this business, the natives will be willing to treat and compound with you upon very easy conditions.” This and similar advice of the Company corrects a mistake in the valuable description of Salem.—In speaking of a quit claim, given by some Indians of Natick and Chelmsford in 1686 to the Selectmen of this town,—the learned and Reverend author of that description says: “The natives had forsaken the spot (Salem) before the English had reached it. On the soil they found no natives, of whom we have any record. No natives ever claimed it, and the possession was uninterrupted.”

They furnished him with blank books for a record of the daily employment§ of every individual, to be made by overseers of the families. These books, written out, he was requested to send home semiannually.

They made arrangements for purchasing the ship Eagle as a trader between London and the Colony. They purchased her and called her name Arabella, in honour of Mrs. Johnson, who afterwards died at Salem.

They authorized Mr. Endicott to build a House of Correction, as a restraint upon the disorderly.

The same communication, which contains these items, speaks of building Shallops for the fishing business, by six shipwrights then here. One of these mechanics, Robert Moulton, was master workman. It proposed fishing in the harbour or on the Banks. It requested, that if the ships, which had arrived with emigrants, should be sent to fish on the Bank, and not return hither immediately, "the Bark already built in the Country," might be fitted out to bring back the fishermen.—We perceive from this that a vessel had been made, most probably at Naumkeag; and that the Desire, afterwards launched at Marble harbour, was not the first vessel built in the Colony, as some have supposed.—The fishermen, just mentioned, had been employed in England to reside here for teaching and encouraging their business.—A store house was erected for the shipwrights and their provision, by an order of April 17th; and another for fishermen and their stores, by an order of May 28th. Records were to be kept of their stock, provisions, and proceedings.

In the Company's advices to Mr. Endicott, of the last date, they write,—“We may not omit, out of our zeal for the general good, once more to put you in mind to be very circumspect in the infancy of the Plantation, to settle some good orders, whereby all persons, resident upon our Plantation, may apply themselves to one calling or other and no idle drone be permitted to live among us; which, if you take care now at the first to establish, will be an undoubted means, through God's assistance, to prevent a world of disorders, and many grievous sins and sinners.” “And among other sins, we pray you make some good laws for the punishing of swearers, whereunto it is to be feared too many are addicted, that are servants, sent over formerly and now. These and other abuses we pray you who are in authority to endeavour seriously to reform, if ever you expect comfort or a blessing from God upon our Plantation."

So consistent were the Company, between their precept and example, they dismissed several persons for their immorality, whom they had hired at considerable expense to emigrate hither.

On the subject of ardent Spirits they say to Mr. Endicott,—“We pray you endeavour, though there be much Strong Waters sent for sale, yet so order it as that the Savages may not for our lucre’s sake be induced to the excessive use or rather abuse of it, and at any hand take care our people give no ill example, and if any shall exceed in that inordinate kind of drinking as to become drunk, we hope you will take care his punishment be made exemplary for all others; let the laws be first published to forbid these disorders and all others you fear may grow up, whereby they may not pretend ignorance of the one, nor privilege to offend, and then fear not to put good laws, made upon good ground and warrant, in due execution.” It will be perceived, that the Company’s orders, as to the morals of the Colony, have been drawn on largely. This has been done to show the foundation on which the heritage of our pilgrim fathers was erected. If the view presented, lead their descendants to examine and perform the needful repairs, it will be neither unpleasant nor unprofitable to them.

Soon after the arrival of the last emigrants, 100 of them moved under Mr. Thomas Graves, and joined the Messrs. Spragues at Mishawum. This was done to gratify their desire for better soil, and perpetuate the settlement made there, so as to cut short all pretensions of Mr. Oldham to the land they occupied. A part of those who helped to people Charlestown, commenced a Plantation the next year at Shawmut.

Now it was deemed expedient to alter the original name of this town. Various opinions were advanced as to the change. Mr. Higginson and the majority were earnest to have it designated by a term, significant of their enjoying of freedom from civil and religious oppression. It therefore received the name of Salem, a Hebrew word meaning peace. Its date of incorporation is from this year.

In order to secure a primary object of their emigration, our fathers took measures for the regular establishment of the Church and ministry among them. July 20th was set apart by Mr. Endicott for choice of the Pastor and Teacher. Of the services on that interesting day, Mr Charles Gott writes to Gov. Bradford of Plymouth. He thus expresses himself:—"The 20th of July, it pleased God to move the heart of our Governor to set it apart for a solemn day of humiliation for the choice of a pastor and teacher; the former part of the day being spent in praise and teaching; the latter part was spent about the election, which was after this manner: The persons thought on were demanded concerning their callings. They acknowledged there was a two fold calling, the one inward calling, when the Lord moved the heart of a man to take that calling upon him, and filled him with gifts for the same; the second was from the people, when a company of believers are joined together in covenant, to walk together in all the ways of God, every member is to have a free voice in the choice of their officers. These two servants clearing all things by their answers, we saw no reason but that we might freely give our voices for their election after this trial. Their choice was after this manner,—every fit member wrote in a note his name whom the Lord moved him to think was fit for a pastor, and so likewise, whom they would have for a teacher ;—so the most voice was for Mr. Skelton to be pastor and Mr. Higginson to be teacher ; and they accepting the choice, Mr. Higginson, with three or four more of the gravest members of the church, laid their hands on Mr. Skelton, using prayers therewith. This being done, then there was imposition of hands on Mr. Higginson. Then there was proceeding in election of elders and deacons ; but they were only named, and laying on of hands deferred, to see if it pleased God to send us more able men over ; but since Thursday is appointed for another solemn day of humiliation for the full choice of elders and deacons and ordaining them ; now, good Sir, I hope, that you and the rest of God's people, with you, will say that here was a right foundation laid, and that these two blessed servants of the Lord came in at the door and not at the window." When the 6th of August came the services in contemplation were performed. A platform of Church government, a confession of doctrines in general and a covenant were adopted. The last was subscribed by thirty persons. To this number many of good report were soon added. One particular contained in their covenant was, that they would endeavour to be clear from being stumbling blocks in the way of the Indians. The Plymouth Church were invited to take part in the ordination, with the understanding that their counsel was to be nothing more than discretionary. Of their delegates was Gov. Bradford. He and his attendants were prevented by adverse winds from being here in the forenoon ; but they arrived seasonably enough to present the right hand of fellowship.

It will be perceived, that there were two ministers placed over the congregation here instead of one. This custom seems not to have been fully complied with here in any other instance, excepting that in which Mr. Williams served for a short period with Mr. Skelton.

It was a custom, however, so dear to some of the Colony, they would not interrupt it, lest they should be chargeable with flagrant iniquity; and those, thus inclined, succeeded to keep it alive over a century.

Instead of being titled Reverend then and a considerable period afterwards, Congregational Ministers were called Elders.

The Ruling Elder selected for the Church here was Mr. Henry Haughton. This office was considered an important one, and continued to be esteemed in the Colonial churches till the middle of the last century. The duty of such officers was to preach occasionally in the absence or on the illness of the ministers, and also to assist in cases of church discipline. When preachers, except their own, served, they were in the habit of remarking, previously to their beginning:—"If ye have any word of exhortation, say on."

The establishment of the Church, not only the first of Salem, but, also, of all Massachusetts Proper, must have filled the hearts of our ancestors with emotions, not easily imagined, much less expressed. In their doctrines they were Calvinists. They called no man master. They resorted to the Bible as the ultimate standard of moral distinctions and religious principles. In their ideas of Ecclesiastical polity, they held a medium between the Brownists and Presbyterians.

During the summer of his ordination, Mr. Higginson wrote home to his friends and connexions an account of the soil, productions, climate, location, natives, and condition of the Colony. He described it in the glowing colours, which his attachment to it, as an adopted country, and the object of his ardent hopes, would naturally present. Though some, induced by his representation to emigrate hither, complained, that they could not find the realities, which he thought he had, still the integrity of his reputation forbids the suspicion, that his motives were in the least deceitful.

A desire to give an original view of this place, will be a sufficient apology for liberal selections from his interesting remarks. He writes:—"At this instant we are setting a brick kiln on work to make bricks and tiles for the building of our houses. There is plenty of marble-stone in such store, that we have great rocks of it and a harbour hard by. Our Plantation is from thence called Marble-harbour." He speaks of a profitable trade carried on between the colonists and natives by way of the former's exchanging corn for the beaver of the latter. He goes on with his description:—"For beasts there are some bears, and they say some lions also, for they have been seen at Cape Ann. Also there are several sorts of deer. Also wolves, foxes, beavers, otters, martins, great wild cats, and a great beast called molke, as big as an ox. I have seen the skins of all these beasts since I came to this Plantation, excepting lions." Though Mr. Higginson has been thought exceedingly credulous for supposing lions had been discovered in this climate, yet it was not strange, that he, living in a new country, should hear of such animals, and that not having had time to examine for himself, he should put some confidence in the report. The molke, mentioned by him, was very probably the moose, or the cervus alces. He proceeds:—"The abundance of sea fish are almost beyond believing, and sure I should scarce have believed it, except I had seen it with my own eyes. I saw great store of whales and granipuses, and such abundance of mackerel, that it would astonish one to behold, likewise cod fish in abundance on the coast, and in their season, are plentifully taken. There is a fish called bass, a most sweet and wholesome fish as ever I did eat, it is altogether as good as our fresh salmon, and the season of their coming was begun when we came first to New-England in June, and so continued about three months space. Of this fish our fishers take many hundreds together, which I have seen lying on the shore to my admiration; yea, their nets ordinarily take more than they are able to haul to land, and for want of boats and men they are constrained to let many go after they have taken them, and yet sometimes they fill two boats at a time with them. And besides bass we take plenty of skate and thornbacks, and abundance of lobsters, and the least boy in the Plantation may both catch and eat what he will of them. Also, there is abundance of herring, turbot, sturgeon, cusks, haddock, mullet, eels, crabs, muscles, and oysters." We perceive from Mr. Higginson's account, that the quantity of all fish in our waters, has considerably diminished, and that some species of them are very scarce, if not entirely disappeared.

Speaking of lights, he observes—"Although New-England has no tallow to make candles of, yet by the abundance of the fish thereof, it can afford oil for lamps. Yea, our pine trees that are the most plentiful of all wood, do allow us plenty of candles, which are very useful in a house. And they are such candles as the Indians commonly use, having no other, and they are nothing else but the wood of the pine tree cloven in two little slices something thin, which are so full of the moisture of turpentine and pitch, that they burn as clear as a torch." What was the best light then, is now the worst, and would hardly be tolerated in a cottage.

Mr. Higginson says—"I will show you a little of the inhabitants and their government. For their governors they have kings, which are called Sagamores, some greater and some less, according to the number of their subjects. The greatest Sagamores about us cannot make (or raise) three hundred men, and other less Sagamores, have not above fifteen subjects, and others near about us but two. Their subjects, above twelve years since, were swept away by a great and grievous plague that was among them, so that there were very few left to inhabit the country. The Indians are not able to make use of the one fourth part of the land, neither have they any settled places, as towns to dwell in, nor any ground as they challenge for their own possession, but change their habitation from place to place. For their statures, they are a tall and strong limbed people, their colours are tawny; they go naked, save only they are in part covered; their hair is generally black, and cut before, like our gentlewomen, and one lock longer than the rest, much like to our gentlemen, which fashion I think came from hence to England.—For their weapons, they have bows and arrows, some of them headed with bone and some with brass. Their men for the most part live idly, they do nothing but hunt and fish. Their wives set their corn and do all their other work. They have little household stuff, as a kettle and some other vessels like trays, spoons, dishes and baskets. They do generally profess to like well of our coming and planting here; partly because there is abundance of ground that they cannot possess nor make use of, and partly because our being here will be a means both of relief to them when they want, and also a defence from the enemies, wherewith before this plantation began they were often endangered.—For their religion they do worship two gods, a good god and an evil god. The good god they call Tantum, and their evil god, who they fear will do them hurt, they call Squantum. For their dealing with us, we neither fear them nor trust them, for forty of our musketeers will drive five-hundred of them out of the field. We use them kindly; they will come into our houses sometimes by half a dozen or half a score at a time, when we are at victuals, but will ask or take nothing but what we give them. We purpose to learn their language as soon as we can, which will be the means of doing them good.”

Thus are the Aborigines brought up in sad remembrance before us. The land, once speedily compassed by them in the chase, will no longer show the traces of their steps. The woods once resounding with their war song, will no more echo with its dreadful notes. The waters, once yielding them food, will no more bear them on its surface. As snow disappears before the rays of a vernal sun, so have they before the influence of a civilized population. They have gone down to the grave. We can say ; they were, but are not.

On the condition of the Plantation, Mr. Higginson writes :—“ When we came first to Nehumkek, we found about half a score of houses ; we found also abundance of corn planted by them, very good and well liking. And we brought with us about two-hundred passengers and planters more, which by common consent of the old planters were combined together into one body politic, under the same Governor. There are in all of us, both old and new planters, about three-hundred, whereof two-hundred of them are settled at Nehumkek, now Salem. And the rest have planted themselves at Masathulets Bay, beginning to build a town there which we do call Cherto, or Charlestown. We that are settled at Salem make what haste we can to build houses ; so that in a short time we shall have a fair town. We have great ordinance, wherewith we doubt not but we shall fortify ourselves in a short time to keep out a potent adversary. But that which is our greatest comfort and means of defence above all others, is, that we have here the true religion and holy ordinances of Almighty God taught among us. Thanks be to God, we have here plenty of preaching and diligent catechising with strict and careful exercise, and good and commendable orders to bring our people into a Christian conversation with whom we have to do withal. And thus we doubt not but God will be with us, and if God be with us, who can be against us” ? Thus wrote a guardian of this place while in its infancy. Could he appear to our eyes, and meditate on the contrast between his and our day (however shaded with its flitting clouds,) he would say with MENTORIAL friendship, "Fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you." There is one thing observable in Mr. Higginson's words, as well as those of his coteremporaries. It is that Charlestown and the land of its immediate vicinity were referred to as within Massachusetts Bay, while Salem and territory to the South of it, were not considered as included in this Bay. Not aware of such a fact, so contrary to present impressions, some have had their thoughts occasionally confused in perusing the early History of our State.

Though a good degree of harmony prevailed among the inhabitants of Salem, yet it was not perfect. The Messrs. Browns, already named, as recommended by the Company, contended for the Episcopal mode of worship. They had followers. They assembled by themselves on the Sabbath. They were reprov'd by the Governor and Ministers as promoters of schism, when the closest union was essential to the welfare of the Colony. They replied to their reprovers:—"that they were Separatists and would soon be Anabaptists; but as for themselves they would hold fast to the forms of the Church established by law." The Governor and Ministers denied and stated, that they only came away from the common prayer and ceremonies, because they judg'd the imposition of these things to be sinful corruptions of the word of God. Such controversy increased warmth of feeling, and drove the subjects of it further from reconciliation. About the 1st of August, letters were sent from Mr. Endicott and a majority of his Council to the Court of the Company in England with complaints against the Messrs. Browns.

While various changes occurred in the infant settlement here to try its strength, and train it up to the action of manhood, an important alteration was effected by the General Court of the Company at home. Many persons of extensive property and high estimation, who were dissatisfied with the arbitrary proceedings of both Church and State, made a proposal to the Company. This proposal was to emigrate hither, provided the principal seat of colonial government were transferred to New-England. After several deliberations on this subject, an agreement was made on the 29th of August, but was not finally confirmed till the 16th of October, in the following terms:—"Whereby erection of hands it appeared by the general consent of the Company, that the Government and Patent should be settled in New-England, and accordingly an order to be drawn up."

In September, three ships, the Lion, Whelp, and Talbot, freighted with the productions of the Plantation here, arrived in England. Among their cargoes "were clapboards and other wood," and beaver skins. These skins were prized at 20d. per lb. There were five boys, which had been employed here as servants by the Company, sent home in the ships for their refractory conduct.

The Court in London enacted a law, that joint stockholders, who had been at the expense of settling the Plantation, should have the exclusive trade in Furs for the space of seven years. At the end of this period they were to receive a just proportion in the stock and profits, and have a right to dispose of their shares. For the same length of time, they were required to be at one half of the expense of maintaining fortifications, the churches and ministers, and the Colonists were to answer for the other half.

The letters in reference to the Messrs. Browns, were laid before the Court in London the 19th of September, and their conclusion was to have the difficulty committed to mutual referees. Before this date, the Court had retained letters of Messrs. Browns, which contained strictures unfavourable to the Colony. In a short time after their letters were forwarded to England, the Messrs. Browns were ordered by the government here to leave the Plantation. They were dismissed in compliance with an order of the Company, received a few months before, which ran thus:—"It is often found that some busy persons (led more by their will than any good warrant out of God's Word,) take opportunities by moving needless questions to stir up strife, and by that way to begett a question, and bring men to declare some difference in judgment (most commonly in things indifferent) from which small beginnings great mischiefs have followed, we pray you and the rest of the Councill, that if any disputes should happen amongst you, that you suppress them, and bee carefull to maintain peace and unitie." On account of Messrs. Browns the Company wrote to Messrs. Skelton and Higginson. Their letter follows:—

“ Reverend Friends—There are lately arrived here, (being sent from the Governor, Mr. Endicott, as men factious and evil conditioned,) John and Samuel Brown, being brethren, who since their arrival have raised rumours (as we hear) of divers scandalous and intemperate speeches passed from one or both of you in your public sermons or prayers in New-England, as also of some innovations attempted by you; we have reason to hope that their reports are but slanders; partly, for that your goodly and quiet conditions are well known to some of us; as also, for that these men, your accusers, seem to be embittered against you and Capt. Endicott for injuries which they conceive they have received from some of you there; yet for that we all know that the best advised may overshoot themselves, we have thought good to inform you of what we hear, that if you be innocent you may clear yourselves; or if otherwise, you may be intreated to look back on your miscarriage with repentance, or at least to take notice that we utterly disallow any such passages, and must and will order for the redress thereof as shall become us; but hoping, as we said, of your unblameableness herein, we desire that this only may testify to you and others, that we are tender of the least aspersion which either directly or obliquely may be cast upon the State here, to whom we owe so much duty, and from whom we have received so much favour in the Plantation where you now reside. So with our love and due respect to your calling we rest

Your loving friends,

 GEO. HARWOOD, Treas'r.
 THOMAS WINTHROP,
 THOMAS ADAMS,
 SYMOND W. WHETCOMBE,
 WILLIAM VASSAL,
 WILLIAM PINCHON,
 JOHN REVELL, FRANCIS WEBB."

London, Oct. 16th, 1629.

Under the same date they wrote to Gov. Endicott.

"Sir—As we have written at this time to Mr. Skelton and Mr. Higginson, touching the rumours of John and Samuel Brown, spread by them on their arrival here, concerning some unadvised and scandalous speeches uttered by them in their public sermons or prayers, so have we thought meet to advertise you of what they have reported against you and them, concerning some rash innovations begun and practised in the civil and ecclesiastical government. We do well consider that the Browns are likely to make the worst of any thing they have observed in New-England, by reason of your sending them back against their wills, for their offensive behaviour, expressed in a general letter from the Company there; yet for that we likewise do consider that you are in a Government newly founded, and want that assistance which the weight of such business doth require, we have leave to think that it is possible some undigested counsels have too suddenly been put into execution, which may have ill construction with the State here, and make us obnoxious to any adversary. Let it therefore seem good unto you to be very sparing in introducing any laws or commands, which may render yourself or us distrustful to the State here, to which (as we ought) we must and will have an obsequious eye; and as we make it our main care to have the Plantation so ordered as may be the most for the honour of God, and of our gracious Sovereign, who hath bestowed many large privileges and royal favours on this Company; so we desire that all such as shall by word or deed do any thing to detract from God's glory, or his Majesty's honour, may be duly corrected for their amendment and the terror of others; and to that end, if you know any thing which hath been spoken or done either by the ministers (whom the Browns do seem tacitly to blame for some things uttered in their sermons or prayers) or any others, we require you if any such things be, that you form due process against the offenders, and send to us by the first (conveyance,) that we may, as our duty binds us, use means to have them duly punished. So not doubting but we have said enough, we shall repose ourselves upon your wisdom, and do rest your loving friends."

At a session of the Court in London, the 20th of November, the Messrs. Browns complained that their property at Salem had been undervalued by appraisers. Early the year following, measures were adopted, which succeeded in healing the differences between them and the Company. They tarried in England four years, and then returned hither to fill a sphere of usefulness and respectability. For their being constrained to leave this town, more blame has been laid on Mr. Endicott than he deserved. Others were as active as himself to ensure their departure. For what he did in that affair he had ample authority. But whether it was expedient to exercise his power, as he did, is a question not easily solved. In the part he and his counsellors acted, there is no sufficient ground to suspect, that they were influenced by malicious purposes. The policy they pursued in reference to civil and ecclesiastical affairs, was not peculiar to them. It was common to their successors in the colonial administration, was frequently complained of by the sovereigns of England, and ultimately became the cause of our Independence.

Though the colonists here had reason to be encouraged by movements of the Company at home ; still the signs among themselves were cheerless and depressing. As the winter approached, disease and mortality began their dreadful work. Nearly one half of their number died. Among them was the Ruling Elder, Henry Haughton. Such a repeated event was enough to have driven ordinary adventurers from the shores, which breathed pestilence and death. But the mourning survivors continued firm and hoped for better days. While they looked in imagination to the more healthy residences of England, others were earnestly engaged in preparing to move thence, and become partakers with them in the trials of a new country.

Under the new modification of the Company, John Winthrop was Governor, and Thomas Dudley, Deputy. These gentlemen, with many others, were about to make their home in Massachusetts. Before leaving their native land, they published, through the Rev. Mr. White, their reasons for such an undertaking. They expressed themselves with filial, liberal, and patriotic feelings towards the land of their birth and education. To the clergy they remarked—"However your charity may have met with some occasion of discouragement through the misreport of our intentions, or through the disaffection or indiscretion of some of us, or rather among us, for we are not of those that dream of perfection in this world, yet we desire you would be pleased to take notice of the principles and body of our company, as those who esteem it our honour to call the Church of England, from whence we rise, our dear Mother, and cannot part from our native country, where she specially resideth, without much sadness of heart, and many tears in our eyes, ever acknowledging that such hope and part as we have obtained in the common salvation, we have received from her bosom. We shall always rejoice in her good, and unfeignedly grieve for any sorrow that shall betide her, and while we have breath, sincerely desire and endeavour the continuance and abundance of her welfare with the enlargement of her bounds in the Kingdom of Christ Jesus." Thus exhibiting traits of affection, which adorn the character of every nation and period, they embarked in four ships; they left several other vessels, which were to follow them. After a long and perilous passage, the Arabella hove in sight of this port the 12th of June. She came to anchor within Baker's Island. She was visited by Capt. Pierce of the ship Lion, then in the harbour. He came ashore and carried off Messrs. Endicott, Skelton and Leavit. On the return of these after a few hours, they were accompanied by some of those, just arrived. Speaking of this visit, Gov. Winthrop says:—"We that were of the assistants, and some other gentlemen, and some of the women, and our captain, returned with them to Nehumkeck, where we supped with a good venison pasty and good beer, and at night we returned to our ship, but some of the women stayed behind." The Arabella was warped into the harbour on the 14th. Most of the passengers then left her under a parting salute of five cannons. During several months, more emigrants arrived here than had before in the same space of time. Seven vessels landed their passengers here, and ten others theirs at Nantasket and Charlestown. Thus about fifteen-hundred people came to Massachusetts. They were chiefly from London and the West of England.

On the 17th of June, Gov. Winthrop and others left Salem to look out a settlement. They went by water to Charlestown. On their return they lodged at Mr. Maverick's on Noddle's Island. They got back here the 19th. In their course, they had stopped at Nantasket, and suppressed a dispute between Capt. Squib, of the ship Mary-and-John, and his passengers. These complained that instead of landing them on Charles River, as he had agreed, he put them ashore at Nantasket. He was afterwards compelled to pay damages.

While about moving hence to his intended abode, Gov. Winthrop was severely tried. It appears that one of his sons, who intended to accompany him to this country, had been unintentionally left at the Isle of Wight. This son had been lately married to a Miss Fones, who was left in the family of his mother. He followed his father, and arrived at Salem the 1st of July. But while coming ashore the next day, to receive the congratulations of an affectionate parent, he was drowned. In a letter to his wife, a fortnight after so sad an occurrence, Mr. Winthrop writes:—"We have met with many sad and discomfortable things, as thou shalt hear after; and the Lord's hand hath been heavy upon myself in some very near to me. My son Henry! my son Henry! ah! poor child! Yet it grieves me more for my dear daughter. The Lord strengthen and comfort her heart, to bear this cross patiently. I know thou wilt not be wanting to her in this distress.

Yet for all these things, (I praise my God,) I am not discouraged; nor do I see cause to repent or despair of those good days here, which will make amends for all."

The late emigrants found the inhabitants of this town in a wretched condition. They came in season to relieve them from the horrors of approaching famine. Even provision by such a supply was far from being abundant. There was only sufficient for a few weeks. Of one hundred and eighty servants, whom the Company had sent over two years before, the remainder came to the last colonists, and intreated for food. But, however thus addressed, they were constrained to deny them for the most part, lest their own stores should be consumed. The provisions, put up for these suffering servants, had been left behind. The planters, being unable to maintain them, allowed them their freedom, though they had cost the Company from £16 to £20 each.

However surrounded by afflictions, the Colonists were grateful to their Maker for the timely appearance of hundreds, who had lately joined them, and aided to lessen their necessities. For such favour they observed a general Thanksgiving on the 8th of July.

The people here were called to sustain a severe loss in the decease of Mr. Higginson. He died August 6th, aged 43. He was born in England in 1587. He received his education at Emanuel College in Cambridge. He was settled as minister over one of five parishes in Leicester. At first he was a strict Episcopalian. But led to examine the arguments of Hildersham and Hooker, and especially, the impositions in doctrine and ceremonies, forced upon the established Church, he sided with the Dissenters. For this change he was ejected from his living. His people, however, remained sincerely attached to him. They cherished more esteem for his piety and worth, than disregard for the alteration of his views. They sought and obtained the privilege of hearing him preach one lecture on the Sabbath. The other part of the day he assisted an aged minister. He resided in the diocese of a benevolent bishop, Dr. Williams. This gentleman refused to persecute him, though threatened by ecclesiastical authority for such forbearance. The talents, acquirements, and character of Mr. Higginson, brought him the offer of some of the best livings in England. But his scruples of non-conformity would not suffer him to accept them, while his heart held no sufficient communion with the conditions of their being conferred on him. Thus conscientious, he taught scholars for the maintainance of his family. Some of his pupils honoured his tuition by their subsequent usefulness and respectability. The beneficence he inculcated on others, he endeavoured to practice himself. Particularly were his sympathies excited and his charities drawn forth by the Protestant exiles, who had fled from Bohemia and the Palatinate, already desolated by the French, and taken refuge in England. While thus inclined, Mr. Higginson had cause to fear, that he should be cited to answer for the stand he had taken, before the high Court of Commissioners. When so situated, two men knocked at his door. He heard them say loudly :—"We must see Mr. Higginson." His wife hastened to his room and besought him to conceal himself. He replied that he must stand in his lot and meet the messengers. He accordingly went to them. They presented him with a bundle of papers. They remarked to him, with feigned roughness, We must carry you to London. He answered with fortitude,—This is what I expected. But on opening the package addressed to him, he was agreeably disappointed. He found it contained an invitation for him to embark for New-England, as an asylum from his fears and perils. It seems that the bearers of such news practised deception to render his joy more intense by contrast. But his correct views of morality could hardly excuse management of this sort, though well intended. The proposal made for his labouring in a new country, received his serious consideration. He regarded it as a call in Providence,—not a forced call, of which we so often hear and read, to gratify his selfish propensities, but one suited to the dictates of obligation. As previously stated, he concluded to make his home in Naumkeag. When embarked and arrived at Land's End, he called up his family and others to the stern of the ship, that they might take a parting look of their native country. He observed to them:—"We will not say, as the Separatists were wont to say at their leaving of England:—Farewell Babylon,—farewell Rome!—but we will say, Farewell dear England!—farewell the Church of God in England, and all christian friends there! We do not go to New-England as Separatists from the Church of England, though we cannot but separate from the corruptions of it; but we go to practice the positive part of Church reformation and propagate the Gospel in America." Such an expression of patriotism, magnanimity, and religion, cannot but accord with the vibrations of every enlightened conscience. He came to Naumkeag in hopes of re-establishing his infirm health, and prolonging his usefulness.—For a time, especially when penning his account of New-England, did he think his expectations would be realized. But a merciful and wise God had purposed otherwise. In the course of abundant exertions to secure the temporal, spiritual, and eternal good of his flock, Mr. Higginson was arrested by the hand of insidious disease. His last public labours were about the middle of June. Before this he had been failing. A consumption threw over his countenance its varied, but too sadly presaging hues. In bearing the burden of his pains and trials, he leaned on the staff of the Almighty. When a friend observed to him, that he must have the consolations of faithfulness to his charge,—he answered:—“I have been an unprofitable servant, and all my desire is to win Christ and be found in him, not having on my own righteousness.” Soon to leave a faithful wife and eight children, without pecuniary resources, he was consoled with the thought, that their necessities would be provided for while resident here, according to his contract with the Company; and especially that the Being, in whom he had long and supremely confided, “preserveth the stranger, and relieveth the fatherless and widow.” As he approached the grave he freely remarked:—Although the Lord should call him away, he was persuaded that he would raise up others to carry on the work which was begun, and that there would be many churches in this wilderness. When death came, he left this world with the Scriptural hope of a blessed immortality. So called, he had continued among his people over one year. But in this short period, they so learned his worth as earnestly to desire the long permanence of his labours among them. In his person he was slender and erect, but not tall. In his manners he was courteous and obliging. His talents were of high order. He well cultivated them in the fields of literature and divinity. A primitive writer on New-England, says of him, “a man indued with grace, apt to teach, mighty in the Scriptures, learned in the Tongues, able to convince gainsayers.” As a preacher, Mr. Higginson was uncommonly popular. Before his coming hither it was usual for many to assemble from various towns, that they might hear him. In his parochial callings he acted from no time serving policy; but from principle, appointed in heaven, and recorded in the Bible. He suffered no unworthy person to commune with his church. For so sacred a service he required evidence of morality and religion. In his opinion of non-essentials, he was more candid than some of that day. While he persuaded his people to beware of the corruptions, imposed on the English Church, he would have them esteem its long standing doctrines as worthy of their belief and improvement. The part which he and other counselors of the government here, took in counteracting the ecclesiastical views and proceedings of the Messrs. Browns, brought upon him the censure of these gentlemen. No doubt, on an occasion so trying to his feelings, he endeavoured to pursue the path of duty. Whether his purpose deviated from such a course, is a question, which cannot easily be answered at this late period. Two of Mr. Higginson's children followed his profession. One, whose name was Francis, went to Europe. He resided at Leyden some time, and visited several Universities on the Continent for the improvement of his mind. He settled as minister at Kerby Steven in Westmoreland, England. There he died about 1670 in the fifty-fifth year of his age. He was the first who wrote against the Friends. The other son, named John, was settled over the Congregation of his father thirty years after his decease. Mr. Higginson published the works, already mentioned and quoted. They were reasons for settling New-England and answers to objections; and a description of the Massachusetts Colony. The latter passed through several editions in London. Besides these an interesting account of his voyage to this place has been printed. His last sermon was preached after the landing of the emigrants, who accompanied Gov. Winthrop. The text of it was:—"What went ye out into the wilderness to see."

A Court of Assistants was convened at Charlestown on the 23d of August. It was composed of Gov. Winthrop and eight other members. Mr. Endicott, though of their body, did not sit with them till their session in September. The reason probably was, that, as he had entered on a second marriage a few days before, his attention was called to domestic arrangements. The Court while in session enacted, that ministers should be maintained, and have houses built at the common charge. From this act Salem and Mattapan, or Dorchester, were exempted. The Court ordered that Justices of the Peace should have power similar to that of such officers in England. It appointed Mr. Endicott as the Justice of this town.

About the last of August, Lady Arabella Johnson died here. She was daughter to the Earl of Lincoln, whose family was highly esteemed, and deeply interested in the welfare of New-England. Two of the Assistants, composing the first Court at Charlestown, had resided in this family. Their names were Bradstreet and Nowell. Mrs. Johnson had a sister married to a son of Sir Fernando Gorges, the proprietor of Maine, and another to Sir John Humphrey, who settled at Saugus. She left the conveniencies of wealth and the attractions of honour for the hardships of a new world. To them with many of her connexions she bade adieu, in order to enjoy civil and religious freedom with a beloved husband, in a land of perils and strangers. She lived but a short time in the country, where she had anticipated many joys as well as trials. She was buried with expressions of general esteem and grief. Her decease was a source of deep affliction to her husband, who survived her only a month. He died in Boston, lamented by its inhabitants, as one in whom they placed strong hopes of future benefit to Massachusetts.

The Court of Assistants sat the 28th of September. They passed a law for this and other Plantations, which forbid any to teach the Indians the use of fire-arms. This order appears to have had its rise principally from the conduct of Thomas Morton. But three weeks before, the Court ordered him to be "set in the Bilboes," sent to England as a prisoner, have his goods given to the Indians as satisfaction for a canoe of theirs, which he had taken, and his house burnt in their sight, for wrongs which, it was said, he had done them. They appointed John Woodbury to serve as constable of Salem one year. They required that Master Masons, Joiners, and Carpenters should receive no more than 16d. per day, and the workmen under them no more than 12d; and that labourers in general, should have no more than 12d. a day, and 6d. for meat and drink. They forbid Corn to be sold to any English or Indians, or to be sent out of the Colony, without a license from them. They appointed Capt. Patrick and Capt. Underhill as military instructors, and required them to be maintained at the common charge. They assessed a tax of £50 for this object. Salem out of nine Plantations stood the seventh. Its proportion was £3. It appears that the custom for supporting military commanders was now commenced, and that it continued under different modes for a series of years.

On a jury of fifteen, empannelled to inquire concerning the death of Austin Bratcher, who had died of blows on Cradock's Plantation, Peter Palfrey of Salem was one. They brought in a bill of manslaughter against Walter Palmer, who was ordered to be tried the next month.

October 19th, it was propounded as a matter of general concern, whether the Freemen had not better choose the Assistants, and the Assistants choose the Governor and Deputy Governor, and these with the Assistants make the requisite laws.

Between this date and the 18th of May following, a considerable number of persons proposed themselves to the Court for being acknowledged as freemen. Among them were Samuel Skelton, Samuel Sharpe, Thomas Graves, Roger Conant, Roger Williams, John Woodbury, Peter Palfrey, John Balch, and William Trask, of this town.

The wolves were exceedingly hurtful here and in other Plantations. They had killed six calves, owned in this place; which were then a very serious loss to the inhabitants in their necessitous and precarious condition. To prevent such depredations, the Court of Assistants offered, the 9th of November, a reward of Id. for every wolf, killed by an Englishman. To promote the interests of the Colony here and elsewhere, they also offered a premium of one farthing for every horse, cow, bullock, swine, or goat, which should be raised to a certain age. They required the people here and in general, to leave the price of beaver discretionary with traders, and not continue it at 6s. per lb. as it had been.

On a jury of twelve, who cleared Walter Palmer, charged with the death of Austin Bratcher, was John Balch of this town.

Dec. 28th, the Court of Assistants, after several consultations about a suitable place for being fortified, and for the seat of Government, agreed to have it at Newton, afterwards Cambridge. All the members, except Mr. T. Sharp and Mr Endicott, agreed to build houses, and move their military stores thither the next Spring. The former person was about returning to England. The latter had so located his property and formed his connexions in Salem, he would have had more difficulty in renewing his abode than the rest. This project of building and settling Newton was relinquished at the end of the next year, to the damage of Mr. Dudley in particular, and to a disturbance of harmony between him and Mr. Winthrop.

Great mortality existed here and in other places. It is computed that from April to December, one hundred of the people of Salem died.

Deprived of their religious Teacher, our fathers wished for another to supply his place. They heard of Mr.

Roger Williams, who had arrived at Nantasket with his wife the 5th of February. He was accounted a valuable acquisition to the Colony. He was born in Wales 1599. He became pious at the early age of ten. He was educated at Oxford under the patronage of Sir Edward Coke. He is represented as having studied law with this eminent jurist. He had been a strict churchman; but altered his views, when the innovations of Charles and his advisers were made more important, than the weighty matters of religion. The Society here soon invited him to preach, or prophesy, as the term was in reference to candidates not ordained. They invited him to settle as Teacher with Mr. Skelton. He accepted their call. But at this point of their connexion, the Governor and Assistants interfered. These wrote to Mr. Endicott, in April, as one having a principal concern in his proposed settlement. The import of their letter was, that as "Mr. Williams had refused to join with the Congregation at Boston, because they would not make a public declaration of their repentance for having communion with the churches of England, while they lived there; and, besides, had declared his opinion, that the magistrate might not punish the breach of the Sabbath, nor any other offence, as it was a breach of the first Table; therefore, they marvelled they should choose him without advising with the Council: and withal desiring him, that they would forbear to proceed till they had conferred about it."—When such a communication was received, it put a stop to the measures for his ordination. Thus hindered he went to Plymouth. There he assisted Mr. Smith in the ministry about two years, unconscious of the severe trials which awaited him.

Much distress was experienced through the Plantations during winter. The scurvey prevailed. Provisions were alarmingly scarce. Wheat meal was over $3; Corn and Peas were over $2 per bushel. Many were forced to live on muscles, clams, acorns, and ground-nuts. A Fast was to have been observed on the 6th of February; but the Lion, Capt. Peirce, arriving with supplies on the 5th, it was exchanged for Thanksgiving on the 22d.

At a Court of Assistants, March 1st, it was ordered, that all the Colonists who were employing Indians as servants should discharge them; and that they should hire no more of them, without permission from the Governor.

At this season the abundance of fowl was extraordinary, and must have served as a relief to those, whose provisions were scanty. One writes—"From fair daylight till 8 A. M., fly over all the towns in our Plantations, so many flocks of doves; each flock containing many thousands; and some so many that they obscure the light."

On the 15th of March, Mrs. Skelton, wife of the Pastor, died. Her decease was a heavy loss to society. She moved in her difficult sphere with so much discreteness as to engage the esteem of her acquaintance. She honoured the profession of her husband and gave effect to his precepts. Her conduct made her life desirable to others, and her death sincerely lamented.

On the 22d, the Court of Assistants enacted, that the wages of labourers and mechanics, which had been defined, should be left without legal restrictions; that all persons should be armed, except magistrates and ministers; that all cards and dice should be destroyed.

On the 18th of April, they ordered that every Captain should train his company once a week, on Saturday; and that no person should travel alone from the Plantations to Plymouth, nor any without arms, though several together.—Such precaution appears to have been taken, because a dread existed here, that the Mohawks were about to attack the Colony and the adjacent Indians.

At the same date, the Court instituted an inquiry, concerning a charge of battery against the Assistant from this town, as committed upon Thomas Dexter. The case was decided unfavourably to the former, and he was fined 10s. In reference to this and other matters, Mr. Endicott writes the following letter to Gov. Winthrop :

“ Right Worshipful—I did expect to have been with you in person at the Court, and to that end I put to sea yesterday and was driven back again, the wind being stiff against us. And there being no canoe or boat at Saugus, I must have been constrained to go to Mystic and thence about to Charlestown, which at that time durst not be so bold, my body being at this present in an ill condition to wade or take cold, and therefore I desire you to pardon me. Though otherwise I could much have desired it, by reason of many occasions and businesses. There are at Mr. Hewson’s Plantation five or six kine very ill and in great danger, I fear they will hardly escape it, whereof two are mine, and all I have, which are worse than any of the rest. I left mine there this winter to do Mr. Skelton a pleasure to keep his for him here at Salem, that he might have the benefit of their milk. And I understand by Winecoll, that they have been ill tended, and he saith almost starved.” (Here four lines are omitted.) “ I could wish when Manning hath recovered his strength, that you would free him, for he will never do you or Mr. Hewson service, for when he was well he was as negligent as the worst of them. Mr. Skelton, myself, and the rest of the Congregation desire to be thankful to God and yourself for your benevolence to Mr. Haughton’s child, The Lord restore it you. I prevailed with much ado with Sir Richard for an old debt here, which he thought was desperate to contribute it, which I hope I shall make good for the child. I think Mr.

Skelton hath written to you, whom he thinks stand most in need of contribution of such provisions as you will be pleased to give among us of that which was sent over. The eel pots you sent for are made, which I had in my boat, hoping to have brought them with me. I caused him to make but two for the present; if you like them and his prices (for he worketh for himself) you shall have as many as you desire. He sells them for 4s. a piece. Sir, I desired the rather to have been at Court, because I hear I am much complained of by goodman Dexter for striking him. I acknowledge I was too rash in striking him, understanding since it is not lawful for a justice of peace to strike. But if you had seen the manner of his carriage with such daring of me with his arms akimbo, &c. it would have provoked a very patient man. But I will write no more of it, but leave it till we speak before face to face. Only thus far further, that he hath given out, if I had a purse he would make me empty it, and if he cannot have justice here, he will do wonders in England, and if he cannot prevail there he will try it out with me here at blows. Sir, I desire that you will take all into consideration. If it were lawful to try it at blows, and he a fit man for me to deal with, you should not hear me complain; but I hope the Lord hath brought me off from that course. I thought good further to write what my judgment is for the dismissing of the Court till corn be set. It will hinder us that are far off exceedingly, and not further you there. Men's labour is precious here in corn setting time, the Plantations being yet so weak. I will be with you, the Lord assisting me, as soon as conveniently I can. In the mean while I commit you to his protection and safeguard, that never fails his children, and rest

Your unfeigned and loving friend to command, JO. ENDICOTT."

Salem, April 12th, 1631.

This letter goes to show, with known facts, that a common way of going to Court from this part of the country was by water; and that the land communication was very inconvenient. It indicates that a few cattle were valued above droves at this day; and attention to raising a harvest was deemed more important than legislation. It presents Mr. Endicott as acknowledging his error in the chastisement of Thomas Dexter. His remarks on this unhappy affair, were more in accordance with the customs of that time, than with those of the present. Next to refraining from wrong, is repentance and confession for its being committed.

May 18th, the Court order, with full consent of the Commons present, that a General Court shall be held at least once a year, at which the Commons may have liberty to propound the persons, whom they would prefer for Assistants, and to exercise a similar right in their removal for misconduct or incompetency. They also, enacted, that, as an indispensable condition to becoming a Freeman, every candidate for such a privilege, must be a reputable member of some regular church. Many, who refused to comply with this statute, were shut out from voting for officers of government and from all places of trust. As might be expected, they made complaint, which reached the throne, and increased prejudices against the Colony. Still the regulation, though nominally abrogated on the accession of Charles II. continued till the discontinuance of the Charter.

May 27th, a pinnace of 18 tons came to Salem from Virginia, and sold her load of tobacco and corn. The last article went for $2,22 per bushel.

June 14th, the Court ordered that Philip Radclif, for reproaches against the government and the Church of Salem, should be whipped, have his ears cropped, and be banished. The sentence was executed. This transaction was handled in England by himself, Mayton, and Gardiner to the great injury of Massachusetts.

July 6th. a levy of £90 was made on the several Plantations for making a Creek from Charles River to Newton. Salem's proportion was £3. It stood the fifth on the list with Roxbury.

In the first part of August, about one hundred Tarrentines, or Eastern Indians, began hostilities in the vicinity of this place, and produced great alarm. They assaulted the wigwams of the Sagamore at Agwam. They killed seven men and wounded others. They also made an attack in the dark on a guard near Saugus. In the morning expresses were forwarded to the neighbouring towns. The cannon from Salem were discharged in the woods. This was a means of inducing the Tarrentines to flee. These Indians being represented as cannibals, enterprising in their expeditions, and brave in resisting their foes, carried terror wherever they appeared. Before the settlement of Plymouth, they had been such a scourge to the Indians of Massachusetts, these were in dread of fixing on any particular abodes, lest they should be more easily discovered and slain by them.

In September, a small vessel sailed hence for Cape Cod to trade for corn, as another had the year preceding. But forced by the wind to make a harbour at Plymouth, the crew's object became known to Gov. Bradford. He reproved them severely, and forbid them at the peril of their lives to depart even from his jurisdiction. This matter was complained of to Gov. Winthrop on the 10th, and he wrote to Gov. Bradford. The conduct of the latter gentleman may appear unusual under present circumstances. But then the case was very different. His Colony as well as Massachusetts were in great straits for grain to support life. The Court of Massachusetts had already laid restrictions on the exportation of corn from their territory. Gov. Bradford must have been aware of such a fact. He was probably influenced by it as well as by the dictates of self preservation, to prevent our people's trading with his for such an article.

Oct. 18th, the Court for some offence not named, ordered Thomas Graves' house at Marbleharbour to be pulled down, and no Englishman to give him entertainment. This person had sustained a reputable character, and came highly recommended by the Company, as a man of uncommon talents and attainments.—They assessed a tax of £60, for making a Palisade about Newton, and made the proportion of Salem £4 10.—They enacted, that on account of the scarcity of money, corn should be taken by creditors for their demands at the usual price, excepting cases in which cash and beaver had been promised.

Oct. 25th, Gov. Winthrop with Capt. Underhill and others, visited this town on foot. Their chief business was with Mr. Endicott. He gave them a polite and friendly reception. The necessities of that period caused the mode of their travelling to be exceedingly different from the mode of similar officers in these days.

About this time, it was customary with the inhabitants here and elsewhere to give the title of Mr. and Mrs. to but very few of either sex. The usual appellations of adults were goodman and goodwife before their respective surnames.

1632.

March 6th, the Court of Assistants enacted, that no person should transport money or beaver from the Colony to England, unless by a permit from the Governor. In case any one violated this regulation, he was liable to forfeit the money and beaver concerned in such a trespass.

May 9th, the General Court required, that each town should choose two persons to confer with them on the subject of raising a general stock. Salem selected Roger Conant and Peter Palfrey for this business. They agreed to a mode of election different in some degree from previous practice. It was that the Governor and Assistants should be annually chosen by the General Court, and that the Governor should be always from the Assistants. This Court (agreed on the year before) appears to have now commenced the operations of its political existence. It did not supersede the Courts of Assistants, which were to be continued monthly. By having it formed and carried into effect, the people made an advance in power, which appears to have been their right, and which they perseveringly sought.

June 13th, a Thanksgiving, which was appointed the 5th, was observed for the success of Gustavus, the Swedish king, and the Protestant forces in Germany, against the Emperor; and for the safe arrival of vessels, which were anxiously expected over.

July 3d, the elders and brethren of the church here, and of the church at Plymouth, were requested by the church of Boston to give their advice on the following questions:—Can a person be properly a Magistrate and a ruling Elder at the same time? If he may not, then which of the offices should he prefer? Should there be more than one Pastor in the same Congregation? To the first inquiry they returned a decided answer in the negative. In reference to the other two, they did not feel prepared to give a definite reply.

The Court of Assistants granted Mr. Endicott, of their number, 300 acres of land. The Indian name of its location, properly translated, was Birch Wood. It was bounded by Cow House River on the S.; Duck River on the N.; and Wooleston River on the E. The names of the two first Rivers were derived from the Indians. They also granted Mr. Skelton 213 acres of land in several lots. Twelve of them were on the Neck.

August 7th, they enacted, that every company should maintain its captain. Previously such an expense was borne by the colony. This vote was altered in a few years to its first form.

The Summer, having been wet and cold, cut off the hopes of a corn harvest. Such a dispensation of Providence was dreadful to the colonists, whose resources for food were precarious, and who had suffered much from scarcity.

In the course of the Autumn, fears prevailed here and elsewhere of a conspiracy by the Indians. The Narragansets and others appeared to be preparing for an attack on the English. One of their Powaws gave information, that they intended to cut off the Colonists. Indications of their unfriendliness were perceived in their being querulous about their lands, and not visiting the houses of the planters, as they had been accustomed. A false alarm was given at Boston, that they were coming to attack its inhabitants. This alarm reached Salem and other places, and was answered by a telegraphic mode of conveying intelligence. In such a state, watchmen of every town were at their stations both day and night.

October 3d, the Court of Assistants confirm the former instructions of the Company, by ordering that none within Massachusetts should take tobacco publicly, on the penalty of 1d. for every such offence.

November 21st, this and other Plantations were interested in the enterprise of a bark and 20 men, sent by the Governor against a company of pirates, headed by Dixey Bull, at the Eastward. These national outlaws filled the crews of the colonial vessels with dread. Owing to unfavourable weather, the expedition against them failed. But not long afterwards, they were dispersed, and ceased to be feared.

January, news spread here and at large, that the French had purchased and peopled the Scots Plantation, called Port Royal, near Cape Sable. Fearing that, as Papists, they would be troublesome neighbours, the Governor called together, from different parts of the Colony, the Assistants, Elders, Captains, and other principal men, on the 13th, to consult on measures best to be adopted. They advised to the commencement of a fort at Nantasket; the completion of the one begun at Boston; and the settlement of Agawam, as the means of preserving it for tillage and cattle, from the hands of the French.

February 22<sup>d</sup>, intelligence, deeply interesting to this and other plantations, came by the ship William. It stated, that charges against Massachusetts were exhibited to the Privy Council in England, by Sir Fernando Gorges and Capt. Mason, through the influence of Sir Christopher Gardiner, Thomas Morton, and Philip Radclif. These three persons, for their disorderly conduct, had been severely handled by the authorities of this country.—An additional ground of complaint were some letters, forwarded by Capt. Leavit of this town, who died on his passage to England. These letters, containing remarks against the Established Church, were opened and produced unfavourable feelings in the Lords of the Council.—Such an attempt to injure the government here by strong and partial representations to the Privy Council, failed of success for the present. Mr. Emanuel Downing, who had married the Governor's sister, and who became a leading inhabitant of Salem, was a principal agent in turning the measures of the colony's foes to confusion.

March, provisions were exceedingly scarce here and elsewhere. Had it not been for the supplies of fish, the general suffering would have been severe. The price of corn was $2 22 per bushel.

May, information, affecting this and other plantations, was brought, that a renewed attempt had been made by their enemies, to have New-England under one general government, headed by Capt. Neal. To carry this point, they declared to the King and Council, that his subjects here intended to rebel against him, and be entirely independant of the Church and laws of England. In the discussion of this subject it was advanced, that New-England would be of great benefit to the Crown by furnishing such articles, as masts and cordage, in case the Baltic should be closed upon its commerce. But after the foes and friends of the Colony had been heard, decision was made in its favour.

June 19th, a day of Thanksgiving was observed for deliverance from the plots of enemies and the arrival of friends.

July 2d, the Court of Assistants fine a person at Marbleharbour 30s. for intemperance on the Sabbath. They enact that no one shall sell wine or strong water, without leave from the Governor; nor even give the latter to an Indian in the course of trading with him. They also order, that if a corn fence be not sufficient, according to the opinion of a town, and its owner delay more than two days to repair it, after notice, they shall have it mended, and take the expense out of his corn; that any person may kill swine, which get into his corn, and the owner receive them and pay damages.

Sept. 17th, the ministers and elders of the Church here and through the Colony, were called by the Governor and Council, to advise about the location of the Rev. John Cotton, lately arrived to this country. Considering him the most eminent in talents and attainments of any clergyman, who had emigrated hither, they concluded that he should be partly supported out of the Colonial treasury, and located at Boston. Owing, however, to subsequent and very reasonable objections of members among the Council, his immediate congregation maintained him entirely.

Oct. 3d, the Court of Assistants ordered the 16th to be observed as a day of Thanksgiving. Though oppressed with trials, the Colonists did not forget their blessings.—The same Court, having perceived that it was customary to have religious lectures held at Taverns in the forenoon, enacted that none should be held there in future before one o'clock.—Of a £400 rate this town was assessed £28 ; and stood the seventh on the list.

Oct. 10th, the ship James, Capt. Grant, arrived here from Gravesend, in a passage of fifty six days. She brought twenty passengers for this place, thirty for Piscataqua, and thirty for Virginia. She also brought sixty cattle, which were then a very desirable acquisition. A cow was worth from £20 to £26 sterling. An ewe goat was worth from £3 to £4.

Nov. 5th, the Court of Assistants order that Salem, Agawam and Saugus shall pay for three days work, at 1s6d. each for every man, excepting Magistrates and Ministers, towards the fort at Boston. This was done to prevent objections, which Newton had to working on the fort, because the towns, already named, had not performed their part.

As the harvest of corn had been much injured by swine, and a scarcity thereby likely to ensue, they enact that swine should not be fed on corn, if fit “for man’s meat ;” and that every Plantation shall agree how many swine each person may keep summer and winter. This act was unpopular, and exertions were used for its repeal the next year. The price of corn at this time was $1,33.

November, Roger Williams had returned to Salem from Plymouth. While there he perceived some leading members opposed to his particular opinions. One thing by which he gave them offence, was his contending, that the appellation, good-man, should be given only to those, who manifested evidence of piety. But he yielded this point by the advice of Gov. Winthrop, who was on a visit at Plymouth the last year. Still on account of views, as to other subjects, different from those of some in his Congregation, he requested a dismissal, after labouring among them with great acceptance and usefulness. His request was granted. He was followed hither by a part of his people. He again assisted Mr. Skelton. Thus reunited in Gospel labours, they were fearful lest the association of colonial ministers would injure the liberties of the churches, and bring them under Presbyterian order. For this reason they strongly objected to the meeting of clergymen from the Bay and Saugus. It appears that those clergymen met once a fortnight, and discussed questions, deemed most important. They probably gave rise to the various associations of Congregational ministers, which have long existed in New-England. The dread which Messrs. Skelton and Williams entertained of Scottish Presbyterianism, was much lessened among those, who lived to cherish it, in 1638. Then the Presbyterians of Scotland covenanted to maintain the rules of their church against the encroachments of Charles I. Thus they identified themselves with the Puritans, in resisting his abused authority. These two denominations, being so connected, lost sight of many jealousies, which had previously kept them asunder. Union in seasons of peril hides non-essential differences, and chiefly points to impending evil.

Nov. 8th, the Court of Assistants order, that no person shall receive a greater profit on heavy goods than 4d on 1s., excepting cheese, wine, oil and strong water; and on articles, such as linen, not so much profit. They require that traders should have a good conscience in their transactions.

December, great mortality prevailed among the Indians, bordering on Salem, and in other parts of the Colony. James Sagamore and most of his people died at Saugus. They were infected with the small pox.—Such a disease, without its present means of alleviation, spread terror in every direction.

Dec. 27th, the Court of Assistants received a Treatise from Roger Williams, which he had shown to the Governor and Council of Plymouth. He maintained in it, that however the Colonists had received a grant of their soil from the Crown, they could have no just claim to it without the consent of the Aborigines. On this subject he had drawn up a letter, "not without the approbation of some of the chief in New-England, then tender also upon this point before God, directed unto the King himself, humbly acknowledging the evil of that part of the Patent, which respects donation of lands." In the treatise he also charged King James with falsehood, for declaring himself to be the first Christian Prince that had discovered New-England; and him and others with blasphemy for designating Europe by the term, Christendom; and he applied to the reigning King, Charles, three offensive passages from the Apocalypse. The Governor wrote to Mr. Endicott on the subject, and requested him to use his influence with Mr. Williams to retract the opinions of the treatise. Mr. Endicott returned an acceptable answer. Mr. Williams sent an apology to the Governor and Council, stating, that as he had been required to leave a copy with the Governor of Plymouth, he thought proper to have it known to the authorities of Massachusetts; and that he was far from intending to create division by its contents. He also expressed himself as willing, that the book or treatise, he had forwarded to them, might be burnt partially or entirely, just as they should choose.

Jan. 24th, the Governor and Council, in connexion with the Rev. Messrs. Cotton and Wilson, reconsidered the offensive parts of Mr Williams' treatise. They agreed that its contents were not so objectionable, as they at first suspected. They came to the conclusion.

that if he would take the oath of allegiance to the King, he should be excused for what had passed.

Feb. 22d, Mr. Allerton employed six fishing boats at Marbleharbour. At the first of the month, he had met with a heavy loss in having the most of his goods consumed, with a house of Mr. Cradock, which he and his men occupied.

March 4th, the Court of Assistants order that no person, without a special license from them, shall purchase land of the Indians.—Mr. Endicott, like other Assistants in their respective towns, was required by the Court to use his influence in Salem for obtaining aid to build a sea and moveable fort, twenty-one feet wide and forty feet long.

On the 7th, at a lecture in Boston, a question was discussed as to the ladies' wearing veils. Mr. Cotton, though while in England of an opposite opinion on this subject, maintained that in countries where veils were a sign of submission, they might be properly disused. But Mr. Endicott took different ground, and endeavoured to retain it by the general argument of St. Paul. Mr. Williams sided with his parishioner. Through his and others influence, veils were worn here abundantly. At the time they were most fashionable, Mr. Cotton came to preach for Mr. Skelton. His subject was upon wearing veils. He endeavoured to prove, that this was a custom not to be tolerated. The consequence was, that the ladies became converts to his faith in this particualar, and, for a long time, left off an article of dress, which indicated too great a degree of submission to "the lords of creation."

April 1st, the Court of Assistants ordered every person above twenty years, who had resided, or should be resident in Massachusetts six months, to take an oath of fidelity. They required the constables and four more respectable inhabitants in each town, with the advice of one or more of the next Assistants, to make an estimate of the houses and lands, and have a record of it, as reference for future inheritances. They sent notice to the General Court, that expediency required Deputies to be chosen from each town, in order to form such a body at its next meeting.

May 14th, the General Court for elections assembled at Newton. Twenty-four of the Colonists appeared as Representatives of the Freemen. They passed several interesting resolutions. They defined the powers of the Legislature. They enacted a law, that no trial for life should take place without a jury. After choosing the Magistrates, they voted that there should be four General Courts in a year; that the whole body of Freemen should be present at the Court of Elections for Magistrates; and that their deputies should act fully for them in the three other General Courts. Thus the principal Legislature of Massachusetts underwent an important alteration. The addition of Representatives to the Assistants and Governor was an imitation of the House of Commons in England; and was in accordance with the spirit of liberty then increasing there. Such a change was produced by the freemen, because they believed, that the preceding government was still clothed with too much power. The House of Representatives in this Colony, was the second in America. One had been already formed in Virginia. The Representatives chosen by this town, were Messrs. Holgrave, Roger Conant, and Francis Weston. The General Court ordered the oath of freemen to be so far altered as to accord with the following form. "I, A. B., being by God's providence an inhabitant and freeman within the jurisdiction of this Commonwealth, do freely acknowledge myself to be subject to the government thereof, and therefore do here swear by the great and dreadful name of the everlasting God, that I will be true and faithful to the same, and will accordingly yield assistance and support thereunto with my person and estate as in equity I am bound, and I will also truly endeavour to maintain and preserve all the liberties and privileges thereof, submitting myself to the wholesome laws and orders, made and established by the same. And further, that I will not plot nor practise any evil against it, nor consent to any that shall so do, but will truly discover and reveal the same to lawful authority now here established, for the speedy preventing thereof. Moreover I do solemnly bind myself in the sight of God, that when I shall be called to give my voice, touching any such matter of this state, wherein freemen are to deal, I will give my vote and suffrage, as I shall judge in mine own conscience may best conduce and tend to the public weal of the body, without respect of persons or favour of any man, so help me God in the Lord Jesus Christ." This was substantially the same as another, which had been previously administered. It is given as a specimen of ancient custom among the freemen of this and other Plantations.

The Rev Thomas Parker, settled at Agawam, with over a hundred persons, and was joined by some from Salem.

July, Mr. Humphrey and wife, daughter to the Earl of Lincoln, arrived here with ammunition for the Colony. He brought intelligence, that many respectable people intended to follow them, though the Bishop and others of the Royal Council threw obstructions in the way. He had charge of sixteen heifers, as a donation from Richard Andrews of London, to the ministers of this and other towns of the Colony. If any of them remained, after each minister had one, they were to be conferred on the poor. One half of the increase from those heifers, taken by the clergymen, was to be reserved for succeeding clergymen. Mr. Humphrey took up his abode at Saugus, now Lynn. Here he resided till he had lost most of his property, and then he returned to England. Mr. Andrews, whose benevolence to the Colonists was shown by the donation, just mentioned, continued to manifest a similar disposition. Ten years afterwards, he is named on the records of this town, as having then transported supplies for its poor. His steady benefactions should keep his name from oblivion, and present him as an object of gratitude when the mind turns back on the scenes of our pilgrim fathers.

On the 9th, news, sad to this and every town of Massachusetts, was reported. It was that the King's Council demanded the Colony's Charter. Mr. Cradock, a principal member of the Company, wrote to the Governor and Assistants on the subject. They returned this worthy gentleman an answer, that they could not surrender the Charter themselves, and must lay the matter before the General Court in September.

Aug. 2d, the inhabitants of this place were called to mourn the loss of Mr. Skelton. He had been debilitated a considerable time. No records of his age are known. He was supposed to be older than his colleague, Mr. Higginson. Little was said of him by his cotemporaries, who wrote on the events of our Colonial history. Unhappily for his being mentioned with due attention, he differed about clerical associations and other subjects, from most of the principal persons in Massachusetts. A chief cause for which they were disaffected with him was his approbation of Mr. Williams. He was also the tried friend, and had been the spiritual father of Mr. Endicott, whose opinions on some points, were becoming very unpopular. Thus thinking and connected, his biography has not been handed down with the particularity of those, who were equally meritorious, but no more so. It is compliance with the wishes of the great, and success in combatting for opinions, which often times, independently of real desert, confer upon recorded reputation its best proportions and fairest colours. Of Mr. Skelton's worthiness no just doubt can be entertained. The confidence which the Company in London placed in him at first, was never forfeited. They appointed him a member of the first Council here, and designated him as one of two to take charge of the Colony, in case of Mr. Endicott's decease. As one of the executive authorities he took a deep interest in the Colonial welfare. While sustaining this office, he was called to act with reference to the case of Messrs. Browns. He with others, approved of their departure, as the most effectual means of restoring peace to this Plantation. They, on their return home represented him, as maintaining speculations against the Church and Crown, and thus doing what was unbecoming his sacred profession. Though their account produced a letter of caution from the Company to him and his colleague; yet his motives and precepts, which were so offensive to Messrs. Browns, would appear to persons, with different views of ecclesiastical and civil order, not only harmless, but quite justifiable. Frequently a principle or measure, entirely correct in itself, is viewed by the mind, under mistaken impressions, as exceedingly incorrect. As a Pastor, Mr. Skelton was faithful to watch for the safety of his flock, and guide them in the way of duty and happiness. He was ready to reprove deviations from rectitude, and support the principles of truth. He exercised fortitude under severe trials, and stood firmly in his lot. In his manners he was reserved. His talents and attainments were respectable. Johnson says of him:—"A man of gracious speech, full of faith, and furnished by the Lord with gifts from above." In his various relations, he appeared to have acted with a wise reference to the decisions of Heaven. He toiled and expended his life, not for earthly distinction, possessions and happiness, but for the approbation and blessing of God. He was taken from the troubles already gathering over his people, to the world "where the weary are at rest." As one who ably, benevolently, and faithfully aided to lay the foundation of our present enjoyments, we should ever cherish the recollection of his services with respect and gratitude. We should not measure our esteem of him, by the scantiness of former eulogy, but by his real deeds and virtues. He left affectionate children and many friends to regret his decease.

Aug. 20th, a general Thanksgiving was appointed for the arrival of ships and emigrants, and for the more prosperous appearance of the times. Provisions were considerably plenty. Corn had fallen to 75 cents per bushel.

Sept. 3d, at a General Court at Newton, business was transacted, affecting this and other towns. A prominent question before that body, in which the Assistant and Deputies from Salem took a part, was concerning the removal of the people in Newton to Connecticut, under the Rev. Mr. Hooker. There was a majority of the Representatives for, and a majority of the Assistants against their departure. The reasons for removal were, that there was not sufficient room for cattle, and that the towns in Massachusetts were too far apart; that Connecticut was more productive and convenient, and should be occupied to prevent its settlement by others, especially the Dutch on Hudson River; and that the planters of Newton were strongly inclined to remove. Reasons against removal were, that the oath, which Newton people had taken to seek the good of the Colony, would not allow, and that state policy forbid such an indulgence; that they might be accommodated in Massachusetts, and that the departure of their Church would be a judgment. The Deputies declined to comply with the wish of the Assistants, and great difficulty in the Colony was dreaded. In order for the peaceable adjustment of this question, they both concluded not to proceed any further for the present.

That their minds might look at it with deliberation and principle, a Fast was ordered to be observed on the 18th.

On the 24th, the General Court assembled, and then the Deputies surrendered the negative voice to the Assistants. By this means the inhabitants of Newton did not receive permission to become located in Connecticut. A considerable number of them, however, carried their wishes into effect short of two years afterwards, and, with their Pastor, settled Hartford.

At the Court on the 3d, other subjects were considered. They granted power for the impressment of men to work on the forts. Capt. Trask, of this town, was appointed on a committee of seven, to superintend the fortifications. The public military stores were to be distributed equally among the Plantations. Peter Palfray of this place was chosen on a committee of six to run the boundaries of all towns not yet described. The Court enacted that no keeper of an ordinary should receive more than 6d a meal, and 1d for an ale quart of beer out of meal times, on penalty of 10s. ; nor suffer any tobacco to be taken in his house. They forbid any person to use tobacco publicly on fine of 2s6d. or privately in his own dwelling, or dwelling of another before strangers ; and they also forbid two or more to use it in any place together. They grant Salem the privilege of keeping a weekly market on Wednesday. They ordered that this place should have in addition to its ordnance, and as a proportion of its military stores, "two old Sakers," on condition that it provided carriages for them. Of a £600 rate for fortifications and other objects, the people here were assessed £45. They and Charlestown stood the same, and were the eighth on the list. The following is a record against prevailing fashions :—“The Court taking into consideration the great superfluous and unnecessary expenses, occasioned by reason of some new and immodest fashions, as also the ordinary wearing of silver, gold and silk laces, girdles, hat-bands, &c. hath therefore ordered, that no person, either man or woman, shall hereafter make or buy any apparel, either woollen, silk or linen with any lace on it, silver, gold, silk or thread, under the penalty of forfeiture of such clothes, &c. Also, that no person, either man or woman, shall make or buy any slashed clothes, other than one slash in each sleeve and another in the back. Also, all cut works, embroidered or needle worked caps, bands, and rayles are forbidden hereafter to be made and worn, under the aforesaid penalty. Also, all gold or silver girdles, hat-bands, belts, ruffs, beaver hats, are prohibited to be bought and worn hereafter, under the aforesaid penalty. Moreover it is agreed, if any man shall judge the wearing of any of the forenamed particulars, new fashions or long hair, or any thing of the like nature to be uncomely or prejudicial to the common good, and the party offending reform not the same upon notice given him, that then the next Assistant, being informed thereof, shall have power to bind the party so offending, to answer to it at the next Court, if the case so require. Provided and it is the meaning of the Court, that men and women shall have liberty to wear out such apparel as they are now provided of (except the immoderate great sleeves, slash apparel, immoderate great rayles, long wings, &c. This order to take place a fortnight after the publishing thereof."

Sept. 13th, intelligence deeply affecting the interest of people here and through the Colony, arrived by the ship Griffin. It was, that a commission was granted "to the two Arch-Bishops and ten others of the Council," conferring on them the authority to regulate the Plantations of New-England; to establish and maintain the Episcopal Church in this country; to recall its charters; remove its Governors; make its laws; hear and decide its legal cases; and appoint its punishments, even death itself. The intelligence further related, that a ship was coming secretly with a new Governor for Massachusetts, and with orders calculated to prostrate its civil and ecclesiastical rights. Such news awakened general anxiety, and hastened forward the fortifications, and the assessment of an additional rate of £500 for defence.

Oct. 20th, a sad occurrence took place in reference to some persons of this Plantation. Six of them, being on a fowling party in a canoe, were upset near Kettle Island, and five of them were drowned.

Nov. 7th, the red cross being cut out of the ensign, belonging to the company here, such an act was complained of to the Court of Assistants at Newton. They ordered "that Ensign Danford shall be sent by warrant with command to bring his colours with him to the next Court, as also any other, that hath defaced the said colours."

27th, the Court of Assistants met respecting the defaced colour. They were apprehensive that a deed of this sort would be construed as rebellion in England. They concluded to write Mr. Downing, a friend of the Colony, that he might excuse them from approving such an act. They however expressed themselves with caution. They did not feel prepared to assert, that it was right for the cross to be continued in their national flag. Still they disapproved the manner, in which it had been treated in this town. They promised that those concerned in the deed, should be called to an account. They also considered reports, that Mr. Williams had revived his preaching against the King, Church of England, and the tenure, by which the Colonists held their lands. They charged him with having broken his promise not to declare such things. On this account, they cited him to appear at their next session.

The Congregation here having worshipped from 1629 to the present year in an unfinished building of one story, agreed with Mr. Norton to build a suitable meeting house, which should not exceed the amount of £100.

January. Mr. Alberton's pinnace went to obtain two men and a quantity of goods, which had been taken by the French, who had come from Machet. But their commander, La Tour, replied to the application for the release of the men and goods, that they were lawfully captured, as being on French territory without a proper license: and that all persons from New-England would be treated in a similar manner, if presuming to trade east from Penaquid.

January 18th. the ministers of this and other towns, except Mr. Ward of Ipswich, meet at Boston, and give their opinion on the following questions. What should be done, if the King sent a General Governor for New-England? Whether it was right to retain the cross on their colours? As to the first inquiry, they unanimously agreed, that if such a Governor should come, the Colonists ought to resist his authority and maintain their rights. As to the second, they were divided in opinion.

The first records of this town refer to a division of lands. They read, that it was ordered by the inhabitants, that the least family shall have ten acres: but greater families more, according to their number.—The records in general of that day began the custom of designating the months numerically instead of nominally. This custom lasted many years, and is well known to be practised by the Friends. Still records of that period retained the previous method of reckoning their years, as commencing the 25th of March. It is supposed, that such an alteration was owing to the following reasons:—Through the partiality of Charles I. and Bishop Laud, some forms of the Catholic Church had been imposed on the English Church. Besides, Pope Gregory had long before had avowed to have his improvement of the Julian style of reckoning time, admired by Protestant nations. Such an improved style allowed the months to be called by their proper names, as invented by Romulus and amended by Numa. In order, then, not to denote the months as the Catholics did, whose ecclesiastical corruptions had become more than commonly offensive to the Colonists, because an increased occasion of their being oppressed by the Crown, it is thought that our fathers marked the months by figures and not letters.

February, the town agreed that the Neck should no longer be for the use of goats; but should be permitted to grow six days so that the cattle might feed on it during the Sabbath.

March 4th, the General Court assembled. Mr. Endicott continued one of its Assistants. John Holgrave, Peter Palfrey, and Charles Gott, were Deputies to it from this town. It fined Salem £10, for not seasonably paying their proportion towards finishing the Castle. Saugus was similarly fined. The fines however were remitted. The demur of these two places was probably occasioned by their supposing, that to take care of their own defences was sufficient. The Court ordered that no person should buy or sell tobacco on penalty of 10s. per lb. after September. That this and other parts of the Colony might be notified as to an approach of enemies, it required a beacon to be placed on Sentry Hill in Boston. It enacted, that brass farthings should be uncurrent, and that musket bullets should pass in place of them. It ordered, that all persons who had resided in any plantation for six months, and were above 16 years, should take an oath of fidelity. The occasion of this measure was the report, that some, influenced by the decision of the royal council, were endeavouring to erect Episcopacy and prostrate Congregationalism. The oath, however, was so opposed by Roger Williams, that he dissuaded various persons from taking it, and it therefore failed to be carried into effect. The reason of his objection to it, was, that no oath was proper to be taken by impenitent people. Of a £300 levy, the Court assessed Salem with the same amount as last year. It ordered, that merchantable beaver at 10s. and corn at 5s. sterl. should be taken for rates. It appointed John Holgrave on a committee of nine to trade with friendly vessels, purchase their cargoes for the country, and dispose of them at 5 per cent. profit. It allowed that the House of Deputies should judge, as to the election of their members, and regulate the business of their own body. It ordered a committee to be raised for considering the laws already enacted, and what more were needed, and report immediately. It requested the brethren and elders of every church, to devise a uniform and scriptural mode of ecclesiastical discipline, and consider how far the magistrates are bound to interfere so as to preserve peace and uniformity in the church. It appointed two grand juries. One of them was to inform the Court of March, and the other, the Court of September, in respect to offences, which should come to their knowledge. It called Mr. Endicott to answer for defacing the cross on the colours of this place. The members of it discussed the charge against him. They differed in opinion. Some thought that he had acted right and others wrong. The question was put over till the next session. So unsettled was the public mind on this subject, the military commissioners ordered that all ensigns, whether with crosses or not, should be laid aside for the present. Of eleven commissioners, appointed by the preceding Court to superintend military affairs, Mr. Endicott was one. The same Court for some objections to Mr. Allerton, an enterprising inhabitant of Marblehead, requested him to move thence.

15th, two from this and other churches in the Colony met at Saugus, and continued there three days, to settle difficulties, which had risen between the pastor, Mr. Batchelor and some of the brethren. These supposed, that, through his irregular proceeding, they were not a properly organized church, and therefore, they refused to commune with the rest. The council, thus assembled, appointed another meeting in order to hear the disaffected, and a part of them went to attend a lecture at Boston. While there they received information from the Pastor at Saugus, that he was about to proceed against those brethren by way of excommunication, and, on this account, he requested them not to return home. They accordingly came back, and after hearing both parties, they concluded, that though they were not constituted in due order, still they were a true church by having been publicly considered so, and acted under such a name.

April 30th, Mr. Williams was cited before the Governor and Assistants, to answer a complaint of his preaching against the administration of an oath to the impenitent. The reason assigned by him for such a doctrine, was, that it might be a means of preventing the profanation of God's name. He was heard on this subject before all the clergymen.

May 6th, the General Court granted, that there should be a Plantation at Marblehead. They required Salem to grant it land as its inhabitants enlarged. They forbid any to take up an abode there without their leave or of two magistrates. They order that the land, between the "Clifte and Forest River," near Marblehead, should be improved by John Humphrey, Esq. and that if he wanted it, they should sell it to him, provided it did not belong to Salem.

They appointed Mr. Holgrave to impress men to unload the salt, which should arrive at different ports.

They gave leave to all the Plantations to transport corn out of the Colony.

They ordered that no pigs of the time, between the last of July and the first of January, should be kept longer than a month, and that no swine should be fed, for the same period, on corn, except refuse. or brought from other parts. They required this and every town to furnish themselves with peck and bushel measures, and weights, and a "meate" yard, made by the standards at Boston, sealed by James Pen, the Marshal, before their session in September, on penalty of 40s. for every defect. They made a levy of £200. Salem's portion was £16. Charlestown and Saugus were assessed the same. These three towns held the sixth grade.

At the General Court of the preceding date, Mr. Endicott's conduct about cutting out the cross, was formally considered. A committee reported, that he had acted without due authority; that, if believing the cross to be a mark of idolatry, he should have taken measures for its being disused in other towns as well as in his own; that he had implicitly charged other magistrates with permitting idolatry, and had exposed the Colony to the malevolence of England. In view of these charges, they recommended that he should be admonished and left out of office one year. At the same time, they stated their belief to be, that he acted with no evil intentions. In consequence of this, he lost his election as an Assistant. Had most of the principal men, and many others in Massachusetts, been judged according to their opinion, as to retaining the cross in their ensigns, they would have fared no better than Mr. Endicott. They thought as he did on that subject. The difference between them and him was, that he manifested his opinion in deed, and they retained theirs in secret. His openness of action was reported in England, and was construed as rebellion. The General Court were constrained to notice what he had done, and bring in some sentence against him, as an ostensible sign of their loyalty. He was made the victim to pacify the displeasure of His Majesty's Council, for what a large number of the Colonists heartily approved. Had it not been for dread of the Crown,

Mr. Endicott's conduct would have been publicly commended. The spirit of opposition to Popery, in all its signs as well as services, had then spread not only in Massachusetts but also in England. During the discussion of the matter, which turned so hardly on Mr. Endicott, a proposal was made, that the colours should bear a red and white rose, noted indications of the union, which had long before taken place between the Houses of York and Lancaster; and that they should serve instead of the cross. The proposal, however, as circumstances show, was not adopted.

The Deputies from this and other plantations considered, that it was hazardous to have important cases decided at the discretion of the magistrates, who were under the necessity of doing this, because no written code of laws was yet published. They, therefore, proposed that persons should be selected for forming a body of laws, similar to those of the Magna Charta. They, also, proposed that, when such a collection of laws was presented, they should be binding so far as the Elders and General Court should recommend.

On the 21st, a Dutch ship, with 140 tons of salt, and 10,000 lbs. of tobacco, arrived here from Christopher Island, and another, the 7th of June, with passengers.

June 16th, intelligence, deeply affecting the Colonists here and elsewhere, spread through their Plantations. It was, that their adversaries had so far prevailed in London, as to have New-England extend from St. Croix, or Schoodic River to Maryland; be divided into twelve provinces; and superintended by a general Governor and Council. It stated, that a ship had been prepared to transport the Governor and Council hither; but that by an extraordinary event, she was rendered altogether unfit for sea.

July 3th, Mr. Williams was again summoned before the General Court to answer certain charges. Besides those, already brought against him, there were such as his maintaining it to be wrong to pray with impenitent persons, though the nearest relations; and to render thanks after sacrament or common meals. The church here were also called to an account for receiving him as their teacher, when other churches were about to deal with him for his errors. These subjects were much debated. The opinions of Mr. Williams were disallowed as both erroneous and detrimental. The conduct of the church in receiving him, was construed as a contempt of the Colonial authorities. He and his people were notified either to make satisfaction, or look for punishment by the next General Court. He was also informed, that unless he refrained from delivering and retaining his offensive opinions, he would be removed out of Massachusetts. The inhabitants here petitioned the same Court for land at Marblehead Neck, which they claimed as theirs. They were not heard, because they had neglected to consult the Government about the reception of Mr. Williams.

July 12th, the people here being much excited, because their late petition to the General Court was rejected, took up the matter according to ecclesiastical usage. Their church wrote to other churches, exhorting them to admonish the magistrates and deputies, who belonged to them, and who had refused to comply with the request of Salem for its own land.

Aug. 15th, a tremendous storm was experienced. It began early in the morning and extended to the East and South of Massachusetts. It was accompanied with an abundance of rain. It injured houses, beat down corn, destroyed many trees, and drove vessels from their anchorage. It raised the tide to an alarming height. The wind was from N. E. and N. W. During this tempest a bark of Mr. Allerton, having twenty three persons on board, was cast away at Cape Ann. They were all lost, except two, Mr. Thatcher and wife.

They were bound from Newbury to Marblehead. The object of their voyage was to settle and form a church there under the Rev. John Avery. This person was loth to quit his residence at Newbury ; but influenced by the advice of his brethren in the ministry and of the magistrates, he consented to leave. The reason these assigned for his removal was, that Marbleharbour was inhabited by people, engaged in the fishery, who were without any convenient privileges of worship, and, through such a deficiency, were becoming dissolute in their morals. Influenced by such motives, Mr. Avery denied his own wishes, commenced his passage, and perished with all his family, consisting of a wife and eight children. Mr. Thatcher and wife got to an Island under circumstances of remarkable preservation. The place where these two were saved, was named Thatcher's Woe, and the rock where the vessel was lost, was called Avery's Fall. These names continue now, and are familiar to our seamen.

16th, Mr. Williams, unable from sickness to address his church verbally, wrote them a letter to the purport, that he was constrained to refuse communication with churches in the Bay, and that he must do the same as to them, unless they united with him in such a refusal. This church, however, did not deem agreement with him on this subject to be either proper or expedient. No doubt Mr. Williams' proposal to them arose from the fact, that the churches of the Bay, to which they had forwarded letters, as to dealing with members of the General Court for refusing the petition of Salem, had declined to take on themselves so responsible a service.

Sept. 2d, the General Court sits at Newton, as it had twice before. Among its Deputies were John Woodbury and William Trask, from Salem. Mr. Eudicott was called to answer for the part he had taken in the letters missive from the church, respecting the discipline of those, who denied the petition for land at Marblehead. He contended that the step, which had been taken for such a purpose, was regular and just. His defence displeased the Court. They "voted by general erection of hands, that Mr. Endicott be committed for his contempt in protesting against the proceedings of the Court." When, however, he made some acknowledgement, they dismissed him. They were no less disaffected with the deputies from this town. They even forbid them to take their seats as members of their body. They ordered them to return to their freemen and bring satisfaction for the letters sent out by their church, "wherein they have exceedingly reproached and vilified the magistrates and deputies of the General Court, or else the arguments of those that will defend the same with subscription of their names." They also voted, that should a majority of the Salem freemen disclaim those letters, they should continue to send deputies to their assembly. They passed the following resolution:—"Whereas Mr. Roger Williams, one of the elders of the church in Salem, hath broached and divulged divers new and dangerous opinions against the authority of the magistrates: as also writ letters of defamation, both of the magistrates and churches here, and that before any conviction, and yet maintaineth the same without any retraction: it is therefore ordered, that the said Mr. Williams shall depart out of this jurisdiction within six weeks now next ensuing: which, if he neglect to perform, it shall be lawful for the Governor and two of the Magistrates to send him to some place out of this jurisdiction, not to return any more without license from the Court." They gave the Ruling Elder the following notice:—"Mr. Samuel Sharp is enjoined to appear at the next particular Court, to answer for the letter that came from the church at Salem, as also to bring the names of those that will justify the same, or else to acknowledge his offence under his own hand for his own particular." Surely the inhabitants of Salem had reason to fear, lest the vial of legislative wrath would be poured on them to the ruin of their most respectable townsmen. Their affliction was great. If they did not sufficiently consult the General Court about the reception of Mr. Williams, still the Court should have treated their petition with greater respect and magnanimity.

Though the Court refused to let Capt. Trask appear as a deputy from this place, yet they commissioned him to pursue a company of servants who had stolen a boat and other things, and fled to the Eastward. He surprised them at Piscataqua and brought them to Boston. They were fined and severely whipped for their conduct.

The Court required this and other towns to send in money or workmen, for three days labour for each man, who had resided in the country a year, with the exception of magistrates and schoolmasters, to fortify the Castle in Boston harbour.

The Court repealed the acts, relative to wages and prices of goods. They ordered a levy of £200. The portion of Salem was £16. This was the sixth highest of thirteen towns. The Court required that the deputies should be elected by paper votes as the Governor had been. They order that none but freemen shall be legal voters in questions of authority.

The Rev. Mr. Burdet was made a freeman. He had served in the ministry at Dover, in England. But disapproving the Episcopal ceremonies, as then corrupted, he came over to America. He was accounted an able scholar and a popular preacher. He became a member of the church here, and preached for them more than a year. Not falling in with their mode of discipline, he left for Piscataqua. Some over two years after his departure, Gov. Winthrop wrote to him and others, as being too favourable to the persons who had been excluded from Massachusetts. He returned an answer, which appears not to have been sufficiently respectful.

Oct. 6th, the Rev. Hugh Peters arrives in this country with Rev. Messrs. Wilson, Shepard, Jones, and other clergymen. He soon commenced his Gospel labours both at Boston and Salem. His first sermon here was preached at Enon, now Wenham, but then a part of Salem. The place of his preaching was on a hill, which overlooked a spacious pond. His text was strikingly suited to the localities of the situation. It was—“At Enon, near to Salim because there was much water there.”

October, the General Court, accompanied by the ministers of the Colony, called again on Mr. Williams to answer for the letters sent to the churches, and for the one, sent to his own church. He continued to approve the contents of them. The Court offered him a month to prepare for his defence; but he chose to speak on the spot. They appointed Mr. Hooker, his former friend in England, to discuss the opinions, which he held and maintained. After considerable debate on them, Mr. Williams was unwilling to retract any of his positions. The next morning he was sentenced to be banished from Massachusetts in six weeks. All the ministers, but one, concurred in this decision. At the time of this afflictive sentence, Mr. Williams was dealt with by his own church because he declined communion with them, since they were unwilling to follow his advice, in respect to withdrawing fellowship from churches of the Bay. His church, perceiving that he had gone further than they could, disapproved his opinions, and regretted the part which they had acted in sending out letters, requesting the magistrates and deputies to be disciplined.

Nov. 26th, Mr. Peters exerts his influence both in Old and New-England, to raise a fund for increasing the encouragement of the Fishery, by collecting stores for this business, at a fair price. He perceived that such an employment had been much lessened by the exorbitant sums, which had been demanded for its supplies. About the same date, a small vessel bound hither with goods of £100 worth, was lost, and afterwards discovered in the hands of Indians at Nawset, now a part of Eastham. These Indians belonged to the tribe, from which a Capt. Hunt, many years before had kidnapped twenty, and sold them for slaves in Spain. His cruelty had greatly incensed them against the English. But finding that their neighbours, though of the same complexion with him, was of a kinder disposition, they were careful to preserve the vessel and cargo, and ready to give them up.

January, the Governor and Assistants met on the case of Mr. Williams. They had allowed him till the Spring, to get ready for leaving their jurisdiction. They had thus lengthened the period of his continuance among them, on condition that he should abstain from uttering the sentiments, which they had condemned. But being informed, that he did deliver them to people in his own house, and that he had persuaded twenty persons to form a settlement with him about Narraganset Bay; and moreover, being apprehensive, that, if residing in the country, he would exert an influence against Massachusetts, they determined to have him transported in a ship for England. Thus decided, they immediately sent a warrant to apprehend him. His friends waited on them, stating that for him to obey their summons would endanger his life. But resolved to prevent his purpose of remaining in New-England, they commissioned Capt. Underhill to go with a pinnace, take and put him on board of a vessel at Nantasket. When the Captain came to Mr. Williams' house, he found, that he and four friends had already been gone three days.

Thus was Mr. Williams compelled to forsake the residence, where he had fondly hoped to live and die in peace. He had expected, that, when separated from those in England, whose views were essentially opposed to his, and settled with the Colonists, whose opinions mainly agreed with his, there would be little to disturb individual and general harmony. But he found himself sadly disappointed. He perceived, as has often been the fact, that zealous contention is not a sure token of disagreement in the great truths of the Gospel. He was indeed constrained to think—"Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." It must be acknowledged, that, in reference to him, as well as his opponents, there was a mutual engagedness in carrying their points, which seems to have been untempered with due forbearance. That he was too strenuous in supporting his opinions at the expense of breaking communion with others, who were indisposed to go the whole way with him, few will deny. On the other hand, that his opponents treated him with too great severity, most will acknowledge. True, the circumstance, that they, so far as composing the Rulers of Massachusetts, felt themselves obligated by their oath to prevent any serious infringement on the boundaries of Church and State, as they had described them, should be a weight in mitigating their conduct towards him. And, also, his benevolence towards them, while firmly maintaining his persuasions against their orders, should palliate his declining to comply with their authority.—Both they and he tried an experiment, as to enforcing their sentiments, which time and necessity taught them was better to exist in imagination than practice. He came off from the contest with greater reproach than he would, had not numbers and power been on their side.

As to the course of his flight, he received private advice from Mr. Winthrop, then succeeded, as Governor, by Mr. John Haynes. He was grateful for such kindness. It was like a star in his cloudy prospect. He complied with its suggestion. He settled first at Seekhonk, now Rehoboth. For fourteen weeks he was greatly distressed, as appears from his remark, "in a bitter winter season, not knowing what bread or bed did mean."—He was soon informed by Mr. Winslow, Governor of Plymouth, that Seekhonk was within his jurisdiction, and that it would be well for him to remove. A special reason, assigned by Mr. Winslow for such a suggestion, was, that if he should countenance his residence within the Plymouth lines, it would wear the appearance of endeavouring to nullify the sentence of Massachusetts against him. Mr. Williams accordingly sought another settlement. He went to Mooshausick. He says, in reference to this spot, "having in a sense of God's merciful Providence unto me in my distress, called the place Providence, I desired it might be for a shelter for persons distressed for conscience."

The territory occupied by him, was granted to him by Miantonomo and Canonicus, two Narraganset chiefs, who remained his constant friends. He came into possession of it so as to comply with the opinion, for which he had contended while in Massachusetts. But even with a fair claim to it, he was not free from dread, lest it should be wrested from him. It was falsely claimed by a Sachem in league with the Plymouth Colony. But Gov. Bradford, to whom the claim was referred, generously declared, that let the land be whose it might, Mr. Williams should be no more disturbed. Mr. Williams, thus befriended, was desirous for a church on his own principles. He and his first followers soon formed themselves into such a state. They were shortly joined by others, who were disaffected with the Massachusetts authorities. His church appears to have been Congregational at first; but afterwards most of its members became Baptists. He and his associates required, as a regulation of their civil polity, that all emigrants to their territory, should make a solemn promise to obey the laws for public good. He was careful to be consistent with his previous declarations, by not demanding of them any oath.

However banished from the Colonies, Mr. Williams suffered no private griefs to withhold him from aiming at their general welfare. In the Pequod war of 1637, he was exceedingly serviceable to their cause. At the earnest request of Massachusetts, he went among the bordering Indians, and succeeded in preventing an alliance, which the Pequods were endeavouring to make with the Mohegans and Narragansets, for the extermination of the English. He brought these two tribes to be friends instead of foes to the Colonists. Such an enterprise he accomplished at the cost of arduous journeys, expense and perils. When the Colonial forces, under General Stoughton, marched upon the Pequods, he entertained him and his officers, and used means for the accommodation of his soldiers. For this detachment, he acted as an interpreter, and transferred letters to and from them for promoting their expedition. Conduct of so benevolent and magnanimous a cast, was not entirely lost on a portion of the principal men, who had voted for his exclusion from Massachusetts. It led Gov. Winthrop and some of the Assistants to propose, that the act of banishment against him should be remitted, and that he should receive some special reward for his ready kindness. But so just and grateful an expression of obligation to him, was opposed by a majority, and prevented from being declared by the mouth of public authority. The beneficence of Mr. Williams was open to every pressing call. Mr. Codrington and others, who defended the principles of Mrs. Hutchinson, were desirous to form a settlement in his neighbourhood. He advised them to select Aquiday, now Rhode Island. He obtained this territory for them of his friend, Miantonomo. They removed to it April 26th, 1638. About this time, Mr. Williams was joined by some of his former supporters from Salem. In March 1639, Mr. Williams professed himself to be a Baptist, and was immersed by a member of his church, Mr. Holliman. Having this rite performed for himself, he then performed it for ten others.—But he soon came to the conclusion, that no baptism was valid, because it had not come down purely from the Apostles. Still the most of his Church continued Baptists; and helped to form the first Baptist Society in Providence. Though he thus differed with them, he agreed with them so far as to deny infant baptism, and the propriety of keeping the ~~eighth~~ instead of the seventh day for a Sabbath. His want of fixed views, as to the ordinances of religion, tended to render them disregarded. However thus eccentric for his day, he kept within the circle of general beneficence. He commenced the study of the Indian language, and fitted himself for missionary labours among them. He sought to teach them the improvements of civilization, and particularly the doctrines of the Gospel. For such a labour of love, he visited them once every month. In 1643, he sailed for England to obtain a charter for Providence, Newport and Portsmouth, under one government. In this business he was greatly assisted by his friend, Sir Henry Vane. He obtained a Patent, which provided for freedom in religious opinions and denominations. Such a grant was then considered as a bold experiment, which had never been fairly tested. Mr. Williams arrived with it at Boston the 17th of September 1644. He also brought with him a letter to the Governor and Assistants of Massachusetts, from some of the principal members of Parliament, who were favourable to the Colonies. This letter advised them to treat Mr. Williams with kindness, and remove the obstructions of intercourse between his people and theirs. They, however, declined from coming up fully to such wishes. They gave him permission to pass through their territory to his own, as a deed of special favour. While the other Colonies were brought under the censure of abetting Uncas, chief of the Mohegans, in murdering the Sachem of the Narragansets, Mr. Williams was careful to keep his Colony unimpeached. Though the Narragansets were compelled to make peace with the Mohegans, August 30th, 1645, by the rulers of those Colonies, yet they never forgave their interference, while they remained friendly to Mr. Williams and his people. In 1647, he served as an Assistant. In 1648, he was diligent in preventing the Indians from commencing hostilities upon the English in his vicinity. His influence this year was extended by being Governor of the Colony. In 1651, he embarked again for England, as agent for the Providence Plantations. One object of his business was to obtain the recall of Mr. Coddington's commission. He tarried there till 1654, and then returned. To his grief he perceived, that contentions prevailed among his former supporters. Their reception of him was dishonourable to themselves, and wounding to his feelings. When, however, they perceived his benevolence towards them, and heard his admonitions, they permitted him to regain his former eminence in their affection. He was soon chosen President, or Governor of the Colony. This office he held three years till 1657. During this period, he addressed the General Court at Boston, November 15th, 1655, on the grievances, to which his people were subject. He complained, that while it refused them passports of safety so as to be protected from hostile savages, it granted them to all others, even strangers and Indians. He stated that the most he asked, was equal rights and mutual kindness. In the same year, he began to be tried with the appearance and sentiments of the Friends. Experience now taught him, that there were bounds of order to be observed by all sects, and he was constrained to maintain, that the Friends surpassed them. Such disapprobation brought upon him the severest reproaches of some among them. They charged him with gross inconsistency for having professed free toleration to every denomination, and yet set himself against them.

May 12th, 1656, as President of his Colony, he was invited to visit Boston and settle the complaints, he had justly alleged against Massachusetts. He succeeded to his satisfaction.

April, 1671, he and a Mr. Brown became hostages to King Philip's subjects, to answer for the safety of this Chief, while he held a consultation with Commissioners from Plymouth and Massachusetts. Such readiness to serve his countrymen, who still held him under the bans of banishment, was the means of preventing a war four years longer.

In July, 1672, he drew up fourteen propositions on the opinions of the Friends, and forwarded them to George Fox, then in Rhode Island. But Mr. Fox sailed for Europe and did not answer them. Mr. Williams had met with this person to confer on their difference in religious principles. But as one and another of the assembly with them, supposed themselves moved to sing, or pray, or exhort, he could not proceed with regularity and satisfaction. It was on this account, that he wrote to Mr. Fox. Though he did not have an opportunity to argue with him, yet he met other eminent preachers of the Friends, and held a public dispute with them three days at Newport, and one at Providence.

In 1675, his feelings were tried by the ascendancy of the Friends, who had gotten the government of the Colony into their hands. He saw that they failed to comply with their doctrine of non-resistance in reference to the Indians; and that they resorted to the usual military mode of defence against them. The retorts of inconsistency, which part of them had made on him, now reacted on themselves. He perceived by them, as well as himself, that some speculations were easy in words, but hard in practice. Tradition relates, that when a body of Indians had come against Providence in 1676, Mr. Williams resolved to visit and strive to pacify them. Accordingly he took his staff and went towards them. Some old Indians recognized and solicited him to return, but the young warriors, unacquainted with his person, should injure and kill him. He came back to his townsmen, disappointed that he could not aid them on so trying an occasion.

January 15th, 1680, he was selected as a magistrate to assist the public with his long tried experience. He declined the trust on account of his advanced age. Still he wrote them excellent advice on the absolute need of the government's being punctually supported by its subjects. The opposite to this he perceived to be a prevailing evil of many, who cherished the ruinous persuasion, that true freedom was a surrender of all public taxes, was to do what they would, and not what they ought.

January 16th, 1683, was the last public act of Roger Williams. It was the adjustment of a long controversy about Pawtuxet lands, in which he was concerned as a proprietor. In this, as well as in other instances of the kind, he manifested more regard for the general interest than for his own. Soon after this, he died, in the eighty fourth year of his age, and was buried with demonstrations of public respect.

Thus departed a man, who was ardent in pursuing the object of what he deemed right, whether over plains or mountains, through flowers or thorns. There was a noble fortitude, exhibited in his actions, which showed that he was formed for perilous scenes. His talents and attainments were of a high order. His views of civil policy were uncommonly liberal. A sorrowful lesson had taught him, that it was precious to enjoy equal, social rights, whatever might be the difference of religious opinions. Though charged with not fully complying with that lesson, when interfering with his individual impressions, yet he did practise it more than any other legislator before his day. He found difficulties attending such policy: and that it needed limits, beyond which no subject should pass. He perceived, to his sorrow, that however pleasant the theory might be, which contends, that the support of government, schools, and the Gospel should depend entirely on voluntary contributions, it was most dreadful in experiment, because public virtue was not sufficiently elevated to give it full effect. How far the limits, which he saw to be needed, should exactly go so as to infringe on none of the community, neither he nor any other man, has ever been able to demonstrate in example. Such a desideratum in politics and religion will never be manifested, until the universal renovation of human nature.

The religious opinions of Mr. Williams were connected with singularities, which cost him and others more suffering, than they ought. It is to be feared, that some of them tended more to break down the barriers of order, knowledge, and piety, than build them up. He, however, would have been one of the last persons to have held them, had he at first discerned them to have such a tendency. Though he differed from his friends in moral speculations, he treated them with respect and affection. Though he was undisguised and firm in arguing against their persuasions, yet he discovered towards them no degrading spirit of revenge. True, most of the writers in New-England, were unfriendly to his sentiments, and allowed themselves to speak very diminutively of his merits. But they beheld him through a perspective of dislike for his tenets, and thought him destitute of comeliness. Could they now examine him through a perspective, corrected by the hand of reflection and experience, they would perceive many desirable traits in his character. Had he been able to stand his ground against the prostrating arm of civil authority, they would have handed down his name with far less detraction. In the main doctrines of Revelation, he appears to have been correct, and to have inculcated them for the improvement of multitudes. As a man he was open hearted, beloved and esteemed by many of his acquaintance. His benevolence flowed to all around him. The property he had, was always ready for the relief of public or private misery. He scorned to have his soul bound to the earth with the heavy shackles of covetousness. No man who ever set foot in America, more adorned the Gospel precept of forgiveness to enemies, than Roger Williams. The Colonies, which closed on him the avenues of friendly and uninterrupted intercourse, were frequently spared, through his toils from many a suffering, intended to have been inflicted on them by enraged savages. He often claimed to be put on an equal footing with them and was as often denied. True there were some noble exceptions of persons among them, who would have gladly broken the restrictions upon him, and granted him the restoration of his former privileges. But there were more to prevent the accomplishment of their wish. Still he did not turn away from the Colonies, and assume the attitude of an opponent. He continued to do them good, though they delayed to render him an equitable return. The reason assigned by them for keeping in force the sentence of his exile, was that if they should remove the censure against him, while he maintained his opinions, disorder and impiety would increasingly prevail in their territories. This reason, though deserving weight, was hardly sufficient to atone for their severity towards him. As a ruler, Mr. Williams showed himself kind to his subjects. As a husband, he was remarkably affectionate and faithful.

As a father, he was kind and dignified. As a minister, he perseveringly and laboriously sought the good of souls. He was unusually popular in the pulpit, and successful in leading many to the Saviour. His wife, whose name was Mary, came with him from England. She appears to have been a worthy woman, and a consolation to him in his troubles. He had six children.

His publications are various. They are as follow: In 1643, a Key to the Tongue of the New-England Indians. In 1644, a dialogue between truth and peace, which maintained that interference of magistrates in religion, was a bloody tenet. In 1652, an answer to Mr. Cotton on this subject, whose book was called "the bloody tenet washed in the blood of the Lamb." The answer was "the bloody tenet, yet more bloody by Mr. Cotton's endeavour to wash it white in the blood of the Lamb." To this reply was added a letter to his former friend, Mr. Endicott. In the same year, the "hireling ministry, none of Christ's, or a discourse on the propagation of the Gospel of Christ Jesus; experiments of spiritual life and health, and their preservatives." In 1672, a treatise against the principles of the Friends, and particularly against Fox and Burrows, styled "George Fox digged out of his burrows." This called forth a reply from Mr. Fox, entitled "A New-England fire brand quenched." Besides such works of Mr. Williams, some valuable letters of his have been published.

January, Mr. Peters visited different towns of the Colony, to excite a spirit of enterprise in the Fishery. Thus he continued his exertions for an important branch of business, not only in this country, but also in England.

The Church at Saugus were anxious to obtain Mr. Peters for their pastor. In order to effect their wishes, a majority of them had granted a dismissal to Mr. Batchelor and six or seven of their brethren. They did this on condition, that these should leave the place. But as Mr. Batchelor and his associates formed a new church, their previous difficulties broke out afresh. The Magistrates took up the subject, and prevailed on Mr. Batchelor to agree, that he would move in three months. But however the ground was about to be cleared for Mr. Peters, he preferred a settlement at Salem.

18th, Messrs. Peters and Vane procured a meeting of the principal laymen and elders of the Colony at Boston. The object of it was to suppress a factious spirit, which seemed to prevail among the people. Some cleaved to Mr. Winthrop and others to Mr. Dudley, and thus composed two parties. These gentlemen gave the assembly to understand, that they had settled the differences, which may have subsisted between them. They also requested that none would show any partiality for either of them at the expense of public harmony. At the same time arrangements were made to rectify supposed faults in the past administration of the Colonial affairs.

Feb. 1st, the Military Commissioners, appointed the last General Court, to order colours for the companies here and elsewhere, did so by leaving out the cross, about which there had been much commotion. On the ensigns of Castle Island, they put the King's arms instead of the cross.

11th, the custom here of granting a house lot and ten acres of land, for the encouragement of worthy settlers, was found difficult and revoked.

25th, a general fast was appointed by suggestion of ministers and ruling elders, on account of difficulties in the Church here and at Saugus, and a scarcity of corn.

March, potatoes were so scarce as to sell for 2d. sterl. per lb.

3d, at the session of the General Court, William Trask, Thomas Scruggs, and probably Townsend Bishop, took their seats from Salem. The Court allowed, that Marblehead Neck was the property of this town. That was the land which had been a source of abundant difficulty between the Colonial Authorities and Salem. It was a principal means of hastening Mr. Williams' expulsion. Our fathers must have experienced a satisfaction in having their right acknowledged, and perceiving the triumph of equity over prejudice. Of a £300 rate Salem was assessed £24, and stood the seventh. It was agreed that the Court for electing magistrates, should be held in Boston, and that Salem, Ipswich, Newbury, Saugus, Weymouth and Hingham should have liberty to retain at home, on such an occasion, as many freemen, as the safety of such towns required; and that those so detained, as a guard, should send their votes by proxy. It will be remembered, that the Spring before, all the freemen of the Colony had been required to collect in one place, and give their votes for magistrates. The alteration, made in this manner of election, was proposed, not only on account of general safety, but also for the scarcity of provisions where the freemen assembled, and the great inconvenience of their being accommodated with food. While the Court took steps for securing the towns mentioned, they also required that nearer towns should individually send to their place of session, ten men, completely armed. Precautions of this kind ~~was~~ taken because of apprehended hostilities from the Indians. It was enacted, that no person here or elsewhere, who had purchased provision out of trading vessels, should dispose of it beyond the limits of Massachusetts.

A change in the government, highly interesting to this and other Plantations, was proposed. It was that part of the magistrates should hold their office for life. The proposition was, that, in May next, the General Court "shall elect a certain number of magistrates for the term of their lives, as a standing Council not to be removed but upon conviction of crime, insufficiency, or for some other weighty cause. The Governor for the time being to be always President of this Council, and to have such further power out of Court, as the General Court shall from time to time endue them withal." This subject had been much discussed, and was a prominent topic of the day.—Rev. Mr. Cotton had been much in favour of it, and had highly recommended it in a letter to Lord Say. It appears to have been designed for the purpose of attracting some principal men from England, whose views were more aristocratic, than the Colonial administration had countenanced. Such policy would find no quarter now, where it was once advocated. To gratify individual ambition, at the hazard of impairing public liberty, though in the hope of temporary advantage, was not then, and never can be either safe or equitable. The contemplated experiment, however, was tried. Messrs. Winthrop, Dudley and Vane were chosen as the perpetual council. This branch of government soon became unpopular, and in three years ceased to exist.

At the same Court restraints upon tavern charges were repealed. Each miller here and elsewhere was required to take no more than 1-16th of the corn, which he should grind. Quarterly Courts were instituted. A part of them were to be held at Salem in connexion with Saugus. They were to consist of one Magistrate and three or four Assistants, chosen out of the freemen. This and every town were empowered to regulate their own affairs so as not to interfere with the Colonial laws. Their Representatives were ordered to attend only two sessions of the General Court in a year. This alteration was not immediately carried into effect.

April, the troubles concerning Mr. Williams' opinions, still continued in the First Church. Three men and eight women of their number, contended, as he had, that it was wrong for any one to worship in the assemblies of England. They asserted, that the Episcopal Church was upon a wrong foundation; and that, consequently, none should commune with its members. Two of the brethren here were deputed to go with a letter to the elders of other churches, for advice on three questions. Whether to satisfy Mr. Williams' friends, the others should refuse to hear preaching in English churches. Whether if the dissatisfied did not become peaceable, they might be regularly dismissed. Or if they should withdraw, whether they should be excommunicated. The two first questions were answered negatively. The last was answered affirmatively with the advice, that if the dissatisfied would walk orderly, their particular opinions should be tolerated.

May 3d, at a town meeting the question was considered as to dividing Marblehead Neck into lots. A portion of this land appears, from Mr. Endicott's argument on the occasion, to have been reserved for the erection of a College. In order that this might be done, a motion was made, that John Humphrey, who was interested in the land, should have another lot, beyond Forest River, as an equivalent. Such an arrangement for the promotion of literature, though not brought to pass, is creditable to the extended and correct views of our fathers, and to their wish for the welfare of posterity.

May 25th, this town sent, as their Deputies to General Court, William Trask, and, probably, Townsend Bishop.

June 27th, the first Quarterly Court was held in Salem. It was to have been composed of Mr. Endicott, Magistrate, and Nathaniel Turner, Townsend Bishop, and Thomas Scruggs, as Assistants. The first person was absent. The others took their oath of office, and proceeded to business. The principal case they had, was fining Thomas Stanley, constable of Saugus, for absence from Court.

July 4th, the same Court sat, and ordered the oak wood, which was for sale, to be brought from beyond the North and South Rivers, and deposited in appointed landing places, to be viewed by five surveyors. They also ordered, that the watchmen, who had been warned, should meet a half hour after sunset to receive instructions, and not return home in the morning without particular leave.

9th, this town were favoured with a visit from the new Governor, Sir Henry Vane. He had been educated at Oxford. He had travelled through Geneva, and there become a non-conformist. For this the Bishop of London was displeased with him. The consequence was his coming to this country the last year. Though but twenty-four years old, yet he was exceedingly popular. But taking a part in Mrs. Hutchinson's controversy, and advocating her doctrines, he lost his election as Governor, the next year. He soon returned to England, and sided with the Parliament against the King, though he was opposed to Cromwell's usurpation. While there he was friendly to the Colonists and did them several kindnesses. On the accession of Charles II to the throne, he was tried for high treason, and beheaded June 14th, 1662, aged 50 years.

Aug. 8th, John Higginson of this place, Lieut. Edward Gibbons of Boston, and Cutshamekin, Sagamore of Massachusetts, were commissioned to wait on Canonicus, a chief of the Narragansets, concerning the murder of John Oldham, while on a trading voyage at Block Island. They were kindly received by Canonicus. He gave them all the information, and offered the Colony all the prudent assistance in his power. The consequence of this and other atrocious murders was a declaration of war against the Pequods.

25th, ninety volunteers engaged to go against the Pequods for no other compensation than provisions. They were divided into four companies; one of which was commanded by Ensign Davenport of this place. The whole body were under Mr Endicott. They arrived to the enciny's territory. They had several skirmishes, but no decisive battle. They destroyed considerable corn, and many wigwams of the Indians. They returned about the 14th of September. They lost two killed, and had some wounded. The Pequods are stated to have had thirteen killed and forty wounded. All appeared to be done by the commander and men, which prudence and courage could do for accomplishing the object of their expedition. Then, as at all other times, when the public expectation of brilliant success is not realized, unfavourable suspicions and reflections were expressed.

About this time, some enterprising inhabitants here united and built a vessel of 120 tons at Marbleharbour. She was called the Desire. Her commander was William Pierce, a noted and respectable mariner.

September 8th, this town sent for their Deputies to General Court, Wm. Trask, Thomas Scruggs, and probably Townsend Bishop. It was assessed its proportion of £1200, a sum larger than usual. The amount was so great, as it included £200, which were paid for the expedition to the Pequod country and for the fortifications. The Court adopted a means to lessen the burden of taxes, by ordering that the trade of beaver and wampom should be let to the highest bidders, and that others should be restrained from trafficking in those articles.

The latter part of September, a water mill was erected in this town. Though now an occurrence hardly noticed, then it was generally observed. Such a mill was not probably the first one. For seven years before, the Company in England requested Mr. Endicott, for the sake of Mr. White, to encourage Francis Webb in setting up a saw-mill.

October, a house here of Mr. Jackson, with goods to a considerable amount, was consumed by fire. This was a trial to the inhabitants, who needed more than they had to render themselves comfortable.

A controversy now began, which threatened the peace and prosperity of the whole Colony. It took its rise from Mrs. Ann Hutchinson, who came, this year, from Lincolnshire in England to Boston. She maintained, that the people of God were personally united with the Holy Ghost; that the Scriptural injunction for mankind to work out their salvation, applied only to those, who were under a Covenant of works; that Sanctification was no evidence of Justification; and that she herself was endued with a spirit of prophecy. The principal persons of Massachusetts became involved in the agitation of these questions. Mr. Peters was actively engaged in opposition to them. The result was very unfavourable to Mrs. Hutchinson and her friends. The Theological names of parties then were Legalists and Antinomians. The former term was applied to her opponents, and the latter to her advocates. The advancement of her principles, produced the year following, the first Synod, which sat in the country. After this Synod an act of banishment was passed against her at the Court, which began its session the 2d of November. The sentence, however, was delayed in its execution, on account of the unsuitable season for her removal to a new abode. When the weather was fit, she was ordered to depart. She accompanied her husband to Rhode Island, where he died a respectable and useful man. In 1642, she settled among the Dutch. But in about a year, she and sixteen persons of her family were killed, and a daughter of hers was carried away captive by the Indians. Thus sadly terminated her sojourn in the land, where she had hoped to find rest.

November, cattle continued high here and in other parts of the Colony. Good cows were from £25 to £30 each, and a pair of oxen were £40 sterling.

December 7th, at the General Court, Mr. Endicott was one of the magistrates as usual, and Wm. Hathorne, Wm. Trask, and Thomas Scruggs as Deputies, from this place. It was ordered that a guard be kept in this as well as other towns at suitable places; and, also, a ward to be kept on the Lord's day. No person was to travel without arms where the houses were scarce. Every town was required to provide a watch house before the last of July. Military officers were selected. Those designated for Salem were William Trask, Captain, Richard Davenport, Lieutenant, and Thomas Beade, Ensign. The Court took such steps to prevent the people from being surprised by the Indians.

December 21st, Mr. Peters having preached to great acceptance with the Congregation, here, became their pastor. No preacher's influence or labours in the Colony, were now greater than his. He was even more popular than Mr. Cotton, owing in some degree to his being of the Legalists, and the latter of the Antinomians.

26th, for the accommodation of travellers, a Ferry was established between the Neck and Cape Ann.

ANNALS OF SALEM.

IN commencing this Number, there may be propriety in the remark, that no reasonable exertions have been spared to have it correct in point of facts. Still the writer expects, that mistakes will be discovered in the course of its contents. Even the occurrences of our day have their different judges and representations. Not less, certainly, should they be looked for, when the attention turns back on the speculations, events, and transactions of other ages. Whoever shall perceive errors in the following pages, or a deficiency of pertinent information, with which they are acquainted, will confer a favour on the writer by letting him know.

When noting the proceedings of the General and Assistant Courts, he has been able, for the most part, only to give the date when their sessions began. Hence, various acts of theirs appear as of the same day, when, in truth, they are of some other successive days. As there was no certainty, when they were passed, it was thought best to locate them as they are.

It has been deemed expedient to use some abbreviations, in regard to references. T. R. stand for Town Records of Salem; and 1st Ch. R. for the first Church Records of Salem. When these abbreviations apply to other places, the names of these places are prefixed. Qt. Ct. R. indicate the Records of the Quarterly Court, held in Salem; Col. R., the Colony Records; Haz. Coll., Hazard's Collections; Hutch., Hutchinson's History of Mass.; Win., Winthrop's Journal; Sav., Savage's notes and collection of letters as contained in Winthrop.—When different dates and subjects appear without a marginal reference, they are to be understood as belonging to the last mentioned, excepting when an authority is otherwise referred to.

Jan. 2d, for the encouragement of fishermen at Marblehead, Salem granted them a tract of land. 16th, the sale and transportation of boards and timber were restricted by the town.* 19th, a Fast was observed.

*Town Records.

It was appointed Dec. 7th.† The reasons for it were as follow: The distressed state of the Protestants in Germany, whose allies had been defeated by the Imperialists—The sufferings of the clergymen in England, who had refused to read the book of sports, which were to be practised on the Sabbath, as ordered by the Star Chamber; and who declined to conform with the religious ceremonies, introduced by Bishop Laud, and which they considered as forms of Popery—The troubles occasioned by Indians, and dissensions in some churches of the Colony.‡

23d, Samuel Sharp, ruling Elder, was allowed 300 acres of land. 27th, the wood and timber of the common lands by Darbie (now Derby) fort side, were to be reserved for the use of the town. February 7th, John Pickering was admitted to the privileges of an inhabitant. 17th, Auditors of the Treasurer's accounts were appointed. Mr. William Hathorne had a grant of 200 acres of land where he had built, on condition, that he be regularly dismissed from Dorchester church to the one here.§ The person here mentioned had been a deputy at one session of the General Court at Newton nearly two years before. He was about to take a distinguished part in Colonial affairs. Thomas Goldthwait was allowed ten acres of land on the Neck, if he should have a suitable recommendation to the church. Such facts as these, which seem to have been common, show that our ancestors granted land to new settlers, and were exact as to their qualifications of character.

April 6th, at an ordination in Concord the church here was represented. One of its delegates proposed a question, which led to the adoption of the following opinions. Such as were clergymen in England by the call of their people, were to be respected as having there legally sustained the office of ministers. But for accepting the call of the Bishop, they ought to humble themselves and repent. Having come to this country, they should not consider themselves regular ministers until called by another church. When thus elected they were to be accounted as ministers, even before ordination.* These conclusions show, that the Churches of the Colony were much opposed to the persecutions of the Puritans in England, under the corruptions of Episcopacy, and that they were zealously resolved to prevent the introduction of such an establishment upon their shores.

‡ Neal's Puritans.

April 10th, the General Court commences.† William Trask, Richard Davenport, and Robert Moulton were deputies. Mr. Endicott was chosen a Magistrate, and was thus continued till 1641, when he became Deputy Governor. The Court issue an order, in compliance with an application from Connecticut, for raising 160 men, as the proportion of Massachusetts against the Pequods.‡ This number was some enlarged. The quota of Salem, including its district of Marblehead, were 28. Capt. Trask and Lieut. Davenport were among the officers of the whole body, commanded in chief by Capt. Stoughton. Before they marched, the enemy had been severely defeated, on the 27th of May, by the Colonists of Connecticut and friendly Indians, led on by the heroic Mason. They pressed forward to the scene of warfare. They were informed, that a remnant of the Pequods had fled to a large swamp, within the bounds of Fairfield. On the 15th of July, they invested the place of their retreat on every side. A small division under Lieut. Davenport, of this town, bravely entered the swamp, with the expectation of being supported, and commenced an attack, but were repulsed. He stated to Increase Mather, when recounting the events of this action, that with two or three Englishmen, he engaged 30 Indians; had seventeen arrows shot into his "coat of mail," and only one wounded him where he was not defended. He further related to him, that he rescued a soldier from two of the enemy, who were carrying him away as a captive on their shoulders; and that, as the Pequods observed the Colonists did not slay the captured squaws, some of their large boys, when in danger of being taken, would cry out, "I squaw, I squaw,"—thereby hoping to be saved. As to the enemy, the English proposed to them terms of surrender. They were accepted by about 100 aged men, women and children, principally belonging to the adjacent country. The Pequods determined to cut through the Colonists or perish. When night approached, the Colonists opened a narrow passage into the swamp, and kept up a scattering fire till morning. At day-break they were enveloped with a dense fog. The Pequods took advantage of this, and made a fierce attack at one point upon their assailants. They succeeded in breaking the line of the English, and 60 or 70 of them escaped; 20 of them were slain, and 180 taken prisoners. Sassacus, their brave chief, with a few of his faithful adherents, fled to the Mohawks. These, at the solicitation of the Narragansets, perfidiously slew the most of them, and sent his scalp to Connecticut. His territory became the possession of the English, and the survivors of his people their tributaries. It appears that he foresaw the dissolution of the Aborigines, by the continuance of the Colonists in the country, and he therefore determined to strive for their expulsion, or perish in the attempt. The latter was his portion. The courage, hardships, and self-devotedness, with which he conducted his fatal enterprise, showed, that however his policy was imprudent, his patriotism was of high order. His motives, prowess and deeds among any nation, favored with poets and historians, would have come down to us in strains of eloquence, enough to excite emotions of admiration. Fame is not the pecular right of those, to whom it has been attributed. Its laurels might have justly encircled the brows of multitudes more, which for the want of some recording hand, have been suffered to wither and die.

The soldiers of this and other towns, engaged in the expedition against the Pequods, returned the 26th of August. They had none slain. Some of them were wounded. Fire arms gave them great superiority over the Indians. When these approached near enough to do execution with their bows and arrows, they were sure to loose many of their number. A consequence of the Pequods' overthrow was, that the Indians were more fearful of the Colonists, and less disposed to provoke their displeasure.

It was required by thirteen select men, as agents for the town, that the common marsh and meadow lands should be surveyed, and an account of them produced in the course of the week. When this was done the seven men ordered it on the 25th of December, to be divided among the heads of families. Some difficulty occurring, they ordered it to be remeasured the 24th of February following. It contained 157 1-2 acres, according to the divisions. A family of less than four received 1-2 acre; of four and five, 3-4; of six and more, one acre. From the census of the inhabitants on this occasion they were about 900.* Salem then included, besides its present limits, Danvers, Beverly, Manchester, Wenham, part of Topsfield, and small parts of Lynn and Middleton, and also Marblehead Neck. Marblehead, as mentioned previously, was a distinct Plantation, though not incorporated as a town.

April 17th, it was agreed by the town, that in case Richard Hutchinson "set up ploughing," he should have 20 acres of land added within two years to his previous share. This business seems not to have been generally understood by the planters. There were but thirty-seven ploughs at this date in all Massachusetts.†

May 17th, General Court sits at Newton. William Trask, Richard Davenport and Edmund Batter were deputies.* At this session there were transactions, which excited deep feeling through the Colony. Two parties, Legalists and Antinomians, were arrayed against each other. They had a warm contest in the selection of rulers. The former were likely to be defeated by the late permission for freemen, at a distance, to send in their votes by proxy. The latter were most numerous near Newton, and especially in Boston, where their leader, Mrs. Hutchinson, had resided and defended her doctrines. They were on the spot to plan and prosecute measures for electing members of the Legislature favourable to their sentiments. But notwithstanding such an advantage, they were foiled, and the Legalists prevailed. Gov. Vane, the principal supporter of the Antinomians, lost his office. Mr. Winthrop succeeded him, and was thus restored to his previous station. Mr. Endicott, the constant friend of Mr. Winthrop, was increasingly restored to public favour, and was added to the standing council.—At this session matters were carried to such an extreme, that harsh language and laying hold of each other were resorted to by the most violent.† The electors, on this occasion formed an assembly, like one of our modern town meetings, when party feelings have run so high, as to banish from its proceedings reason, patriotism and decorum.

June 3d, news came from England, unfavourable to the hopes and interests of Massachusetts. It reported, that the King had forbidden the emigration of his subjects to this Colony, unless they should take an oath of allegiance, and comply with the usages of the Episcopal Church.‡ Besides a measure so trying as this to the Colonists, he ordered some of the Magistrates to govern Massachusetts till they had heard from him, because he considered its charter as void. The next month after such an order, he appointed Sir Ferdinando Gorges, Gov. General of New-England. But he had neither time nor ability to execute his purpose. His difficulties, at home, prevented him from imposing on the Colonies a system of ecclesiastical and political government, less congenial with their habits and wishes, but more so with his own. The increase of his perplexities was a welcome diminution of theirs.*

June 15th, a day of general thanksgiving was observed for victory over the Pequods. 23d, Gov. Winthrop visited his friends here. He was treated with much respect. He was escorted by armed men as far as Ipswich, and on his return to Saugus. This was done to prevent surprise from the Pequods, who were reported to be lurking in the vicinity.† 27th, Dorothy Talby, for beating her husband, was sentenced to be bound and chained to a post till her reformation.‡ On Sept. 25th, of the following year, she was ordered to be severely whipped for misdemeanours towards him. She was the unhappy woman who was afterwards hung. An appearance of the insanity, which proved her end, was visible in the two preceding cases. Had she been taken care of as deranged, rather than judged as a rational person, it would have cast no reproach on the sagacity and charity of those, who had authority over her.

July, Capt. Pierce, of the ship Desire, belonging to this port, was commissioned to transport 15 boys and two women, of the captive Pequods to Bermuda, and sell them as slaves. He was obliged, however, to make for Providence Island. There he disposed of the Indians. He returned from Tortugas the 26th of February following, with a cargo of cotton, tobacco, salt, and negroes.§ Such traffic in human beings manifests, that, in this respect, erroneous views of true liberty and righteous government, were lamentably indulged.—

* Chalmers's Annals. † Win. ‡ Ct. Ct. R. § Win. and Morton.

There is cause of joy, that it would find no countenance from the enlightened spirit of freedom, which now pervades New-England.

August 1st, an assessment of £400 was ordered. Salem was to pay £45 12, and stood second.* 14th, to accommodate strangers, a license was granted for keeping tavern. The keeper of it was appointed by the Selectmen.† Such an establishment was particularly needed at this time. The reason was, that the General Court had, in obedience to Royal command, enacted on heavy penalties, that no inhabitant should entertain strangers without permission of one among the standing Council, or of two Assistants.

Aug. 30th, the first Synod, assembled in America, began its session at Newton.‡ The Church here in common with other churches, appears to have taken part in its deliberations. The object of it was to consider the opinions of the day, and devise measures to suppress the animosity, which existed between the advocates and opposers of Mrs. Hutchinson. After three weeks they agreed to censure and publish eighty-two prevailing errors.

Sept. 19th, John Williams, for the murder of John Hoddy, near "the great pond," (most likely in Wenham,) was sentenced to be hung.§ He was executed at Boston. The event excited general attention. The more seldom atrocity appears, the more repulsive and striking it is to the mind.

26th, at a session of the General Court, Wm. Hathorne and Thomas Garduer were deputies. Oct. 12th, Thanksgiving was observed for the complete triumph over the Pequods—for favourable news from Protestants in Germany—and for the decisions of the late Synod. In regard to the last, the Legislature expected better effects, than they subsequently realized. Nov. 2d, the General Court sat. Townsend Bishop, Edmund Batter, and Wm. Hathorne were deputies. With others, they seem to have been called to act on the alarming difficulties between the Legalists and Antinomians. As previously related, the Court banished Mrs. Hutchinson. Before her sentence there was a long colloquy between her and members of the Court and witnesses. * Messrs. Endicott as an assistant, and Peters and Bartholomew as evidences from this town, took parts in the discourse. Mr. Peters testified with other clergymen, that she had declared, that they were not preachers of the true Gospel as Mr. Cotton was. Mr. Bartholomew related that she had visited at his house in London, came passenger in the same ship with him, and had expressed herself as receiving revelations from heaven. The Court disfranchised her brother-in-law, Rev. John Wheelright, and required him to leave Massachusetts in 14 days. The cause of his sentence was similar to that of his sister. Some, who petitioned in his favour, were deprived of their offices and other social privileges. The Court enacted that Antinomians in several towns should be disarmed by the 30th instant, lest they might be induced to commit violence, as the Anabaptists had in Germany. They were to be excepted, who should confess before two Magistrates, that they had erred in subscribing the petition. The persons thus proscribed in Salem, were Thomas Scruggs, Mr. Alfoot, (probably Wm. Alford,) Wm. Cummings, Robert Moulton and Wm. King. They were ordered to leave their arms with Lieut. Danforth.

Besides this business of an aspect so threatening to public tranquility, the Court attend to other subjects. They require that no "Sack or Strong Water," should be vended at an Ordinary, because it had been abused. They estimated corn at 3s. per bushel for rates. They forbid any person to buy Vension except by leave of his town. They voted Mr. Endicott 40 or 50 acres of meadow wherever such a tract would injure no plantation. They authorize him to retain goods of the Indians near Mr. Hathorne's farm, until they would discover those of them who had shot one of his cows. They made a large assesment of £1000. Salem stood next to Boston and paid £120. Ipswich, though in the previous rate placed the 5th, was now taxed as much as Salem. It must have received a considerable accession of settlers and property in a short time to have thus risen. The Court instructed each military company to train eight times a year. They appointed Mr. Peters of this town an overseer of the College.

With respect to this Institution, their records of October, the preceding year, say: "The Court agree to give £400 toward a School or College; whereof £200 to be paid the next year, and £200 when the work is finished, and the next Court to appoint where and what building." As in the second year after this agreement, the Rev. John Harvard of Charlestown, left the College £779 17 2, the Court called it after his name.

* At the session of the preceding Court, Mr. John Fisk, lately arrived in the Colony, was made a freeman. He was born in the parish of St. James in the County of Suffolk, England, about 1601. He was educated and took his degree at Emanuel College in Cambridge. He began to preach in his native country; but hindered by the restraints of conformity, he studied physick and was regularly licensed to practice. On the decease of his father, he resolved to make New-England his abode, that he might freely engage in the ministry. Thus disposed he put his purpose into execution. † He came with a large property for those days. He loaned considerable of it to the Colony. He first taught a school at Newton. Thence he moved to Salem, assisted Mr. Peters in preaching, and instructed scholars nearly three years. ‡ Dec. 4th, for the proper management of town affairs, it was voted, that Bye-Laws should be transcribed from the Court Book.

* March 12th, General Court commences. John Woodbury and Edward Batter were deputies. The Court designate suitable persons to keep and sell "strong water." One of them was Mr. Gott of Salem. The Court order, that the Colonial laws should be collected and revised by a Committee of Magistrates, Ministers, and others. On this Committee they appoint Messrs. Peters and Hathorne. They require a considerable number of persons to quit Massachusetts, who were Antinomians, and considered as occasioning religious difficulties. There were four such from Salem. They were Francis Weston, Richard Waterman, Thomas Oluey, and Stukely Westcoat. † They resorted to the territory of Roger Williams. ‡ Ezekiel Holliman of this town was arraigned before the Court for not attending the Congregational Assembly. They requested the Elders to deal with him, that he might rectify his errors. Such a measure appears not to have availed any thing. The next year he rebaptized Mr. Williams, and was of the twelve, who established the first Baptist Church of Providence and the first of America.

The Court laid a larger tax than common. It was £1500, and was agreed on by a committee, of which was John Woodbury. Salem stood third and paid £172 10. Ipswich had so exceeded this town in prosperity as to assume its place, as second to Boston.

13th, the Court deputed Messrs. Endicott and John Winthrop, jr. to administer the oath of freedom to Emanuel Downing, who had settled at Salem. They allowed Lieut. Davenport £3 8 for charges on account of superintending the "slaves, which when they have earned it, he is to pay." It appears that persons, here denominated slaves, were culprits, condemned to lose their liberty for a time, proportioned to their offences.

The records of the Court say ; " Mr. Endicott was

* This seems to have been preparatory to the re-establishment of a "Fishing Plantation," which took place the following year.

† April 12th a general Fast was appointed "to entreat help of God in the weighty matters, which are in hand, and to divert any evil plots, which may be intended, and prepare the way of friends, which we hope may be upon coming to us." May 2d, General Court of elections sits. William Hathorne and Edward Batter appear as deputies.

‡ June 1st, a severe Earthquake was felt through the Colony. The ground so shook as to render it difficult for people to stand. Household furniture was thrown down. It passed from the Westward to the Eastward. Slight shocks were experienced 20 days afterwards. The day of this Earthquake was a remarkable era. "So long after the Earthquake" was a common remark in New-England. § 5th, the Assistants order the wife of Francis Weston to be set in "the Bilboes," two hours at Boston and two at Salem on a lecture day. Probably her imputed offence was holding to the opinions, which occasioned the banishment of her husband.

|| 25th, John Winthrop, jr. had liberty to set up a salt house at Ryal side; to have wood enough for his business, and common sufficient to pasture two cows. This person was undoubtedly a son of the Governor. He had science and enterprise to aid him in such undertakings for public benefit. ¶ Some time afterwards he set up large salt works in the Pequod country with great privileges. Oldmixon informs us, that he became a member of the Royal Society, and sent it several "curious things," probably valuable dissertations; and that he gained the favour of Charles II, by presenting him a ring, which Charles I had, on some occasion, given to his grandmother.

*Sept. 8th, the General Court, now moved from Newton to Boston, commences. William Hathorne, John Woodbury, and Jacob Barney were deputies. The Court pass the following resolve. "Whereas Emanuel Downing, Esq. hath brought over at his great charges all things fitting for taking wild Fowl by way of Duck Coy, this Court being desirous to encourage him and others in such designs as tend to public good, do give him full liberty to place the same Duck Coy in some convenient place within the bounds of Salem, as the town and he can agree, and that it shall not be lawful, for any person to shoot in any gun within a half mile of the pond where such Duck Coy shall be placed, nor shall use any other means for disturbance of the Fowl there." It appears by a Salem Record, under the same date, which heads the foregoing order, that Mr. Downing bought of John Humphrey, two ponds, and high ground about them, sufficient to have the Duck Coy free of disturbance from "plowmen, husbandmen, or any others passing that way." He was allowed to enclose the ground provided it was no more than 50 acres of upland. The two ponds, which he purchased appear to have been Coy and Deep ponds, which discharge themselves at the foot of Legge's hill. The Court granted to others of different towns liberty similar to Mr. Downing's.

† Mr. Stephen Batchelor who had been pastor at Saugus, and made an ineffectual attempt to settle Mattakeese, now Yarmouth, in the spring, received permission with some persons from Salem and others, to commence a Plantation at Winnacunet, which next year, was called Hampton. ‡ The Court allowed two Fairs to be held in this town (probably in the course of a year.) restraint Oliver Cromwell, afterwards Protector of Great Britain, Sir Arthur Hazlerig, John Hambden and others of similar opinions, were hindered from coming to this country. His Majesty little suspected, that the apprehended evil, prevented by their not being allowed to embark, would react upon him a hundred fold by their being permanently kept at home.

* The Court enact, that as some excommunicated persons were careless of being restored, they should amend and endeavour to regain a regular standing in their respective churches. They were called to act on an important subject. † It was concerning an order, issued by the Lords' Commissioners for Foreign Plantations the 4th of April, and demanding the surrender of Massachusetts Charter. Various false as well true reports in England against the Colony were the occasion of measures so hard to its inhabitants. Archbishop Laud, whose unfavourable views of the Colonists led him to place too much stress on objections made to them, was informed by Mr. Burdet of Piscataqua, that "it was not new discipline, which was aimed at in New-England, but sovereignty; and that it was accounted perjury and treason in their General Court to speak of appeals to the King." Declarations of this kind led him to use his undue influence for annulling the Charter. ‡ The General Court, however saddened by an event so threatening, were not easily terrified from what they considered their rights. § They resolved that the Charter should not be relinquished. They forwarded to the Commissioners of the Crown an able petition, in which they stated, that to give up their Charter would be highly injurious to his Majesty's dominions in this country, and that they hoped he would protect them as his faithful subjects. They anxiously expected his answer. || But an insurrection in Scotland and general opposition in England to his policy, absorbed his attention and interposed as a shield to the devoted colonists. * September 25th, the Court of Assistants requested the aid of Clergymen for suppressing "costliness of apparel and following new fashions."

† Nov. 12th, to assist in the support of Mr. Peters the town granted him 230 acres of land. ‡ 13th, the Governor Mr. Winthrop, came hither by water. On his return by land six officers here were selected to guard him with carbines as far as Boston. § Dec. 6th, Dorothy Talby was hung in Boston. She belonged to Salem and was a member of the church, whence she was excommunicated. Under an impression, that she was ordered from heaven to kill her husband, children, and herself, she tried to act on it, but only succeeded in killing a child. On this charge she was condemned by the Jury of a Quarterly Court in Boston. For her appearance before the tribunal of this Court, her husband became bound, Sept. 24th, at a Court in Salem for the sum of £20. At her execution Mr. Peters addressed the spectators on the dreadful effects of complying with supposed revelations. As before remarked, she deserved to be treated as one impaired in mind, rather than as a murdereress.

At the same Court, Mary, the wife of Thomas Oliver, belonging to this place, was ordered to be imprisoned. She was accused of disturbing the Church here, at one of their communions, because they declined to receive her, unless she regularly owned their Covenant. On confessing her fault, she was released. She appears to have desired that the Gospel ordinances might not be guarded so strictly as they were. She seems to have indulged the opinion, that living in a community, professing the Christian religion, was qualification enough to participate in all such ordinances. With these views, she maintained, that "if Paul were at Salem, he would call all the inhabitants saints." || September, 1639, she was punished for slander. Jan. 1642, she was presented for neglect of public worship. Feb. 1644, she was sentenced to be publicly whipped for reproaching the Magistrates. Mr. Winthrop says; "She stood without tying and bore her punishment with a masculine spirit, glorying in her suffering." He tells us that for slandering the Elders, Aug. 1646, she had a cleft stick put on her tongue for a half hour. * Nov. 1648, she was presented for living from her husband. July 1649, she was arraigned for the same offence. She was tried for two other misdemeanours. Feb. 28, 1650, she requested of the Quarterly Court in Salem, that two fines one 22s. 6d. and the other £5, standing against her, might be remitted, to aid in the transportation of herself and children. They granted her one half of them, if she would leave the jurisdiction in three weeks, if not they should order the Marshal to collect the whole of them. The probability is, that she complied with their proposal. Mr. Winthrop informs us, that she excelled Mrs. Hutchinson in zeal and eloquence. It is evident, that her troubles originated in having different religious views from those of the town and colonial authorities. Whether all of them were causeless or not, is hard for us to determine. The longer she bore up under the burden of litigation,—the harder were the accusations against her. So much did her opinions vary from the customs of that day, and so watched was her conduct by the eye of prejudice, it was no difficult matter to keep her on the rack of prosecution. No doubt, were the reasons of her conduct handed down by her own relation, she would appear in a less unfavourable light, than she now does.

† 13th, a public Fast was observed on account of prevailing fevers, the small pox, and low state of religion in the churches. ‡ 25th, Jane Verin was complained of for neglecting public worship. She was released by request of Mr. Peters for further conference. She was probably influenced, as others began to be, in abstaining from the Congregation, by scruples about baptism. * A Village was granted to Mr. Philips and company. This was probably a part of Danvers, long called Salem Village. It is not unlikely, that the Mr. Philips here mentioned, was a clergyman, who returned to England in 1642. The town having ordered rates to be made and levied the last year, now choose persons to value estates, and assess them proportionably.

Feb. 4th. An agreement, as follows, was made between the town and John Pickering. "First he is to build a meeting house of 25 feet long, the breadth of the old building with a gallery answerable to the former: One catted chimney of 12 feet long and 4 feet in height above the top of the building. The back whereof is to be of brick or stone. This building is to have 6 sufficient windows, 2 on each side and 2 at the end and a pair of stairs to ascend the galleries suitable to the former. This building is to be covered with 1 1-2 inch plank and with board upon that to meet close. And all this to be sufficientlie finished with daubings and glasse and underpinning with stone or brick with cariage and all things necessary by the said Jno. Pickering. In consideration whereof the said John is to have 63lb. in money to be paid at three payments. And the said John doth covenant to finish by the 15th of the 4th mo. next ensuing the date hereof. * Feb. 26th. Deputies chosen for the General Court, which sat the 13th of March, to try Mr. Lenthall for embracing some of Mrs. Hutchinson's opinions, were John Holgrave, John Woodbury, and Jeffry Massey. The person thus arraigned was about to be settled as minister at Weymouth, but the Court prevented his ordination.

March. As a public concern, a Printing Press was set up at Cambridge. † The second work printed there was an Almanack, in which the year began with March, by William Pierce, captain of the ship Desire, belonging to this port. ‡ 16th, a greater gale was experienced by the Colonists than had been since their arrival. It was S. S. E. and S. It prostrated fences and houses. It so terrified many people, they fled from their houses. It was accompanied with abundance of rain.

§ April 17th. "John Gardner pays 5s. per acre for upland as goodman Lord hath done." This shows the low price of land in those days. It appears from a contract made with the keepers of Goats, that these animals were used as commonly then as cows are now.

|| May 22d. General Court sits. William Trask and William Hathorne were deputies. The Court for the encouragement of the Fishery exempted the stock, employed in it, from taxes. They forbid Ced and Bass Fish to be used for manure. This was a general custom of the Indians, so far as they cultivated land, and no doubt was derived from them. The Court requested Mr. Peters to write to Holland, as he was acquainted there, for £500 worth of Salt Petre, £40 worth of Match, on account of the country. They ordered a levy of £1000. Salem's proportion was £111 13 11 It stood third. £250 of this sum were for expenses on Castle Island. One of the committee for laying it was William Hathorne. Trask, "in regard for his much service" 250, William Peirce 200, and Richard Davenport 150 acres of land. They gave leave for a Fishing Plantation to be commenced at Cape Ann by Merrice Thomson, merchant, and others. They instruct Messrs. Endicott and Humphrey, John Winthrop, jr., William Pierce, and Joseph Grafton to fix its boundaries, and that none settle there without their consent. They ordered persons here and through the Colony, who owned estates in England to be taxed for them. They instructed Messrs. Endicott, Downing and Hathorne to dispose of a house, bought by Mr. Peters, to the best advantage, and appropriate the money for the College. * At this session jealousy was manifested, lest the Governor should use influence enough to make his office perpetual. One reason was, that he proposed Mr. Downing, his brother-in-law, as candidate for an Assistant. The Deputies maintained, that, in accordance with the Charter, the Magistrates, who had served on the standing Council should be chosen as Magistrates, every year. Mr. Endicott, who was of the Council, and had also held the office of Magistrate or Assistant without annual election, was ready to meet the desire of the community. The people were anxious to suppress every appearance of Aristocracy.

June. The public mind here and through the Colony was relieved by news, that the apprehended non-intercourse with England, because the Charter was withheld from the King's Commissioners, was not to take effect. † 25th, Hope, an Indian servant of Mr. Peters, was sentenced to be whipped for running away, and drunkenness. The practice of employing Indians in the Colonists' families was common in that period. ‡ July 1st, Mr. Peters wrote the following letter to the Church at Dorchester.

* Aug. 8th. It was voted, that the resolves of any town meeting regularly warned and consisting of a number above six persons, should be binding, provided they had been together one hour after the time specified. in Boston for lewdness, to be whipped there, at Roxbury, and Salem, and be committed to Lieut. Davenport for a slave.

4th. General Court commences. Messrs. Downing and Hathorne appeared as deputies. The Court repeal the law in reference to excommunicated persons. They forbid healths to be drank on penalty of 12d. for each offence. They pass a sumptuary act. It allowed no lace nor points on their clothing; no garment to be made with short sleeves so as to expose the arms. It required short sleeves to be lengthened so as to reach the wrists; and that no sleeve should be more than 1-2 Ell in the widest place as a common measure; but to be larger or smaller according to the size of its wearer. It called for reformation in "immoderate great breeches, knotts of ribbon, broad shoulder bands and rayles, silk rases, double ruffs and cuffs."

The Court order that no unlawful marriages should take place; that persons proposing to be married, should be published three times on lecture days or town meetings, or, in places where there were no lectures, "then the same intention be set up in writing upon some post standing in public view, and used for such purpose only, and there to stand so as it may easily be read by the space of 14 days." They grant Emanuel Downing 600 acres of land. They order "that there be Records kept of all wills, administrations, and inventories, as also of the days of each marriage, birth, and death of every person within this jurisdiction." They require a general appraisement of houses and lands. They instruct, that proceedings in reference to these two regulations shall be handed into them annually on fine of 40s. The Colony Recorder chosen at this time was Stephen Winthrop, son of the Governor. He went to England in about six years, was member of Parliament from Scotland in Cromwell's time, and died before 1659.

* Nov. 5th. Messrs. Dudley, Gibbons, and Downing were selected to treat with a Committee of three from Dover, on the Piscataqua, about conditions on which the people, there, would come under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. It was agreed, that if Dover assumed such a relation, they should be privileged with Quarter Courts, as Ipswich and Salem were. They, however, deferred coming into such a contract till 1641, * when Strawbury Bank, now Portsmouth, united with them in submitting to the Massachusetts government.

† 8th. Winter Island, used for curing Fish, was ordered to be enclosed with a fence. ‡ 28th, the General Court require the freemen to meet and choose the Governor and other officers the last Wednesday of Easter Term. This alteration was in compliance with the Charter of 1629. They grant Mr. Endicott 550 acres of land on Ipswich River. In connexion with this grant was another to Mr. Bellingham "on the head of Salem to the N. W. there being in it a hill with an Indian Plantation." The Court permit, that the persons, who had been disarmed two years before, and had conducted peaceably, should receive their arms. They order, that the laws, handed in by Messrs. Cotton and Ward, should be examined by a Committee and forwarded to each town and to the Elders for examination. § This measure was promoted by the people, who were apprehensive, that too much power rested in the hands of the Magistrates. || The Court pass the following: "Whereas the inhabitants of Salem have agreed to plant a Village near the River, which runs to Ipswich; it is ordered, that all the land near their bounds, between Salem and the said river, not belonging to any other town or person by any former grant, shall belong to the said Village." This appears to have been what is now called Topsfield.

For instituting the only Post Office in the Colony, they resolve as follows: "For preventing the miscarriage of letters, it is ordered, that notice be given, that Richard Fairbanks, his house in Boston is the place, appointed for all letters, which are brought from beyond the seas, or are to be sent thither, are to be brought unto him, and he is to take care that they be delivered or sent according to their directions, and he is allowed for every such letter 1d. and must answer all miscarriages through his own neglect in this kind, provided, that no man shall be compelled to bring his letters, thither, except he please." Two original letters, one dated 1690 and the other 1691, to Increase Mather from Anthony Wood, author of Athenæ Oxonienses, now bear the post mark, 1d, according to this regulation.

* Dec. 3d. Great excitement prevailed through the Colony, because General Court undertook to rectify what they deemed unusual hours for religious lectures. The ministers and churches urged, that such interference was a violation of their Charter rights. The conclusion of the controversy was, that every worshipping assembly should break up seasonably enough to reach home before dark.

† At a Quarterly Court in Boston, Marmaduke Perry, of this town, was retried for the death of his apprentice, who died with a fracture in the head. As the evidence was not sufficiently against him, he was cleared. At the same session, Salem was fined 10s. for neglect in keeping Watch.

‡ The same month, a voluntary contribution was ordered to be taken up each quarter for maintaining the ministry. "The note thereof remaineth with the Deacons." Such a mode of support appears to have lasted here about 18 years. However, not of so long continuance as its promoters might have wished and expected, still its operation was not shorter than a close observer of human nature would have predicted. § It appears to have been adopted in a considerable degree through the influence of Mr. Cotton. He had preached some months before, that ministers should be maintained by free will offerings, and not by lands, revenues, and tithes. This theory was more pleasing in anticipation than beneficial in experiment.

Wood, in New-England's Prospect, gave the following description of this town as it was during this year. "Salem stands on the middle of a necke of land very pleasantly, having a South river on the one side and a North river on the other side. Upon this necke where most of the houses stand, is very bad and sandie ground, yet for seaven years together it hath brought forth exceeding good corne, by being fished, but every third year. In some places is very good ground and good timber, and divers springs hard by the sea side. There likewise is store of fish, as Basses, Eels, Lobsters, Clammes, &c. Although their land be none of the best, yet beyond these rivers is a very good soyle, where they have taken farms, and get their hay, and plant their corne; there they crosse these rivers with small Cannowes, which were made of whole pine trees, being about two foote and a halfe over, and twenty foote long. In these likewise they goe a fowling, sometimes two leagues at sea. There be more cannowes in this towne, than in all the whole Patent, every household having a water horse or two. This Town wants an Alewife river, which is a great inconvenience. It hath two good harbours, the one being called Winter and the other Summer harbours, which lieth within Derbins Fort, which place, if it were well fortified, might keepe shippes from landing forces in any of those two places."

* The ferry at North Point, formerly John Stone's, was granted to John Dixy for three years. "He is to keep a horse boat; to have for a stranger's passage 2d, for townsmen 1d; for meeres, horses, and other great beasts 6d; for goats, calves, and swine 2d."

January. After perusing the orders of the General Court, the town order "that Ralph Fogg receive such goods as none doe owne and send a note of them to the Marshall att Boston." Edward Norris, son of the Elder, was chosen to instruct the Grammar School. 21st, Roger Conant, son of him who was among the first settlers here, was granted 20 acres of land, "being the first born child in Salem." * March 18th, Edward Norris was ordained as colleague with Mr. Peters. The occasion drew together most of the Elders in the Colony and many people. 21st, an account was received, that the Desire of this port had made a passage to Gravesend, England, in 23 days. † 30th, Capt. Trask was permitted to set up a tide mill on the North River, if he should make a passage for shallops from half to full tide. It was voted, that the decisions of a majority of the seven men should be binding. Swine keepers were appointed.

‡ May 13th. General Court sat. William Hathorne and Townsend Bishop were deputies. As the inhabitants here petitioned "for some of their church to have Jeffries Creek, and land to erect a village there for Mr. William Walton, John Black, William Allen, Samuel Orchard (probably Archer,) George Newton, and others' Company," the Court granted "what land and enlargement may be convenient, and is not granted to any other Plantation," and they referred it to "Mr. John Winthrop, jr. and Mr. Simon Bradstreet, to settle the bounds of said village."

The Court finding their act, restricting the time of lectures, to be very unpopular, caused it to be repealed. They appointed Messrs. Downing and Hathorne, with two more out of town, to assist "the Magistrates of Salem in keeping their Court." They requested the towns and elders to make up their minds about the laws, forwarded to them for consideration, by their next session in the 8th month. They instructed the deputies to obtain the votes for Magistrates of their respective towns, and bring them to the Legislature, who were to ascertain the candidates, having the majority. Then they required the deputies to return the highest candidates to the freemen, who were to choose them or not as they pleased, and to bring back the result to them at their session for Elections, giving it to be understood, that no magistrate was duly chosen unless thus nominated. They ordered the constables in time of peace, to set "watches and wards," and, in time of danger, military officers to superintend such concerns. They required all men to watch, except officers of churches, schoolmasters, students, captains, lieutenants and ensigns. They agreed upon a rate of £1200, of which Salem was to pay £115, and stood third. They put corn at 5s., wheat 7s., rye 6s. 8d. per bushel, for taxes. They deputed a committee to value country produce and cattle, among which were goats. Of them were John Woodbury, Jeffrey Massey, and Thomas Lathrop.

* June 30th. The first will, proved before the Court here, was put on file. It was Bethiah Cartwright's. † July 1st, Auditors of town accounts were chosen. A reward of 40s. was offered for every wolf's head.

Sept. 14th. William Lord was sworn as constable, and intrusted with the care of the weights and measures. ‡ 29th and 30th, several persons were fined from 1-2 to 10 bushels of corn, and costs of Court, for not making a fence on Darbie fort side.

Oct. 7th. General Court commenced. Messrs. Hathorne and Downing were deputies. The Court estimated four of white wampom at 1d, and 8 and not above 12 of blue, at 1d. Such currency served all the purpose of gold and silver among the Indians. It helped them to pay their tribute to the Colonists, and also passed among them as money. The trade in wampom and beaver the Court had ordered to be let out four years before. The former was manufactured chiefly by the Block and Long Island Indians, * from "wilk shells." † The Court offered a premium for the manufacture of linen at the rate of 3d. for 1s. worth. They intended this to last three years; but the year after, for lessening public expense, they rendered it void. They ordered, that no man shall be compelled to pay cash, but such goods as he has. The reason, assigned for so inconvenient a measure, was the dulness of trade and commerce and scarcity of money. ‡ The origin of such depression was, that much provision had come from England and Ireland with but few emigrants, and the Colony had been drained of its money by European merchants. § Out of ten magistrates propounded to the Court, Mr. Downing stood third and Mr. Hathorne eighth. || A request of magistrates and elders was presented to the Court, that they would define the boundaries between Church and State. The subject was put over for further consideration.

¶ Nov. 11th. The land reserved for cattle on Forrest River was prohibited from being sold.

** Dec. 1st. The Quarterly Court, at Boston, ordered Salem Meeting-House to be used for a Watch-House. The same was to be done as to other places of worship in different towus.

†† 15th. News arrived that the Scotch had commenced hostilities against the king and entered England; that he had convoked the Parliament, and that hope of his treating the non-conformists more leniently was cherished. The consequence of such information was a desire on the part of some to revisit England. At the same time, others, fearing lest they should not be able to advance their interest in Massachusetts, wished to move farther South. Such inclinations greatly reduced the price of lands, and other property. Corn fell to 3s. and good cows to about £6. An estate valued three months before at £1000, would not bring £200.

1641.

* Feb. 2d. As emigration had greatly lessened, and shipping was needed, a spirit for building vessels was promoted. Mr. Peters was active in prevailing on some here to build a ship of 300 tons. She was finished in June. One of the workmen on her, named Baker, was killed.

Friends in England to the government of Massachusetts advised, that Agents should be sent over to intercede with Parliament. The Court of Assistants, having consulted with some of the elders, proposed for such a service, Messrs. Welde of Roxbury, Hibbins of Boston, and Peters of Salem. The Governor and most of the magistrates wrote to the Church here on the subject of releasing their pastor. Mr. Endicott, one of its members, argued against granting the request, and Mr. Humphrey, another member, took a stand in opposition to him. The Church returned an answer, that they could not spare Mr. Peters.

Much difficulty had existed between two parties at Piscataqua, one of which adhered to the Rev. Mr. Knolles and the other to the Rev. Mr. Larkhan. A committee of Messrs. Bradstreet, Dalton, and Peters were sent to reconcile them. They succeeded in their object. Messrs. Dalton and Peters lost their way while on such business, wandered two days and a night in snow without food, and came near perishing.

the next winter, the Court require heads of families to employ their children and servants in the manufacture of wild hemp, which was plentiful all over the country. They took measures to form a company for trading with the Indians so as to increase their revenue. For this object they appointed three persons to receive one into their number from every town, except Boston and Charlestown, the former of which was to have three or four, and the latter two. They agreed that the company should be privileged for three years to sell every commodity, except ammunition, to the Indians, for wampom and peltry, provided they should pay into the Treasury 1-20th of all their furs, and purchase the wampom of the College, if not exceeding £25. 14th. They grant the Quarter Courts of Salem and Ipswich shall take cognizance of civil and criminal cases, except those of life, limb, or banishment, which were to be tried before the Court of Assistants at Boston. They allow appeals from the former Courts to the latter. They order, that, as money was scarce, corn, cattle, and other produce were low, servants and labourers should take their pay in articles of the country. They held out encouragement for persons in every town to search for mines. They desired the Elders to make a Catechism for youth in the grounds of religion. They repeal the law for taxing estates in England. They require that farms within the boundaries of each town should belong to it, except Medford. Here it may be remarked, that farms appear to have been taxed as separate plantations, as in the assessments to defray the expense for sending Mr. Morton to England. "The Court doth entreat leave of the Church of Salem for Mr. Peters to go for England." They propose that the principal men should meet with the Elders to deliberate on public affairs. William Hathorne was to be one of their number. As the freemen were becoming too numerous to assemble in one place for electing the Governor, Deputy, and Assistants, and as proxies were liable to be lost, the Court received a motion to be discussed at their next session, that every tenth freeman be chosen as an elector, and act for the rest.

* July 27th. Mr. Peters in a power of Attorney to his two deacons, Charles Gott and John Horn, says: "If the Lord continue my life, then I hereby do authorize them to do all my affairs, as if myself were present, as in looking into my house, to dispose of my ground, mill, and other things, as in wisdom they shall see meet."

† Aug. 3d. Hugh Peters and the other two Agents depart for England, by way of Newfoundland. Here we will take a parting view of him. ‡ He was born at Foy in Cornwall of England 1599. He was of respectable parentage. § The ancestors of his father had been driven from Antwerp for their favouring of the reformation. His mother's surname was Treffey. He entered Trinity College at 14. At this time he had a brother in Oxford. At 17 he received his first degree, and at 23 his second. While residing at the University he gave to his mother, who was reduced from affluence, an estate, which fell to him by an uncle. On going thence, he visited London. Here he received impressions of religion, which resulted in his profession of christianity. In this alteration of his views and motives, he was assisted by the counsels of Thomas Hooker, minister of Chelmsford in Essex, who afterwards fled to Holland, and thence came to this country. While residing at Chelmsford, Mr. Peters began to preach, and married his first wife, the memory of whose virtues he long cherished. He soon removed to London for the object of improving in his Theological studies. As he had already been licensed by Bishop Montain, his friends urged him to recommence his preaching before he had intended. He complied. He officiated in London. A young man who went to hear him, was so satisfied with his performances, as to become a principal means of procuring for him the lectureship of St. Sepulchre, and to pay £20 a year towards his salary. Here he taught the Gospel once a month. His audience was over 6000. Through his ministry many were turned to the Redeemer. * His popularity excited envy, and his success anger. The Act of conformity drove him to the Continent. This occurred about 1629. † He took up his abode in Rotterdam, as colleague with the celebrated Dr. William Ames, over an Independent church. Here he became an intimate friend of John Forbes, who had been forced by the Covenanters to leave a Divinity Professorship at Aberdeen. ‡ In reference to this connexion, he wrote : “ I lived near that famous Scotsman, Mr. John Forbes, with whom I travelled into Germany, and enjoyed his society in much love and sweetness constantly, from whom I received nothing but encouragement, though we differed in the way of our churches.” He also gained the strong affection of Amesius, who gave up a Professorship in Friesland for the sake of being united with him as co-pastor after Dr. Ames’ decease. § Of such a friend Mr. Peters observed : “ The learned Amesius breathed his last into my bosom.” While in Holland his labours were blessed, and he evidently shared in the esteem of the worthy. Still his heart was with the home of the Puritans. For a number of years he had engaged to some of them, that he would embark for New England. He was deeply interested in the welfare of its inhabitants, and in evangelizing the Indians. For such objects he was as strongly desirous as his particular friends, Bishop Lake and Mr. White of Dorchester. || So disposed he arrived at Boston Oct. 6, 1635. The transactions which he performed while here, and which have been recorded of him, manifest, that as he came highly respected for his intellectual powers and attainments, moral affections and character, so he continued. True, he was earnest for the discipline of Roger Williams and followers, as appears from his communication to the Dorchester church. No doubt he regretted the occasion of such a course. Ecclesiastical rules had been broken, though by a sort of necessity, and he felt himself bound to show his disapproval. He struck a blow at what the Anabaptists had been in Germany,—what he feared they might be at Providence,—but not at what they have been for many years. The occurrence did not sever the bonds of friendship between these two eminent men.—It is equally true that he took a decided stand against the opinions of Mrs. Hutchinson. * He was a witness on her trial, who laid open her views and was instrumental in occasioning her banishment. Still he appeared to be influenced by as commendable motives, as any of the principal actors in that deplorable scene. They all with the best intentions for general good, came short of the toleration, which we enjoy in these days, and which, thus far, has been followed with less evils and greater benefits, than its opposite policy. If those connected with him are esteemed, though thus mistaken, he in this respect, should be allowed to fare as well as they. In candidly putting down his deeds, while here, and balancing the account, we cannot perceive, but that it stands as fair as the account of any in the Colony, whose merits are generally remembered with respect and gratitude. Had he not sustained such a reputation, he would not have been relinquished so unwillingly as he was by his people, nor been elected at so critical a juncture by the Legislature to fill the office of Agent to England.—† In this capacity, he with his associates, was instructed to congratulate Parliament on their success; to petition them for a repeal of imposts; but not to receive any privilege of them so as to commit the Colony as an ally to them in every event. They were also desired to inform the creditors of the Colonists, that a reason, why they had delayed to forward payment, was the embarrassment of trade among them. * 1642, Aug. Linen, woollen, and other goods, as a charitable present to the Colony, valued at £500, arrived from Mr. Peters and colleagues. Sept. letters came from him and Mr. Weld with advice to the clergymen, who had been invited by members of Parliament to attend a Synod in London for settling the doctrine, liturgy, and discipline of the churches. They counselled them not to cross the Atlantic, till there was a better prospect. They were hearkened to, and thus the Colonists came not to be represented in the Westminster Assembly, which convened July 1, 1643. † Mr. Peters was unable to execute his commission so soon as he wished. In the mean while, it was his purpose to return hither. Soon after the communication about the Synod, he appears to have gone and resided in the western part of Ireland. Here he preached to Protestants and was compensated by Parliament. While thus employed, his sympathy was much excited for many, who were suffering from a civil war, which had existed between them and the Catholics. About 1643, he hastened to Holland, the sphere of his former usefulness and respectability, to obtain relief for them. ‡ By eloquence, influence, and activity he collected nearly £30,000. With this sum, so unusually large, as a charitable benefaction, for that period, he returned, and distributed it among the miserable, for whom he so magnanimously acted the part of a good Samaritan. § He came back to England. He was persuaded by the Earl of Warwick to prolong his stay. Thus he failed of revisiting his home here, for which he had strong desires, true affection, and kind wishes.—In London he found an untried channel for his benevolence. * He attended Mr. Chaloner with the precepts and consolations of the Gospel, during his confinement and at his execution, for being concerned in the Waller plot. † 1644, Jan. 2d, he performed a similar service for Sir John Hotham, who rendered him public thanks for his attention. ‡ June, being one of the Chaplains to the forces of Parliament, he came to London and related to the House the military proceedings of the Earl of Warwick. § July, Bishop Laud, having been condemned for the influence he had exerted in the civil and ecclesiastical concerns of England, Mr. Peters strove to save him. At his request, a motion was made in the Commons to release the Bishop and send him to some part of America. His exertion was ineffectual; but it fully showed, that whatever may have been his own sufferings in consequence of Laud's measures,—he had no desire for his blood as the satisfaction of revenge. || After the execution of the Bishop, the Parliament granted Mr. Peters his private library, valued at £140, which the latter designed for New England. Among the contents of this Library was a manuscript of the three last books of Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity, which had not been published. Wood, in his Athencæ Oxonienses, charges Mr. Peters with altering them so as to suit the views and purposes of Parliament. But Mr. Baxter, of better information and greater candour on this point, explicitly states, that they had undergone no such alteration. 1645, April 2d, Mr. Peters preached a Thanksgiving sermon before Parliament and the Assembly of Divines. It was entitled, "God's doings and man's duty." Its occasion was the success of the Parliamentary arms. It is replete with original, sound, and profitable remarks. Though it shows him as a supporter of rational liberty, yet it presents no proof of his rudely trampling on Royalty, with which he was afterwards charged. In one of its dedications to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, he makes a remark, which shows that the tide of slander, subsequently overwhelming him, had commenced its course. The remark is: "How I have been represented unto you and others by printing or otherwise shall not fill up this paper." Men, however worthy, who are eminently active in seasons of political or religious excitement,—are made a mark for the shafts of detraction. Candor can judge them by their real deserts, but not by the clouds of missiles, continually aimed at them. It is a frailty of human nature, in such contentions, not to spare where equity requires, but to prostrate by every possible method. * June 25th, news reached London that Bridgewater was stormed, and that Messrs. Peters and Bolles, the sabbath before, exhorted the soldiers to do their duty. July 26th, Mr. Peters brought letters from Sir Thomas Fairfax to the House, and described to them the fall of Bridgewater. They voted him £100 "for his unwearied services." Sept. 9th, he was invited before the House to describe the siege of Bristol. He pressed the desire of Sir Thomas Fairfax for more troops. Oct. 17th, he came to them with dispatches from Cromwell, concerning the capture of Winchester. They called on him for a verbal relation of its surrender. They ordered him £50. 23d, he appeared before them with information, that Dartmouth was taken. † Oct. 4th, he and Mr. Weld were recalled from England by General Court. As the result shows, they preferred to tarry there according to their right. By the advice of Mr. Weld, they had appointed other agents to succeed him and Mr. Peters the fore part of the year. ‡ 1646, Feb. 28th, Mr. Peters preached in the Market place of Torrington and persuaded many to favour the cause of Parliament. He and Mr. J. C. Berry were commissioned to treat with the Governor of Plymouth.

March 21st, he narrated to the House the capture of St. Maw's fort. They voted £100 to be settled on him and his heirs from the Earl of Worcester's estate. July 23d, the town of Worcester, having been taken, its principal inhabitants received passes of security from his hands. He desired a promise of them that they would not "bear arms against Parliament." Aug. 5th, the Government settled £200 per annum on him, and Oct. 5th, they grant him £200 more * In this month, his wife arrived at Boston, better of her derangement. She soon visited Salem. † During this year, Mr. Peters published the last Reports of the English Wars. ‡ He with Mr. Winslow prevented the charges made by non-freemen of Massachusetts against its rulers from having their intended effect. § 1647, June 19th, he had much conversation with the King at Newmarket. His Majesty observed to him, that he did not expect to perceive such solidity in him as he had; and that he would have more conversation with him. || This year he published a pamphlet called "A word for the Army and two words for the kingdom." Dec., Henry Somerset, Marquis of Worcester, died in the custody of Parliament. Mr. Peters had been active for his relief. The Marchioness, his wife, gave him a certificate when about to be tried as a Regicide: It was "I do hereby testify that in all the sufferings of my husband, Mr. Peters was my great friend." Some part of this year, he addressed the King on the subject of abolishing Hierarchy, as a means of reconciliation between him and the Parliament. His Majesty agreed to his proposal, and signed a treaty to such an import. But it was prevented from being accomplished by the Parliament's falling under the power of the army. ¶ Near this time, Sir John Denham with letters from the Queen gained access to the King through the kindness of Mr. Peters. ** 1648, March 8th, a letter remarked: "yesterday

Mr. Peters' presenting the King's petition to the Speaker, made many believe, that the King would escape." * Sept. 7th, he with Messrs. Marshall and Caryl, was requested to perform religious service before the House on the succeeding day, which was Fast. † Dec. 20th, he was desired to officiate before the same body, on the Friday following in St. Margaret's Church. His performance on this occasion appears to have been much misrepresented when he was brought to trial. 1649, January, he accompanied the King to London, who was carried thither as a prisoner. His opponents afterwards construed his attendance on this occasion, as triumphing over the fallen monarch, while he evidently did it in kindness. ‡ 20th, Mr. Peters presented the King's request to the House, that he might have one of his own chaplains to advise him on some questions of conscience. Dr. Juxon was accordingly allowed to be with his Majesty till his execution on the 30th. § 21st, Mr. Peters preached before the High Court, and on the 28th in St. James Chapel. The sermons he delivered on these days were afterwards unfavourably exaggerated at the time of his trial. From the manner, in which the witnesses were encouraged by the Court to speak of such sermons, and from their impression, as royalists, that treason was in every word and act, which were opposed to the oppressive conduct of a King, they must have described them far from the whole truth. There can be little doubt but that he spoke freely against the Monarchy which was above the reach of law. He was no manager behind the curtain. He strove to embrace no principles, which he should be ashamed to declare in the ears of the world. If in the circumstances, with which he was surrounded, he should not have expressed himself so as to offend the friends of Royalty,—it would have been extraordinary. Could he have had a fair hearing, and been allowed to produce witnesses of the Parliamentary party, his words would not have come down to us with the distortions, which now disfigure them. It is granted that he may have drawn comparisons and let fall epithets, which would bear hard on the royal cause. * He himself lamented that he had errors. He however declares, that he did not knowingly cherish them. † March 8th, Lord George Goring was condemned for waging war in favour of the Crown; but he was soon reprieved through the intercession of Mr. Peters. 9th, James, Marquis of Hamilton, was executed for contending against Parliament. Mr. Peters strove to have him spared; but his compassionate endeavours were fruitless. ‡ Sept. 27th, letters came from Mr. Peters to the Council, which stated that their fleet had sailed for Ireland. § It appears that he had gone thither with Cromwell. || 27th, the Council received another communication from him, respecting the success of Cromwell's forces. Whitlock remarks of him, that "he had a Brigade against the rebels, and came off with honour and victory, and the like was not expected from him." It may appear strange to some, that Mr. Peters should have so united the military with the clerical character. This is the only time he is known to have stepped so far out of his professional course. True, he had much to do as a reporter to Parliament, concerning the operations of their army and navy. Still his chaplainship kept him from leading soldiers to battle, with the exception mentioned. To look at the case properly, we should reflect, that it was the custom, when he acted as a commander, for Cromwell and his officers to preach and fight. ¶ On this point the Protector wrote to Col. Hacker under date of Dec. 25th, 1650: "Truly I think he that prays and preaches best will fight best. I bless God to see any in this army able and willing to impart the knowledge they have for the good of others. I expect it will be encouraged by all chief officers in this army especially." Mr. Peters did no more than has been done by others of his profession. Clergymen in our own nation have occasionally headed detachments to repel an enemy, and have been much applauded for such a manifestation of their patriotism. The very historians who reproached Mr. Peters for the deed under consideration, praised the Rev. Dr. Walker for defending Londonderry against James II. Dr. Williams, Archbishop of York, for ably defending Conway castle against the forces of Parliament, and Chillingworth, the noted Divine, for bearing arms to support Charles I. and acting as an engineer at the siege of Gloucester. Let not these remarks be understood to plead the expediency of preachers' becoming soldiers; but to show, that if others are approved for acting a part similar to the part of Mr. Peters, his reputation should not be drowned with a millstone of prejudice, while theirs is crowned with the commendation of favour. * Returning from Ireland, Mr. Peters fell dangerously ill. He was left under the care of Dr. Young ten weeks. This physician was instrumental in restoring him. He was a staunch royalist. He however pretended to be on the side of Mr. Peters. Thus he acted as a spy. His own relation was: "I observed in him (Peters) that he had some secret thoughts, that I could not well discover, neither well understand; whereupon I thought it might tend to my security, that I should so much sympathize with him to get within him to know his intentions." Capable of such management, he was a chief witness against Mr. Peters when on trial. Representations from a person of his cast would not be generally accounted candid and correct. The bias and purpose of his mind in reference to Mr. Peters, while supposing himself protected by a friend, were calculated to give him unfavourable impressions of his sick guest. * 1650, March 25th, Mr. Peters made a proposal to the inhabitants of Milford about "taking of the Ingagement." This was undoubtedly a declaration of faithfulness to Parliament. † 1651, he published "A good work for a good Magistrate." ‡ 1652, Jan. 20th, the Parliament selected 21 persons to consider the abuses of the national laws and report accordingly. Mr. Peters was one of their number. Though he spoke of himself very modestly as to such an office, yet others, capable of judging, believed him to be sufficient for its duties. § May 20th, in a letter to his agents of this town he says: "I wish you all good, and pray you to sell my mill house, or what you will that may be parted with." His agents evidently had difficulty in making his estate productive enough for paying its taxes. || In the fore part of 1653, the Dutch, having their navy almost destroyed by the British fleet under Admiral Blake, sent ambassadors to England for a compromise of differences. To accomplish their object, the ambassadors applied for aid to Mr. Peters, who was noted and honoured in their own country. They empowered him to offer £300,000 for peace. His effort in their behalf was not then successful. ¶ July 11th, an intercepted letter of this date for Holland says: "Mr. Peters prays and preaches for peace. On last Thanksgiving day he told them, that God Almighty had punished them long enough for their sins, especially for their pride, covetousness, ambition, discord, ingratitude, and unmercifulness to the poor, which are sins, that do reign to some purpose in this nation." Such a discourse shows Mr. Peters to have been no time-server even among his best friends. Sept. 26th, a letter from Holland states: Mr. "Peters (who I believe is an honest man) doth correspond at Amsterdam with Mrs. Grace Crisp concerning State affairs, which letters are communicated to

Mr. John Webster, a profest malignant ; great mischief can be done to the Commonwealth." However the writer of this extract disapproved of Mr. Peters' correspondence, lest it should be turned to a bad account, yet he could not but compliment him with a trait of character, which eminently belonged to him. Nov. 21st, a letter from Jongestall to Frederic, Count de Nassau, remarks : " Mr. Peters hath written a letter to the Queen (of Sweden) by Lord Whetlocke, wherein he relates the reasons why they put their King to death, and dissolved this last Parliament." 1654, Feb. 18th, a letter of this date was forwarded to the Commissioners of the United Colonies by Mr. Steel, President of the Society for propagating the Gospel among the Indians of New England. In it he represents Mr. Peters as being one of a committee to collect funds for the Society in the Army ; as being doubtful about its success ; and as not active for its promotion. Mr. Steel then observes : " We have otherwise charitable thoughts of Mr. Peters." There is reason to believe, from Mr. Peters' own declaration and from his readiness for beneficent enterprise, that he sincerely wished that the Indians of this country might be evangelized. Though he mistook in the supposition, that then was not a suitable time to prosecute so commendable a work, yet there is no conclusive proof, that he was unfriendly to its success. * The Dutch, having met with another naval defeat from the English, renewed their application to Mr. Peters, that he would intercede for them so that they might have peace. He accordingly obtained their wish from Cromwell May 2d. Stubbs, in his account of the Dutch war, had an engraved representation of the ambassadors, offering their petition to Hugh Peters. † March 20th, Cromwell appointed a number of persons to license candidates for the ministry. They were called Friers. Mr. Peters was one of them. Mr. Baxter relates: "They did abundance of good to the Church." * July 12th, Roger Williams wrote to John Winthrop, jr., that he had visited his father in law, Peters, at his lodgings in Whitehall. He proceeds to observe: "His wife lives from him; not wholly but much distracted. He tells me he had but £200 a year, and he allowed her £80 per annum of it. He told me that his affliction from his wife stirred him to action abroad, and when success tempted him to pride, the bitterness of his bosom comforts was a cooler and a bridle to him." † At the commencement of 1655, Mr. Peters was deeply interested for the relief of the persecuted Protestants in Switzerland. For the £38,000 contributed in England and forwarded to them by Cromwell, he was an earnest and successful solicitor. ‡ July 1, Lockhart writes to Secretary Thurloe: "Mr. Peters is arrived and hath acquainted me with some things that he saith your Lordship hath been fully acquainted with. I shall pray that his proposals may prosper and be acceptable to all good men." § 8th, Mr. Peters related to the Government what had occurred at Mardike and Dunkirk. He had accompanied Col. Lockhart's forces to the latter place, which had been lately surrendered by the French to the English. That officer wrote to Secretary Thurloe under date of July 8th. Among his remarks he says: "I would not suffer our worthy friend Mr. Peters to come away from Dunkirk without a testimony of the great benefits we have all received from him in this place." He concludes: "It were superfluous to tell your Lordship the story of our present condition either as to the civil government or the works of the soldiery. He (Peters) who hath studied all these more than any I know here, can certainly give the best account of them." In a P. S. he stated that Mr. Peters had visited Berg, and conversed three or four times with Cardinal Mazarine.

These interviews were most likely on national affairs. * 1660, Feb. 6th, news having reached this country, that Mr. Peters was deceased, Roger Williams wrote to John Winthrop jr. : " Sir, you were not long since the son of two noble fathers, Mr. John Winthrop and Mr. H. Peters. It is said they are both extinguished. Surely, I did ever, from my soul, honour and love them, even when their judgments led them to afflict me." This direct testimony as to Mr. Peters ought to have more weight than all the epithets of scandal charged upon him by the mouths and pens of his political foes. * Oct. 13th, Charles II. having come to the throne and imprisoned Mr. Peters and others, ordered them to be tried on the charge of compassing the death of his father. The tribunal before which he stood was plainly partial. The Lord Chief Justice Baron and the Solicitor, treated him as guilty before his cause was through. Their remarks upon him were calculated to mislead the Jury, who were habitually prejudiced against every anti-loyalist. They encouraged the witnesses to make the strongest representations, unfavourable to him, from the impression, that nothing could be too severe for one, who had dared speak and act in opposition to a King. His accusers weighed him in the balance of royalty, and described him as greatly wanting. With views of government, almost entirely different from his, they would of course testify against him. There was even an attempt to prove that Mr. Peters beheaded the King with his own hand. But by the only witness, whom he summoned, and who lived with him when Charles I. was put to death, but who was now in the national service, he showed that he was confined to his bed with sickness the very hours before, at, and after his Majesty's execution. When inquired of if he heard an accusation against him, he answered : " Some part I did, but it is impossible for me to bear down many witnesses.

† Trial of Regicides.

Indeed, my Lord, I say this, they are marvelously uncharitable, and speak many false things." Taking into consideration all the circumstances of his trial, there is cause to believe, that he acted with as upright motives in taking side with Parliament, as the best of our country's patriots did in the Revolution. The same Court which were inveterate against him, would have been equally so against them, if held in their day, and possessing authority over them. His opinions of civil liberty were essentially the same with those of the most eminent men in Massachusetts and other colonies, who were his cotemporaries. But here a question presents itself, about which there have been various impressions. It is :—Was he immediately concerned in the King's execution? In looking over the course he pursued, there is cause to answer negatively. Consider how earnest and unwearied he was to save the condemned friends of his Majesty. Reflect how he strove to bring about a reconciliation between him and Parliament, and which would have been effected, had not the army prevented his benevolent purpose. Think how he petitioned for his life to Parliament, after a motion had been made in this body for bringing him to the block. Take into view his own words: "I had so much respect to his Majesty, particularly at Windsor, that I propounded to his Majesty my own thoughts three ways to prevent himself from danger, which were good as he was pleased to think, though they did not succeed." Especially take into the account what he wrote, in the advice he left for his daughter, when no misrepresentation could benefit him, and death was to be his speedy portion: "I never had hand in contriving or acting his (the King's) death, as I am scandalized, but the contrary. I was never in any cabal. I hated it, thinking all governments should lie open to all." * He was neither of the 70 commissioners, appointed to try his Majesty, nor of the 59 who signed his death warrant. Dr. Barwick asserts, that the charge of being a Regicide could not be proved against him. Oldmixon, in his impartial history of the Stuarts, declares, that Mr. Peters “was not at all concerned in the King’s death.” These considerations are enough to convince every impartial mind, that he had no concern in taking away the life of Charles I. The Chief Baron remarked to him, that were he innocent as to his Majesty’s death yet his siding with Parliament, was enough to bring him in guilty as a traitor. This was evidently the most, which could with justice be charged upon him. Had he taken the stand of Milton, the immortal poet, who wrote to justify the execution of Charles I., there would have been greater propriety in his being regarded as a regicide, than there really is. As to the part which he did act, he felt himself as much justified, as our fathers did when declaring themselves opposed to George II. In reference to it, he remarks : * “I confess I did what I did strenuously ; was never angry with any for being of the King’s party ; and thought the authority of Parliament lawful.” In such openness and energy he was careful to avoid extremes. He observes, with respect to his friend, Lord Grey : “I advised him against the spirit of levelling.” But notwithstanding his case was as here represented, verdict was brought in for his condemnation. The account of his trial shows, that he was candid to acknowledge what he had done and deny what he had not. It exhibits him as possessing a dignity and heroism, founded on religious principle, which raised him above the purposes and misrepresentation of opponents, though subjecting him to the death of the body. The next day, being Sabbath, after sentence was pronounced on him, he preached to his associates in suffering in Newgate Chapel. His text was 42d Psalm, 11 verse. The doctrine drawn from it was : “ The best of God’s people are apt to be desponding.” The substance of his discourse indicates, that piety was his source of consolation and support. While confined in the Tower, he had written advice to his daughter, which was delivered to her a short time before his execution. This little book contains much good sense, sound religion, and beneficial counsel. Wherein it differs from the style of the present age, it mainly agreed with the style of its own age. A night or two before he suffered, two clergymen, reported to have been chaplains of Charles II., waited on him, and encouraged him to confess that he had done wrong in advocating the cause of Parliament, by the offer of pardon. But he replied, that he could make no such recantation. On the 16th he was drawn upon a sledge to Charing Cross, and placed so as to see the execution of his worthy friend, Mr. Cook, Solicitor General. While there a person came and reviled him with compassing the King’s death. He answered : “ Friend, you do not well to trample on a dying man ; you are greatly mistaken ; I had nothing to do in the death of the King.” When Mr. Cook was taken down and about to be quartered, the sheriff brought Mr. Peters to look at him. The hangman rubbed his bloody hands before him and asked : “ How do you like this Mr. Peters ?” He firmly replied : “ Thank God, I am not terrified ; do your worst.” He bent a piece of gold, and desired a byestander to carry it to his daughter and inform her that he was at peace and should be with God before it reached her. When on the ladder he observed to the executioner ; “ You meant to terrify me by the slaughter of one servant of God ; but it has been divinely ordered for mine encouragement.” When about to die, he said : “ This is a good day ; He is come, that I have long looked for, and I shall be with him in glory,” and “ so smiled when he went away.” His body was quartered, and his head placed on London Bridge. Thus died Hugh Peters, aged 61. Speaking of him and his companions in suffering, Goldsmith observes: "They bore the scorn of the multitude and the cruelty of the executioner not simply with fortitude, but with the spirit and confidence of Martyrs, who suffered for having done their duty."— Here it becomes us to examine, in a short compass, the general character of Hugh Peters. Will it shine brighter, the harder it is rubbed by the hand of truth? It will. True, it has been greatly tarnished by historians, who wished to find it blackened, because they regarded Charles I. as the Counsellors of Cambyses did him, when they said: "Though there be a written law, the Persian Kings may do what they please." Let his reputation be brought into contact with facts and correct principles, and there is no need to fear, that it will suffer. Look at him from his youth to his tragic end. The threadbare story of his being whipped and expelled from College is absolutely disproved by his having taken two degrees at regular intervals. The report of his having been a Stage Player has no countenance from his pursuits, which can be traced from his early days to the close of his life. When in the Tower he was accused of unchastity. To a friend, conversing with him on such a charge, he said with every appearance of truth, that he blessed the Lord, he was wholly clear from every iniquity of this kind. The single reflection that while in England, Holland, America and Ireland he was beloved by the best of men; that for nearly 19 years he was highly esteemed by the Parliamentary and Cromwell administrations, which, however charged with fanaticism, were careful to encourage no vicious person, shows that he must have been a man of more than common integrity. As to the strictures, made on him for declining the office of collector for missionary funds, and acting as a Brigade General on one occasion, what has been already stated, should place him on as good a footing as others are, who have acted similarly and still are remembered with esteem. There certainly can be no sufficient folly and crime in them to overshadow the light of his good name. Even in our own land he has been considered by worthy men as fiery, cruel, weak, and ignorant. If the first trait means, that he was unusually passionate and rash, it finds no authority from his real actions. As to the second, it is equally unsupported. In genuine, active and untiring benevolence to those of other parties and other nations, as well as his own, he stood pre-eminent. To pronounce such a person weak and ignorant, who was greatly esteemed by some of the most worthy on both sides of the Atlantic, who had great opportunities for improving his mind, who was closely allied in friendship with superior scholars, and long entrusted with offices, requiring extensive knowledge, prudence, and abilities, is contrary to past experience, and to what any would suppose, who deliberately examined his life. Such charges can only be accounted for on the supposition, that they were set down with the memory fixed on the mistatements of his adversaries, and not on his real character. In his domestic relations, he was worthy of imitation. In his clerical connexions, he was faithful, able, eloquent, affectionate, and successful. Speaking of his labours in Salem, he observes: * "I had a flock to whom I was ordained, who were worthy of my life and labours." In his social concerns, public good was a chief object of his wishes, plans, purposes and endeavours. On this subject he remarks: † "I looked after three things. One was that there might be sound religion. The second was, that learning and laws might be maintained. The third that the poor might be cared for. I must confess that I have spent much of my time in these things." On an impartial review of the preceding facts and remarks, there is reason to acknowledge that the character of Mr. Hugh Peters stands forth in the bold relief of excellence. There is no intention to assert, that it is perfect in every minute proportion, and beautiful in every tint. This would be to claim more for him than falls to the lot of mortals. But there is a sincere belief, that he was as far removed from faults, and possessed as many virtues, as the most of his day, whose reputation we cherish with more than ordinary respect and esteem. The tribute rendered to these, should not be withheld from him.—As to his person, he was above the common stature, thin, erect and muscular. His countenance was open, energetic, independent, benevolent and striking. His miniature likeness appears, according to the custom of his age, with a grown beard on the upper lip, and part of one on the chin. He left a second wife and a daughter in London, who soon came to Massachusetts. They were kindly received by his brother William, in Boston. The former lived to an advanced age. The latter was married to a respectable gentleman of Newport, R. I. He also had a daughter who was married to Gov. Winthrop of Connecticut. March 1st, as an adventure to England for purchasing needed commodities. With respect to this subject, they remark, that wheat was likely to become the staple commodity of Massachusetts. They forbid it to be used in bread or malt. They probably took such a step to secure a load for the ship of Capt. Gibbons. They issue strict orders for vessels to be built with proper form, materials and faithfulness. They appoint Messrs. Endicott, Downing and Hathorne to "dispose of all lands and other things at Cape Ann." Nov. 4th. The Court appoint a day of fasting for the necessities of the Colony and the perils of England. They agree that a proposition for Deputies to be chosen annually, should be laid before the freemen of every town. In connexion with this matter remarks were made, which show, that there were certainly three Regiments. Under date of May 6th, 1639, Winthrop records, "two Regiments in the Bay were mustered at Boston, to the number of 1000 soldiers." Referring to this statement, the American Annals give an incorrect impression, that there were only such a number of regiments and soldiers in all Massachusetts. The mistake appears to have arisen from supposing, that the phrase, "in the Bay," comprised all parts of the Colony, when in fact, it excluded the towns in Essex. There can be little doubt but that the military forces of Massachusetts, were, at least, one third more than stated in those valuable Annals. The Court designate the Governor and William Hathorne to obtain of Mr. Ward a copy of Liberties and Capital Laws, in order that they might be laid before every town. They voted "that if the town of Salem lend the Glass men £30, they shall be allowed it again out of their next rate. And the Glass men to repay it, if the work succeed, when they are able." It seems from this, and several references in the Town Records, that a Factory for glass had been set up in this place. The Court authorize Messrs. Endicott, Downing and Hathorne, to get 19 copies of the Laws, Liberties, and Forms of Oaths, written off, and to subscribe them with their own hands; and resolved that no copies should be authentic, which were without the signature of those three. They require the copies to be prepared in six weeks, and the constable of every town to pay 10s. for one of them. They appoint Ralph Fogg to grant summons and attachments in civil actions for Salem. * Dec. To save the Colony expense in civil actions, the General Court order that either the plaintiff or defendant shall pay costs, as he shall be in fault. They leave it optional with each town about sending one Deputy next session. They dismiss William Hathorne till they should request his presence. † A censure of this sort seems to have been occasioned by his proposing to other Deputies the expediency "of leaving out two of their most ancient Magistrates." This proposition was severely handled by Mr. Cotton the next lecture day.

About this time, John Woodbury died. He was one of the first settlers. He left the world in the course of usefulness. Hubbard informs us, that before Mr. Endicott's arrival, he went as agent to England for supplies. He seems to have returned soon. Jan. 4th, 1636, the town granted him 200 acres of land on Bass River, where he took up his residence. He was continually selected to transact business for the town, as selectman, surveyor, and in other capacities. He served several sessions as Deputy. He was on committees of the Colony. He and his wife Agnes were both members of the First Church. The Planters Marsh, by Shallop Cove, is supposed to have been so called after him and his associates. From the active part he took in the settlement and transactions of the Colony, Mr. Woodbury was an energetic, faithful and worthy man. He lived to see that his perils, sufferings, and toils had contributed to prepare a refuge for his countrymen. Though his deeds are not gilded with the splendor of false estimation, yet, for their object and results, they deserve our sincere regard and approbation.

* April 14th. A Fast was observed for difficulties in England and Ireland and the necessities of the Colony.

† May 2d. A fine of 20s. was to be imposed on all who cut trees, within this town, except on their own land, and for buildings, fences, or ships.

‡ 18th. General Court of Elections meet. They choose Mr. Endicott Deputy Governor. Messrs. Hathorne and Batter were deputies.

§ One Fairfield, for aggravated unchastity, was sentenced to be severely whipped at Boston and Salem; to have his nostrils slit and seared; to wear a halter visibly about his neck for life; and to be scourged and fined every time he should be seen without it; and be confined at Boston neck on pain of death, if attempting to escape. Some years afterwards, he and his wife and children were permitted to leave the Colony.

|| June 14th. General Court order that the Selectmen of each Town oversee the parents and masters, who fail to take suitable care of their families and property; and have the children of such persons instructed and employed in working on hemp and flax. They appoint Mr. Batter on a committee to lay a tax of £800. Salem stood third and was assessed £75. The Court designate the 20th of July as a Fast for the difficulties of the colonies, foul sins broken out among the people, and distractions of England, Ireland, Holland and other kingdoms of Europe. As preparation for foes, they require every town to have one large or several small houses prepared within 6 months for the manufacture of salt petre. They enact, that a Book, introduced to members of their body last session by Wm. Hathorne, written by Richard Saltonstall, and containing arguments against the Standing Council, should be submitted to the Elders for advice. They require each town to send one or two delegates to Salem the 4th of February, for nominating Magistrates to be chosen next Court of Elections.

* Aug. The profit on merchandize from London to Massachusetts was 16 per. cent.

† Sept. 8th. General Court sits. Messrs. Hathorne and Batter were Deputies. As they understood that there was a conspiracy among the Indians against the colonies, they pass an order to seize the powder and arms of those, who traded with the Indians. They enact that soldiers, disobeying their officers, shall not only be fined, but also be set in the bilboes, or stocks, or be whipped. In view of the continual dangers to which the people were exposed from Indian plots, they make regulations as to alarms, and order "that every town provide a sufficient place for retreat for their wives and children to repair to as likewise to keep safe the ammunition thereof;" that arms be repaired and watches kept from sun set to sun rise. They grant four barrels of powder to Salem. They set wheat and barley at 4s., rye and peas 3s. 4d., and Indian corn 2s. 6d. a bushel, for rates. They clear Mr. Hathorne from further accountability for introducing Mr. Saltonstall's book. Mr. Norris of this place wrote against it, and vindicated the continuance of the Standing Council. The Court say as "oft occasions of trading with the Hollanders at Dutch plantations, the Holland ducatoon at three guilders shall pass current at 6s.; six dollars at 2 1-2, guilders at 5s. and the rial of 8 at 5s." They designate Mr. Garford to see that each family or several families together in Salem make salt petre at a fair price for public use. They constitute Mr. Endicott and other Magistrates, with the teaching Elders of the six next adjoining towns, the Corporation of Harvard College. They raise a committee to meet in Salem the 3d of January to nominate Magistrates. They appoint the Magistrates and Deputies in and around Boston as a committee to treat with similar bodies from Plymouth, New-Haven, and Connecticut, on the subject of combining against the Indians. * The Deputies, contrary to custom and wishes of the Magistrates, chose Mr. Rogers of Rowley to preach the Election sermon. An alarm reached this place that the Indians were near Boston. It proved false. On the first of this month the Magistrates had ordered the Indians in the Colony to be disarmed.

Sept. 22d. Fast was appointed because of contention between the King and Parliament, and plots of the Indians. So gloomy were the prospects of the country at this time, many sought other abodes. Some went to the Dutch on Long Island, and others to the West-Indies and England. John Humphrey, who had been a magistrate, and † had united with the Church here Jan. 16th, 1638, was among them. He embarked for England.

‡ Oct. 9th. Among the first class of graduates from Cambridge College, was George, the son of Emanuel Downing. He had been fitted for College by Rev. John Fisk.

§ At this date a vessel of 200 tons, which had been built here during the Summer, appears to have sailed with pipe staves and other commodities for Fayal.

18th. The Elders of this and other towns convened at Ipswich, with reference to Mr. Saltonstall's book. They decided, that it deserved no censure as ill timed, or hurtful, but well intended.

Dec. 12th. News arrived, that a civil war had commenced between the King and Parliament.

* In the course of this year, Mr. John Fisk moved to Enon, a part of this place, but afterwards Wenham. He gathered a church, which, on a second trial, were regularly constituted Oct. 8th, 1644. He had a salary not above £40. He gave the congregation ten acres of land. In 1656, he removed to Chelmsford with a majority of his church. † There he was active as a preacher and physician. At the earnest request of his people, he wrote a Catechism for their children. 1671, Feb. 14th, he was called to part with an excellent wife, to whom he had been married in England. So great was her acquaintance with the Bible, she was called "the Concordance." He was remarried to Mrs. Elizabeth Hinchman, the widow of his early friend and countryman, in 1672. After being the guide of his last Congregation for twenty years, he was called to rest from his labours, Jan. 14th, 1676, aged about 75. Gen. John Fisk, of Salem, was his great grandson. He not only seemed, but was an ornament of the religion he taught.

‡ February. On account of civil war in England a Fast was ordered.

§ 27th. As the General Court had lent £8 to the poor of Salem, it promised to refund the sum "the next Indian corn harvest." 27th. The boundaries were agreed on by committees between Salem and Ipswich. Among the committee for the latter town was Wm. Hubbard, father of the New-England historian.

|| May 3d. General Court assembles. Mr. Endicott was re-elected Deputy Governor. William Hathorne and Edmund Batter were deputies. Dispatches from Parliament gave the Court welcome information, that Colonial vessels might trade with England free of duties. This liberal policy had its intended effect to win the Colonists over to the side of Parliament. The Court choose William Hathorne on a committee of six to meet similar bodies from New-Haven, Connecticut and Plymouth. * The two first and Massachusetts adopted articles of confederation the 19th. Plymouth did the same Sept. 7th. † Rhode Island was not admitted, because she declined to come under the jurisdiction of Plymouth. They which joined in the confederacy were called United Colonies of New-England. They imitated the Union among the Dutch Provinces in Europe. They were to have their individual jurisdictions distinct and entire. In all matters, whether in peace or war, which related to their general good, they agreed to be governed by the decision of the majority of the commissioners, whom they should choose. Such a coalition had been agitated five years before. It proved useful. It continued till 1636. ‡ The Court require each town to give an account of its males from 16 to 60, commencing the first of August. They order churches to deal with their members who neglect to become freemen. They order that military officers in each town, shall designate the arms, which must be brought to the house of worship on the Sabbath or other seasons of meeting. They grant Enon to be separated from Salem, be called Wenham, and priviledged to send a Deputy. They divide Massachusetts into four shires or counties instead of three. The new county, they called Norfolk, which was taken from Essex, and comprised Salisbury, Hampton, Haverhill, Exeter, Dover, Strawberry Bank or Portsmouth. Salisbury became the chief town of Norfolk at the General Court, commencing May 2d, 1649. The towns still constituting Essex were Salem, Lynn, Wenham, Ipswich, Rowley, Newbury, Gloucester, and Chochichawick or

Andover. The two other counties were Middlesex and Suffolk. The Court appoint June 1st, as a day of humiliation for the sad condition of England. Members of the Court and the Elders were desired to give their views about the negative vote, which was confirmed in 1634. Such a vote was exercised by the magistrates with respect to a case, concerning a sow, in 1636. The consequence was, that by this year the whole Colony was in a ferment. The deputies and people were earnest for the negative voice of the magistrates to be done away. Those in opposition to them contended, that if they gained their object, the government would become a democracy. To allay the violence of public feeling, the opinion of such, as have been mentioned, was requested. The Court decided, that this part of the Magistrate's oath, "You shall bear true faith and allegiance to our Sovereign Lord, King Charles," should be omitted. The cause assigned, for such a conclusion was, that Charles "had violated the privileges of Parliament and made war upon them, and thereby had lost much of his kingdom and many of his subjects." This shows that Massachusetts and Parliament harmonized in political views. It was, however, to be visited with the scourge of restored Royalty. The Court order, that in the election of Assistants, Indian Beans should be used instead of paper, the white to be affirmative and the black negative votes. Among articles for general defence, they require the "pike and corslet." They receive a proposal for the choice of Deputies once a year. They renew liberty to settle a village near Ipswich, as granted Sept. 4th, 1639. They make the grant to Messrs. Endicott, Bradstreet, Symonds, Whittingham, William Pain, Robert Pain and others, both of Salem and Ipswich. The village was undoubtedly Topsfield. By remarks, in connexion with the grant, it appears that preaching had been maintained there for two years. The Court assent that regulations about planting, sowing and "feeding corn fields," shall be amended. They require deputies from Essex and Norfolk, to assemble in Salem to agree on a Serjeant Major General of Massachusetts, and a Serjeant Major for every "Shire or Regiment," and report to the freemen of their respective towns. They order a similar step to be taken in the other two counties. The officers mentioned, were to be chosen at the Court of Elections.

* June 12th. Lady Deborah Moody, who had purchased Mr. Humphrey's plantation, was admonished by the Church here, († of which she became a member April 5th, 1640,) for denying infant baptism. She held to her opinion. To avoid further difficulty she moved to the Dutch on Long Island, where she exerted considerable influence. She was afterwards excommunicated by the Salem Church. Many others, embracing her ideas on baptism, removed from the Colony and followed her.

‡ 19th. Mr. Endicott wrote to Gov. Winthrop, that it was well for La Tour to receive no public aid, until he had cleared up the matter of capturing the pinnace and goods of Mr. Allerton; and that the men with him ought not to examine the fortifications, as they had done. After July 14th, when the principal men of Ipswich wrote so as to grieve Gov. Winthrop, because he was in favour of assisting La Tour, for the object of weakening D'Aulnay, Mr. Endicott sent him a consolatory letter; and in it excuses himself from "coming to Boston about the Dutch business." This business appears to have been in reference to an answer, which Wm. Kieft, the Dutch Governor, requested about some persons from New-Haven, with whom he had difficulty.

† Nov. 3d. Samuel Gorton and eight of his followers, who had been brought from their territory near Providence, were condemned for alleged errors of belief and conduct. They were to wear irons, work, and be confined in different towns. If propagating their doctrines or attempting to escape, they were to suffer death. Francis Weston, formerly of this place, was among them. He was confined at Dorchester. Randal Holden, another of them, was confined in this town. As they were found to spread their opinions, they were allowed, March 7th, 1644, to leave the Colony in fourteen days. ‡ Sept. 13, 1646, they came from England, and, by an order from Parliament, were permitted to pass through Massachusetts, and resume their former estates.

was chosen Governor. Messrs. Hathorne and Downing were Deputies. William Hathorne was elected Speaker of the Deputies. Such an office appears to have now commenced. The Legislature appoint Messrs. Downing and Hathorne, of this place, and Robert Bridges, of Lynn, associates for the Quarterly Court. They choose, as successors to Messrs. Winthrop and Dudley, Messrs. Bradstreet and Hathorne, commissioners, to meet with those of the other Colonies, at Hartford, 5th of September. As divisions were taking place in reference to the King and Parliament, the Court state, that the Parliament were only "against the malignant papists and delinquents," of England, but not the King, and, therefore, they forbid any to declare themselves for the King against the Parliament. * There was a strong party among the Deputies to make Essex the seat of government, instead of Suffolk. They were defeated by the Assistants. The Deputies exerted themselves to choose a Board for transacting public business in the recess of General Court, and thus assign to them the duties, which had been performed by the Magistrates. But in this they were also foiled.

About June 1st, an adjourned meeting of Magistrates and Elders took place in Salem, in reference to La Tour. They were much disposed to favour him; but concluded to request some explanations of his rival D'Aulnay, before they should decide. There are few more romantic portions of history than that which relates the enmity, stratagems, combats and adventures of these two French chiefs. Another case of general interest before the Magistrates and Elders, was the capture of a vessel, in Boston harbour, from Bristol, a port in favour of the King, by Capt. Stagg, in a ship of 24 guns, from London, commissioned by Parliament. A majority of them decided that he might retain his prize. They pass sentence of death on one Franklin, of Roxbury, for being the means of a charity boy's death, who had come from England last year. He was executed, though he had his case, at a previous trial, put over till another Quarter Court of Assistants.

28th. At a special General Court, measures were adopted to lessen the perilous misunderstanding, which existed between the Magistrates and Deputies, about the former's right to act as they had done in Colonial affairs, when the latter were not in session.

* July 7th. "Ordered, that twoe be appointed every Lord's day to walk forth in time of God's worshippinge, to take notice of such as either lye about the meeting house, without attending to the word or ordinances, or that lye at home or in the fields without giving good account thereof, and to take the names of such persons, and to present them to the magistrate, whereby they may be accordingly proceeded against."

† Aug. 27th. An order was issued that the house, formerly occupied by Mr. Skelton, should be taken down, lest it should fall on the children and cattle. Joseph Belknap was presented for not permitting his child to be baptized, and ordered to be imprisoned in Boston. The same person, Nov. 30th, 1651, was presented for leaving the meeting house in time of baptism.

‡ Sept. 30th. Essex. They order the County Courts to have the Indians taught the knowledge and worship of God and to be civilized. They pass a law against the Anabaptists, which required them to be banished, unless they renounced their opinions. *The Assistants had enacted a similar law previously. † As suggested by the Commissioners of the United Colonies, the Court request the Deputies and Elders to use their influence, that every family allow one peck of corn or 12d. in money, or other commodity, to be sent into the Treasurer of Cambridge College, or where in Boston or Charlestown, he shall appoint. Salem, being one of the twelve towns, which had not received their share of Mr. Andrews' donation, the Court order for it £5 or a cow. They require that Mr. Downing be credited for money paid into the Treasury, and that he give an account of the children taken into the ship and their names, and also where they were landed and to whom they were delivered. It appears by this, that he was agent for the benevolent individuals of London, ‡ who in 1643 sent over twenty poor children and were going to transport more by means of money contributed for such a purpose. § He was appointed to obtain charges from England against Thomas Morton, who had returned to Massachusetts, and been tried for his conduct while absent. This person was imprisoned about a year, fined £100, which he was unable to pay, and then released. He went to Agamenticus in Maine, and there died in obscurity. Replies from the Elders to questions about the power of Magistrates and Deputies, were read before the Court. They were approved. They became a means of calming the violence of animosity, which had prevailed, and of affording to the government greater definiteness and strength.

The next day, after leaving the Island, they were pursued by hostile Indians. The Governor and Assistants sent a request to D'Aulnay to give up the vessel and cargo. They agreed to relinquish Mr. Norris from preaching the Election sermon, lest greater difficulty should be made between them and the Deputies, who had chosen Mr. Norton for such a service. They concluded to give up their negative voice, on condition that the Deputies did not exceed them in number, and that the Deputies were "prime men of the country." * May 3d. General Court assemble. Mr. Endicott was succeeded as Governor by Mr. Dudley. He was chosen an Assistant and Serjeant Major General of the Colony. William Hathorne and Henry Bartholomew were Deputies. The Court order, that youth, from 10 to 16 years old, shall be trained by an officer of each company on muster days, in the use of small guns, half pikes, and also of bows and arrows, lest the Colony should be destitute of powder. They invited individuals of every town to purchase shares in an Iron Work Company, commenced two years before with funds from England, brought over by John Winthrop, jun. They enact, that any person, making and publishing false reports, shall be fined 10s. or put in the stocks; and for the second offence have the fine doubled or be whipped. As woollen cloth was scarce on account of the European wars, and many had suffered for want of it, the Court require each town to preserve and increase its sheep; and that friends of the Colony, who should be coming from England, be written to, and desired to bring over all the sheep they could. For tonnage or anchorage of foreign vessels, they assess 6d. a ton. Winthrop tells us, that this regulation was soon altered, as to vessels under the Parliament's flag, because they had taken all imposts from the Colony's vessels. The Court allow Jeffrey's Creek to be called Manchester. They raised County committees for drawing up a body of laws and presenting them for consideration next session. The Essex committee were six, of whom was William Hathorne. The Court chose six commissioners to see about "the French business." Mr. Hathorne was one of them. The Court received a petition from Messrs. Endicott, Hathorne, Lothrop, Dixy and Clark, of this town, and others of Lynn, to form a company for promoting the "military art." They were similarly petitioned from other towns. They laid a rate of £616 15. Salem's part was £45, and it stood fourth. They allow the tax to be paid in cattle, beaver, money, or wheat at 4s., barley 4s6. rye and peas 3s6, corn 2s8 a bushel. It appears from their records, that Mr. Endicott's salary, as Governor, for the last year was £100.

* About this time, as there was more encouragement abroad than at home for young men of education, Francis, son of Mr. Higginson, and George, son of Mr. Downing, leave Salem. The former, † who had united with the Church here, April 14th, 1639, ‡ went to England, Holland, East Indies, and thence back to Europe. He settled as minister at Kirby Steven, of England. The latter person, who was born in London, and about 20, departed by way of Newfoundland, to several ports in the West-Indies. After preaching in these places and receiving several calls, he went to England; there he was soon employed as chaplain to the regiment of Col. Okey. Entering on a career, attended with many circumstances to try his talents, attainments and principles, George Downing may receive the following notice. § 1653, Sept., he was Commissary General. 1654, he was married to Miss Howard, of very honourable connexions. 1655, Aug. as Secretary to John Thurloe, who was Secretary to Cromwell, he visited the French King on public business and communicated his instructions in Latin. 1656, he was a member of Parliament from Scotland. || 1657, Dec., Cromwell highly recommended him as an ambassador to Holland. ¶ 1658, his exertions were many, various, great and influential as ambassador in Netherlands. much to do with him, and respected his diplomatic abilities. July 12, Downing writes to his government, that De Thou was anxious to have the picture of Cromwell as a special favour. 19th, he had endeavoured to prevent the English at the Hague from praying for Charles Stuart. This so displeased the Queen of Bohemia, she said, that she would worship no more with them. It, also, like to have cost him his life; for three of his own countrymen watched to kill him one evening, but they were unsuccessful. Aug. 9th, he writes, that he had warm debates with De Witt concerning the English ships, captured by the Dutch in the India seas. Sept. 20th, he greatly deplores in a letter to Thurloe, the death of Cromwell. Oct. 25th, he writes from the Hague that the friends of Charles expected that he would come to the crown of England. He had continually watched and made known to his government the plans of the Royalists on the Continent. 1660, Feb. 21st, he appears at the Hague as Envoy extraordinary from Richard Cromwell. He was employed in bringing about a peace between Denmark and Sweden; and in ascertaining the views and proceedings of the friends to Charles II. * May 22d, Mr. Downing was made a Knight. 1661, May 8th, he assembles with Parliament from Morpeth of Northumberland. About this time, he was sent with a Royal commission as ambassador to Holland. † 1662, March, he procured the arrest of Okey, Corbet and Barkstead, at Delft, and sent them as prisoners to England, that they might be tried as Regicides. 1668, Dec. 27th, the same writer states, that Mr. Downing discoursed about having given advice to Charles II. for prosecuting the Dutch War, but that his Majesty had harkened to other counsellors and thus subjected the Nation to loss. * 1672, March 4th, a letter of this date stated, that Mr. Downing, having returned from Holland before called, was imprisoned in the Tower. He appears to have been freed and restored to Royal favour. In the difficulties, which the Colonies had with Charles II., about 1680, Mr. Downing is represented as having been very friendly to them. He died in 1684, aged about 59. He was brother in law to Gov. Bradstreet, and corresponded with him. He was evidently a person of respectable talents. The responsible trusts committed to him under different administrations, show that he was no ordinary statesman. Whatever government he served, whether of Parliament, the Cromwells, or Charles II. he did it with faithfulness. The deed of his apprehending those, who had fought for the same cause with him, is a dark spot on his reputation. Could his own defence of this affair be read, he would probably state, that it was a command of his Majesty and he must obey him, though at the cost of ruin to his friends. But still it would have been far more for his fame, had he said: Sire, spare me in this thing, though at the expense of all my honors and treasures, yea, my life itself. In reference to his serving diligently the various governments under which he fell, there is no conclusive proof, that he was a greater friend to tyranny than freedom. Nor should such a fact be used so severely against him, as it appears to have been. Because the hand may be prevented by the head from reaching the gem, for which it has striven, it is not, therefore, expected to cease its endeavours for the benefit of the body.

* 8th. Townsend Bishop was presented for turning his back on the ordinance of baptism. He was referred to the Elders for conviction of his errors. This person appears to have been a useful townsman. He had been a Commissioner of the Quarterly Court, Deputy to General Court several times, and sustained other respectable offices. He was undoubtedly a sufferer for his opinions about the subjects and mode of baptism. † He appears to have left Salem soon after this prosecution; for Messrs. Moulton and Shaffin, his agents, sold off his estate 1646.

‡ Aug. 12th. General Court require a military guard to be kept in every town against the surprise of Indians. As war had been declared by the Commissioners against the Narragansets, the Court order the constables of each town to see, that the harvests of those, impressed to serve in the war, are carefully preserved. They appoint the 28th as a Fast for prevailing sins, contentions in England, and a blessing on the troops sent and going against the Indians. The soldiers here referred to had no occasion for fighting, because the Narragansets submitted to terms of peace by the 30th. Oct. 4th. At an adjournment of General Court, they, considering Salem as exposed to sudden attacks on the sea board, and that William Trask, Captain of the company, resided at too great a distance, appointed William Hathorne his successor, and William Clark, Lieutenant, and William Dixy, Ensign. At the same time, they highly commended Capt. Trask for his services to the country. They request the Elders of every shire to use means for the civilization and christian knowledge of the Indians. They excuse the Village on Ipswich River, called New Meadows, from paying taxes, because they supported preaching, though not formed into a Church. They received a petition of seven persons, among whom was William Hathorne, for a "company of adventurers." The petitioners requested that the proprietors might be enlarged as need should be; that whatever trade they might discover in three years should be for their sole advantage twenty years; that they might have letters with the public seal to the French or others, as occasion should demand; have a Caravan advanced up the country as far as they desired; have no other trading house within twenty miles from theirs; and place their establishment fifty miles or more from every English Plantation. 18th. General Court, in order to lessen the Colony's expense, recommend each town to pay its own Deputies, and each Shire the charges of its own Magistrates; and that the General Court be held in every shire town.

* 28th. Robert Gotta was voted the first £5, given by Mr. Andrews, for purchasing a cow or heifer; and 29th, the second £5, for the same object, to John Batchelder.

Mr. Endicott, continued an Assistant, was again elected Serjeant Major General, and also one of the United Commissioners. ‡ These persons who had been chosen by the Legislature, were now elected by the freemen. Mr. Norris preached the Election sermon. § The Court allow John Bourn to set up a cook shop here, but not to sell beer above 1d. a quart. They enact, that no more than a member and his horse shall be maintained. It seems from this, that members of their body may have had, while in session, some of their families boarded and lodged at the public expense. 15th. The Court, in accordance with advice from England and for having settled views of baptism in the Colony, call an assembly of Elders and Magistrates to convene at Cambridge 1st of September. They order, that the Body of Laws, presented by the Committee, should be transcribed and each of the committee look over another's copy, and meet at Salem or Ipswich by the 10th of August, so as to prepare a report for next session. Three commissioners, one of them Mr. Hathorne, were appointed to treat with D'Aulnay about his complaints. Instructions were to be drawn up for these commissioners by a committee of five, among whom was Mr. Endicott. || During this session, Mr. Downing of Salem, and others, petitioned for a relaxation of the laws respecting Anabaptists and the conditions of freemanship. As a law in reference to the last subject was under consideration, they were not heard. The

And the said keep to have 3d. for his paynes.” Weights and measures were required to be brought to the Marshal for being sealed.

† Aug. 4th. Thomas Dexter was charged with sleeping at meeting, and slighting the ordinance of baptism. He was fined. The wife of Mr. Bowditch was presented for withdrawing from the ordinance of Baptism. Her name was probably Sarah, ‡ who joined the Church May 10th, 1640, and was excommunicated (most likely for being an Anabaptist.) § Sept. 1st. The Synod being assembled, it appeared, that the churches of Boston, Salem, and a few other towns, had declined to be represented. The chief reason of their absence was that they did not approve of the manner, in which the Synod had been called. This ecclesiastical body sat fourteen days and adjourned to the 8th of June.

|| 24th. Mr. Endicott, as one of the Commissioners, signed a reply to the complaints of the Dutch Governor, and a recommendation that “poor scholars” be employed in the country, that they might be encouraged to live at home.

*Nov. 4th. General Court convenes. They order a fast on Dec. 24th, for the hazardous state of England, sad condition of the Bermuda Church, and difficulties of Church and State among themselves, both of which, say they, some strive to undermine. They recommend to every society, having but one minister, to employ a poor student, that he may improve his gifts and prepare for usefulness. They pass a law against man-stealing, and order that two Africans, forcibly brought into the Colony, shall be sent home at the public expense. To manifest "utter disaffection to arbitrary government," they appoint a committee to revise the body of laws, handed in from the county committees. They require men of good report and ability to be selected as retailers of liquor. They license Wm. Clark to keep an ordinary for £15. †About Dec. he was arraigned before the Court of Assistants, for having been very active in obtaining subscribers for a petition to his Majesty's Commissioners in England, against some of the Colony's laws. He was bound to answer at the next General Court. He must have died before May 27th, 1647, as his widow was then allowed to keep his ordinary. The Court tax estates at 1d. on 20s. They lay the poll tax at 20d, and require every mechanic, able to earn 18d. a day, to pay 20d. and also 3s4 a year. They excused the lame and sick from rates. They forbid any to swear on the penalty of 10s. or any Indian to powaw. They enact, that every person denying the doctrines of the Gospel, shall pay 20s. in six months; and, if endeavouring to propagate views contrary to such doctrines, shall be fined £5. They enact, that any person unnecessarily absent from worship on the Sabbath shall pay 5s., and if renouncing the Church, state, ministry, and ordinances, on pretence of being spiritually illuminated, shall be fined 10s. a month. They order that if any interrupt and oppose a preacher in season of worship, they shall be reproved by a Magistrate on lecture day; and for a repetition of their offence, shall pay £5, or stand two hours on a block four feet high, with the following inscription in capitals on his breast: "A wanton Gospeller." They enact, that children above 16 years, which shall curse their orderly parents, shall be put to death, and that a rebellious son shall suffer a similar punishment. They order that gamesters forfeit treble of what they play. They instruct the Elders to choose, at the Court of Elections, two ministers annually for the purpose of instructing the Indians. In connexion with this it may be well to state, that the Court at their session, commencing 26th of the following May, allowed John Elliot £10 for having taught the Indians in religion, from the £20, granted by Lady Armine for so worthy an object.

This woman had given the town considerable trouble.

† October 27. General Court sits. As Thomas Lothrop, Deputy from this place, was bound to sea, they excused him. They allowed the people at Mackerel Cove to be free from watching at Salem, except in seasons of danger. At their session, in October, they requested the Synod to draw up a confession of faith. To comply with this request, the Synod chose a committee of seven, among whom was Mr Norris. His being thus chosen shows, that however the Church here delayed at first to take part in the Synod, they did afterwards. The Court order every town, consisting of fifty householders, to have a school for reading and writing, and of one hundred families, to have a Grammar School, so as to fit scholars for College. They enact, that if any young man attempt to address a young woman, without consent of her parents, or, in case of their absence, of the County Court, he shall be fined £5, for the first offence, £10 for the second, and imprisonment for the third. They require that members of Churches, who decline to take the oath of

They suspend the law which had been passed, but not enforced, for having one Deputy from a town instead of two. They order that weights and measures shall be of the same standard throughout the Colony. They enact, that wives who have husbands and husbands who have wives in England, should go home on account of some irregularities. As respectable gentlemen had sent many of their dissipated children to this country to be reformed among their friends, and as these children, by being credited, indulged their evil propensities, the Court forbid any person, under 21 years of age, to be trusted. They state that wheat at 4s6. barley 4s. rye and peas 3s6. Indian corn 3s. a bushel, may be taken for rates.

* In the course of this year the Town Bridge from Boston was built.

‡ May 10th. General Court assembles. Messrs Downing and Hathorne were Deputies. Mr. Endicott was continued an Assistant, Serjeant Major General, and a Commissioner of the Colony. Islands. * As Mr. Downing's farm, on the road between Lynn and Ipswich, was a convenient place for an ordinary, his servant was allowed to keep one. After considering the method of discovering Witches in England, the Court inquired for the best method in the Colony. † This appears to have been with reference to the lamentable fact, that they had arraigned and condemned Margaret Jones of Charlestown, for witchcraft. This unhappy woman was accordingly executed. ‡ The Court order, that if a dog kill a sheep, it shall be hanged and its owner pay double damages. They allow the village at New Meadows to be called Topfield. They grant 550 acres of land to Mr. Endicott, 250 to Mr. Hathorne, and 250 to Captain Trask. They require that both black and white peag or wampom, in order to be current, shall be free from fractures and spots, and be on strings.

About this time, John Balch, another of the original planters, died. He came from Bridgewater, Somersetshire, in England. He had two wives. § The former Margaret, with himself, is recorded among the first members of the Church. The latter was Agnes. || 1636, January 25th, he was granted 200 acres of land at the head of Bass River. This land was cultivated by him and was the place of his death. He sustained various trusts of the town, such as selectman and surveyor. He appears to have possessed the qualifications of resolution, perseverance, integrity and intelligence, necessary to the founders and guides of a new community. He left three sons, ¶ on one of them, named John, an inquest was required to be held June 24, 1662, who according to creditable tradition, was drowned in crossing the Ferry to what is now Beverly, during a violent storm. An inquest was ordered at the same time on Henry Bartholomew (most likely for the same reason.)

§ February 1st. Salem voted that Marblehead, by consent of General Court, might become a separate town. The former reserved the right of regulating the Ferry and Ferrymen. the people here to alter a highway and landing from the head of Bass River to Draper's Point. They permit Marblehead to become a town. They appoint William Hathorne and Emanuel Downing, Associate Judges of the Quarterly Court. They forbid peag to be received for rates. They order the selectmen of each town, to provide powder and bullets for the soldiers. They require the result of the Synod to be laid before the churches, for examination. * 10th. The Governor, Deputy, and Assistants, declare themselves against wearing long hair, and call on the Elders to use means for its not being worn by members of their churches. This regulation was considered by them as a matter of some importance because required by an Apostle. Mr. Rogers, of Rowley, when preaching before the Synod and the General Court, June 9, 1646, took their side. An act, under September 3, 1634, forbid the wearing of long hair. In England, 1641, the favourers of Parliament, were called Roundheads, because they wore short hair. The principal reason for such views, on both sides of the Atlantic, was a literal adherence to the Scriptures in many particulars. In accordance with such use, there can be no wonder, that Mr. Endicott and his associates should have done as they did. Not a few writers, in our land, mention the protest against long hair as having originated with him, when in fact the views it expressed, had been for years prevailing, and were not only cherished in the Colony but also in England.

† September 11th. Matthew Stanley was tried for drawing the affections of John Tarbox's daughter, without the consent of her parents. He was fined £5, fees 2s6. and 6s. for three days' attendance by her parents. In this month, three married women, were fined 5s. a piece for scolding.

† February 10th. Members of the Church here, who lived on Bass River, or Cape Ann side, requested of the other brethren, that they might have preaching among themselves. The reason they assigned for such an application, was crossing the water at the ferry and other inconveniences.

Creditable tradition informs us, that his successor was William Perkins, † who was born in England 1607, and died at Topsfield, May 21st, 1682, aged 75. He appears to have ceased preaching here before the ordination of his successor, Mr. Thomas Gilbert, in 1664. § May 7th. General Court sat. Mr. Endicott was chosen Governor. Messrs. Hathorne and Bartholomew were Deputies. The Court forbid dancing at taverns, on penalty of 5s. In compliance with an act of Parliament, passed October 3d, 1650, they forbid trade with Barbadoes, Bermudas, Virginia and Ontego, which had declared for the King. In their address to Parliament the following session, they state, that this measure was greatly to their detriment. They fine Mr. Mathews for preaching error and settling at Malden, without approbation from them and the Elders, £10, as he gave no satisfaction for such acts. They also require the Church there to answer for receiving Mr. Mathews as their minister. The Deputies from Salem and thirteen others dissented in these two cases. In addition, the Malden Church were fined £50, Oct. 14th. The Court grant William Hathorne, for his public services, 400 acres of land near the 600 allowed Mr. Downing, between Hampton and the mouth of Piscataqua River, for £50, which the Country owed him. Richard Leader was tried for defaming Mr. Endicott and the Church at Lynn. He acknowledged his error and was fined £50. William Hathorne and three others dissented in this matter. Mr. Leader had his fine remitted, Oct. 14th. This person was spoken highly of by Governor Winthrop as superindendant of the Lynn Iron Works. The Court tried Mary Parsons, of Springfield, for being a Witch, and murdering her child. They had not evidence sufficient for the first charge. On the second they condemned her to death. As Mr. Pinchon had conferred with Messrs. Norris, Cotton, and Norton, and confessed to the Court, that he was wrong in some opinions of his book, they allowed him to return to his family; but required him to appear before them, Oct. 14th, when Mr. Norton's reply to his statements was to be ready. This reply was presented next session and ordered for England to be printed. The Court appointed June 18th, as a fast for the prevalence of Witchcraft, erroneous opinions in the Colony, and of distractions in England. They required objections to the Church discipline of the Synod to be left with Mr. Cotton; and him to lay them before the Elders and Churches, that they might be cleared up by the next session.

* June 24th. William Wake was presented for living away from his wife, who was in England. John Williams was ordered to return to his wife by September, on penalty of £20. Such cases as these were not unfrequent.

They petition Parliament that they might be excused from taking out a new Patent, as the latter had proposed, and be allowed to act under their old one. They address Cromwell, and requested him not to press his invitation, for some of the Colonists to move and settle in Ireland. They inform him that their trade consisted in corn, beef, pork, masts, clapboards, pipe staves, fish, beaver, otter, and other commodities.

The Court order, that a denial of the Scriptures to be the Word of God, shall be punished with a fine of £50, or with whipping; and a second offence of the kind, with punishment of death. They require, because the government had been greatly abused, that all settled inhabitants should take an oath of fidelity, and that strangers "keep the peace." They repeal the law of the magistrate's negative vote, and agree that a majority of both houses shall decide any question before them. To prevent deception in money, they order that after September none of it shall be current (except the receiver consent,) unless it be 12d, 6d, and 3d pieces, coined in the mint house, which is to be located in Boston. They grant liberty for all bullion, plate or Spanish coin, to be brought into the mint, and there be melted and brought to the alloy of sterling silver by John Hull. The pieces prepared by him are to have N. E. on one side and XII, VI, III, according to their value, on the other. The mint master was to have 1-20 of all he stamped. The Court pay Mr. Endicott 100 marks for serving as Governor last year. If these were English marks, each of them was 13s. 4d. sterling. In order to raise up men suitable for Rulers and Elders, they order, that a proper person in every town solicit subscriptions to assist charity scholars at Cambridge. They enact, that the land in possession of any Indian should be considered as his own; that if any Indians become civilized and settled among the English, they should have equal privileges; or that they might settle towns by themselves, when there was no occupancy of the Colonists. This order appears to have been taken as an encouragement to Mr. Eliot's exertions among the Indians. He had already gathered a settlement and Church of them at Natick. The Court decide, that the English had a good right to the land, which they had settled. To prevent the washing or clipping of the Colony Coins, they order a double ring, a central tree, and Massachusetts to be put on one side of them, and New England and the year of their being stamped on the other. They designate Nov. 10th, as a fast for destructive storms; lack of suitable persons for Church and State; excess of worldly mindedness; war between England and Holland; and for calling on the Lord that he would give the Colony favour with Parliament and supply the necessities of the people in this country. They order two letters, one for Cromwell and the other for Parliament. They had cause to fear the latter, because they seemed resolved to render the Colonies more dependant on them than they had been.

† Nov. 30th. Two men were fined for excess in dress. Three men and one woman were each fined 10s. and 2s6d. fees for wearing silver lace. A woman was fined the same for wearing broad bone lace; another for wearing tiffany, and another for wearing a silk hood. Alice Flint was presented for wearing a silk hood, but proving herself to be worth £200, she was excused. Jonas Fairbanks was charged with wearing great boots. But he was cleared, as the law did not strictly apply to his case. Other similar prosecutions took place at different times. Could judicious sumptuary regulations be enforced, they would no doubt produce good. But when running into an extreme, they are more contemned than respected, and more provoke than reform.

* April 30th. For the relief of Richard Stackhouse's family, he was allowed to have the profit of the Ferry towards Ipswich, if he should find boat and men.

† May 2d. William Hathorne, as among the Commissioners of the United Colonies, took part in ordering 500 men to be raised against the Dutch at New-Netherlands, who were reported as engaged in fomenting a war between the Indians and the English. ‡ As Massachusetts was benefitted by commerce with the Dutch, she was unwilling to have war, and thus the league between her and the other Colonies liked to have been broken. § 3d. Mr. Norris wrote an interesting letter to the Commissioners, in which he gave several reasons why war should be waged with the Dutch.

|| 18th. General Court sat. Mr. Endicott was elected Governor. Thomas Lothrop and Jacob Barney were Deputies. The Court forbid provision to be carried among the French and Dutch of America. They order that no person shall begin to preach or prophecy, without the approbation of Elders belonging to the four next churches or County Court. They appear to have adopted this measure on account of the difficulty, which they experienced the previous session with respect to Mr. Powell, who had received a call * June 30th. Theophilus Salter was sentenced to pay £5, the witness and fees, for endeavouring to marry Mary Smith without her friends consent. There were other cases of this sort.

† Aug. 30th. General Court enact, that a profanation of the Sabbath shall be followed with admonition for first offence, 5s. for second, and 10s. or whipping, not above five stripes, for the third offence.

‡ Sept. 20th. William Hathorne and the other Commissioners resolve on a war with Ninnigret, the Niantick Sachem, because he had taken and slain some of the Long Island Indians, who were allies to the Colonies. 24th. They recommend the education of six pious Indians at the College. They encourage Mr. Elliot's printing an Indian Catechism, and Thomas Stanton to assist him.

† 28th. William Bartholomew was chosen County Treasurer, as appeared by votes in the hands of the Commissioners from the several towns.

‡ August 22d. General Court convenes. They order that no person shall carry out of Massachusetts more than 20s. in coin, to pay his expenses. They appointed searchers, who were authorized to enforce such a regulation. They designated Samuel Archer for Salem in reference to this business. They forbid sheep to be transported, and any, under two years old, to be killed. They require that honourable support shall be granted to ministers; and that the County Courts, when acquainted with deficiencies in this respect, shall specify a proper salary, and issue a warrant to the selectmen for its collection. They forbid any to retain books, lately imported from England, under the names of John Reeves and Lodowick Muggleton, who pretended to be the two last witnesses, spoken of in the Apocalypse. They order a thanksgiving to be observed the 7th of September, for peace between England and Holland; hopeful establishment of government in the mother country; good harvest; and prevention of an impending war with New Netherlands. Oct. 18th. The Court command the productions of Reeves and Muggleton to be consumed by an executioner in Boston Market. They enact that no man shall be Deputy, unless he be correct in the main doctrines of religion. They set wheat and barley at 5s., rye and peas 4s., and corn at 3s., for rates. § 20th. † May 17th. The town agreed that Winter Island should be appropriated for the use of the Fort; and that this should be finished with all convenient dispatch. They appear to have agreed on a burial place at the hill above Francis Low's house.

‡ 23d. General Court assemble. Mr. Endicott was elected Governor. He held this office till his decease. Edmund Batter was Deputy. The Court order a house of correction to be in every county. They request that whoever should be Governor would reside in Boston, or within 4 or five miles "out of respect to strangers." They desired Mr. Endicott to comply with their wish "as much as his own necessary occasion will permit." They order the regiment of Essex and of other counties to be paraded. They appointed Edmund Batter, on a committee of four, to contract with some merchants for supplying the Colony with salt. In June of the next year, they granted John Winthrop the sole privilege of manufacturing salt in the Pequod country for 21 years. They order a Council of twelve churches, of which was the one here, to convene at Ipswich June 3d, for the purpose of endeavoring to settle a difference between the Church of Ipswich and one of Boston, about Mr. Norton's leaving the former to become pastor of the latter. This subject had been agitated over two years, and produced a general excitement. The Court grant to Gov. Endicott and his

† About July, an epidemic prevailed through New-England, like that of 1647.

‡ Nov. 10th. The town chose Commissioners to try small causes for the year ensuing. They chose William Hathorne, William Brown, and Edmund Batter, to be presented to General Court for confirmation. They appointed William Hathorne to marry persons.

§ 13th. The Court appoint County Committees to devise the best means of trade for supplying the wants of the Colony. They designate Edmund Batter for one of the Essex Committee.

|| June 14th. General Court sits. William Hathorne was Deputy. He was dropped as a primary Commissioner of the United Colonies, and became a reserve. The Court grant that any one of three Commissioners, for trying small causes, may marry people where no magistrate resides. They state, that as clothing was not easily imported, "all hands not necessarily employed on other occasions, as women, girls and boys," are required to spin. They instruct the Selectmen of every town to assess each family at one or more spinners, except some otherwise engaged, which are to be assessed individually 1-2 or 1-4 of a spinner according to capacity. They require that every spinner shall make for 30 weeks in a year, 3 lbs a week of linnen, cotton, or woollen yarn, on penalty of 12d. for every lb. short. They condemn Ann Hibbins, of Boston, widow of the Agent in England, to be executed as a witch, on the 19th of June. They appoint June 11th, for humiliation, because "Ranters and Quakers" disturb England, that the Protector may be preserved from "plotters;" that his naval and land forces may be prospered; that the Lord may be "with the Protestant armies against Antichrist;" that peace may be among the Colony's churches, and the ordinances be more effectual, especially to children and servants.

* July. Cassandra, wife of Lawrence Southwick, was admonished and fined Court fees, 2s6, for absence from worship. This appears to be the first evidence of her inclining to the Friends. † She and her husband were excommunicated after this from the Church, which they joined March 24, 1639.

Oct. 14th. The Court of Assistants assemble. They take into consideration the appearance of Friends in their jurisdiction. They charge them with claiming to be inspired, writing erroneous doctrines, and despising the orders of Church and State. They forbid any master of a vessel to give them a passage to their Colony, on the penalty of £100. They order that if any Friend comes into Massachusetts, he shall be confined in a house of correction; severely whipped; be kept at work, and not suffered to speak. They enact that every person who shall bring books into the Colony, maintaining doctrines of the Friends, shall pay £5, for each of them; or who shall defend their doctrines, shall pay 40s. for the first offence, £4 for the second, and if persisting, shall be imprisoned and banished. They require these laws to be published on the 21st in several parts of Boston by beat of drum. They appoint thanksgiving to be Nov. 5th, for a plentiful crop, and the settlement of difficulty in Churches. They order a meeting on June 5th, of thirteen Elders from Suffolk, Middlesex, and Essex, at Boston, to consider Ecclesiastical questions, which had been proposed by the General Court of Connecticut. They appointed Mr. Norris, one of the Elders. Divines from other Colonies were expected to convene with them. The subject for their consideration was the baptism of children. 24th. As a matter of public concern, the General Court reply to Cromwell's proposal about having some of the Colonists emigrate to Jamaica, which had been lately captured by his arms; and excuse themselves from having any direct agency in the matter.—During this year, Samuel Sharp appears to have died. He evidently took a deep interest in the prosperity of the Colonies. * Oct. 26th, 1627, he as one among the proprietors of New-Plymouth, sold his right to Gov. Bradford and others, through Isaac Allerton. April 30th, 1629, he was chosen in London to be of Mr. Endicott's Council. He was also designated, with Mr. Skelton, to rule the Colony in case of the Governor's decease. He seems to have come over in the fleet, which brought Mr. Higginson. He succeeded Mr. Haughton, who died in the year of his ordination, as Ruling Elder. A principal event of his life was being cited to appear before the Legislature, which commenced their session Sept. 2, 1635, in reference to the letter, that the Church here, then under Roger Williams, forwarded to other churches, on the subject of disciplining the members of General Court. † The next year, when a general division of land took place, the town granted him 300 acres, afterwards designated to join Mr. Skelton's farm on the head of North River. In accordance with the Ecclesiastical usage of his day, his office excluded him from all secular trusts. Hence, he was not engaged in transactions, fitted to render him prominent to the reflective view of posterity. But there is reason to believe, that he has long ago experienced, that devotedness to the service of God, loses nothing of its heavenly worth by earthly forgetfulness. His wife was named Alice, and her name is among the first church members. ‡ He left her and a family of children to mourn his death and struggle with the privations of poverty.

† 23d. The members of the Church here, who resided on Bass River side, requested to worship by themselves. They had permission. They proceeded to build a meeting house. Mr. Josiah Hubbard preached for them.

‡ April 23d. Measures were taken to erect stocks and a whipping post.

§ May 6th. General Court convenes. William Hathorne was Deputy. He was chosen Speaker. As difficulties existed about legal matters, because Magistrates lived remotely, the Court appoint persons to supply the deficiency. They designate William Hathorne among them to act for Salem, Lynn, Marblehead and Manchester. For £75 paid by Mr. Endicott and his wife, they grant him 1000 acres of land on Ipswich River. They allow Mr. Hathorne, for his services at the Eastward, 300 acres.

|| June 8th. An order was taken that the seats at the meeting house be distributed; and that foreigners be not entertained in town. The latter was evidently done to prevent the entrance of the Friends.

Aug. 10th. Provision was made for Mr. Whiting's support. This person was employed to assist Mr. Norris in preaching.

¶ Sept. 21st. Christopher Holder and John Copeland, of the Friends' denomination, being at Salem, the former attempted to address the people after the minister had done. They were both secured till the next day and then sent to Boston, where they received 30 stripes apiece, and were imprisoned nine weeks. As Samuel

He was released to be dealt with by the Church. She was kept prisoner seven weeks and fined 40s. for approving the written opinions of her guests.

§ Oct. 12th. An assessment was laid on the inhabitants for assisting the College.

|| 14th. Court of Assistants assemble. They confirm the fine of £100 for bringing any one of the Friends into the Colony. They order, that for an hour's entertainment or concealment of any one of them, 40s. shall be paid. They enact, that each male of the Friends, if returning after the law has been executed on him, shall have one of his ears cut off, work in the house of correction till he can be sent away at his own charge; for the second return, he shall have the other ear cut off and kept at the house of correction. They enact, that each female so doing should be whipped and kept in the house of correction. They also enact, that if either sex of them come back a third time, they shall have their tongues bored through with a hot iron, and be employed in the house of correction till sent away at their own cost. They order that those of the Colonists who side with the denomination of Friends, shall be treated with equal severity. The punishment of boring the tongue with a hot iron, which was not executed in Massachusetts, ¶ was evidently imitated from what was done to James Naylor, an English Friend, by order of Parliament, December 1656.

† 17th. £80 were voted to Mr. Norris and £70 to Mr. Whiting, and wood to both for the ensuing year.

‡ March. John Small, Josiah Southwick, and John Burton, belonging to this place, and to the Friends, were apprehended in Dedham, on their way to Rhode Island, to provide a place for themselves and families. They were carried before the Governor in Boston, who allowed them to pursue their way by paying costs.

§ 30th Hilliard Verin was chosen Clerk of writs.

|| May 19th. General Court assembles. William Hathorne and Henry Bartholomew were deputies. The Court, in addition to other laws, order that every person attending an assembly of the Friends shall pay 10s. and £5, for speaking where it may be held. They forbid any person to preach or be ordained in a place, when two organized churches near it, or the Council of the Colony, or General Court are dissatisfied with his doctrines and qualifications.

¶ June 29th. The Court being informed of a Friends' meeting, held at the house of Nicholas Phelps last Sabbath, called those there to an account. Daniel, and Provided, Samuel Shattock, Joseph Pope, Anthony Needham, Edward Wharton, Samuel Gaskin, Henry Trask and wife, the wife of Joseph Buffum and his son Joseph, and Thomas Bracket, were tried for attending the meeting. Others, under a similar indictment, but who did not appear, were Robert Adams, the wives of Needham, Phelps, Pope, and of George Gardner. These were to be proceeded with next session. Sewall says, that Adams belonged to Newbury. Edward Harnett and others, before named, were fined * to the amount of £40 19s. This, with what had been exacted of the friends here, made over £100. † Harnett, aged 69, and his wife, Scieilla, aged 73, were members of the Church. She joined Dec. 1st, 1639, and he July 30th, 1643. She stands marked as removed, and he as excommunicated. Joseph Pope is recorded as being a Church member before 1636. He and his wife were excommunicated in 1662. Such excommunications were evidently for adherence to the doctrines of the Friends. † Lawrence Southwick and his wife and son Josiah, Samuel Shattock, Joshua Buffum, and Samuel Gaskin, were sent to Boston, confined, and whipped. They forwarded a petition of July 16th, to the Court here for a release. Shattock and Buffum were set at liberty. The rest were kept imprisoned about 20 weeks. § July. Most of the persons before mentioned, were called before the Magistrates to answer for absence from the Congregational meeting. Provided Southwick, besides his fine of 20s., was ordered to pay 5s. more and set in the stocks one hour, for charging the Court as persecutors. In addition to the persons, previously arraigned, were the wives of Richard Gardner, of Isaac Page and of John Smith. || A Mrs. Gardner was excommunicated in 1662, for attending the assemblies of the Friends.

* 28th. Samuel Shattock, Nicholas Phelps and Joshua Buffum were together fined £3 15s. for attending their meetings. For adherence to this practice, they were sentenced to be committed to the house of correction, and kept there till they should give security to renounce their opinions, or move out of the jurisdiction.

† Oct. 19th. The Court of Assistants assemble. Finding that the Friends increased, they order them to be banished on pain of death. They request Mr. Norton to write against their opinions. They order Lawrence Southwick and wife, and son Josiah, Samuel Shattock, Nicholas Phelps, and Joshua Buffum, who were brought before them, (the last three from the house of correction at Ipswich,) to depart from Massachusetts before the next Court of Elections; and that, if refusing so to do, they shall be banished on pain of death. They designate the 2d of 4th week in November, as a Fast day for divisions in the Churches, and open opposers to the truth. They appoint William Hathorne to act in criminal cases and to give oaths in civil matters. They decide that the bounds of Salem, towards Topsfield, shall "run 6 miles into the woods," and that lands within Topsfield line by Salem shall belong to the proprietors. They put wheat at 5s., rye, peas, barley and barley malt at 4s., and corn 2s. 8. a bushel for country rates. They grant Captain Trask 400 acres of land in the Pequod country. To John Endicott "for his great service," Richard Bellingham, Daniel Dennison, "for his great pains in transcribing the laws," and to William Hathorne, if giving up 700

1659.

† March 29th. Samuel Gaskin, on his presentment at Salem, for 32 days absence from meeting, was fined £3, and also to pay fees and witnesses. Edward Wharton, for 20 days absence, was fined £5, and 10s. for not aiding the constables, and fees for both cases. Dec. 23d. Rev. Edward Norris died. From the age of his son, he appears to have been nearly 70 at his decease. Before his arrival in this country, which was probably in 1639, he had been a clergyman in England. He united with the Church Dec. 29th of the same year. He was ordained, as previously stated, March 18th, 1640. On the 13th of May following he was admitted a freeman. He was colleague with the eminent Peters, who separated from him in August, 1641. In 1642, he wrote in favour of the standing Council, against a publication of Mr. Saltonstall, one of the Assistants. The part he took on this occasion secured him more popularity among the Magistrates, than among the Deputies. A few years afterwards, there seems to have been trouble in his Church, because some of them took the stand of Anabaptists. Townsend Bishop, a very respectable man, who had joined the Church before 1636, was prosecuted at Court and was to be dealt with by the Elders, July 3, 1645, for siding with that denomination. Sarah Bowditch, who united with the Church, Dec. 3d, 1640, was prosecuted on a similar charge, and stands with the note of excommunication. Had the records of Mr.

* T. R.

Norris been spared, we might know more particularly of his feelings and doings at this period. No doubt, like every pastor, who believes that his people can have the bread of life at his own hands, without seeking for it elsewhere, in non-essential differences, he regretted the disorder, which was not unfrequently made in his congregation, by contempt, exhibited towards the ordinance of baptism. As a sample how his plea for the Standing Council, was received by the Deputies, *they chose Mr. Norton to preach the Election sermon in 1645, though the Magistrates preferred, selected and notified him for such a performance. But at the next Court of Elections, his friends prevailed so as to have him officiate. At this time, as well as when the question of war with the Dutch Colony was agitated, one party seem to have sided with Mr. Norton and the other with Mr. Norris. Though at the session of the Synod in Sept. 1646, he did not appear; yet his absence was not owing to any opinionated persuasion, that he needed no counsel; but to the impression, which his Church had gathered as to the illegality of such a body's being called by the Legislature. In this respect there was an alteration of views, † for he represented his Church in the Synod at its session, Oct. 1647. Then he was on a committee of seven to draw up the system of Ecclesiastical Discipline, substantially contained in the Cambridge Platform. ‡ May 3, 1653, Mr. Norris wrote his letter to the Commissioners of the United Colonies. In it he expressed his opinion that New-Haven, which had suffered from intrigues and abuses of the Dutch, had, as one of the United Colonies, a fair claim on Massachusetts, her stronger ally, for immediate help against them. He also disapproved of the interested policy, which he thought his own Colony had manifested. Mr. Hathorne of his Church, who was one of the Commissioners, strove to have his precepts carried into effect. * As his Church was one of the Churches requested by the General Court to be of the Council at Ipswich, June 3d, 1655, concerning the difficulty of Mr. Norton's removal to Boston, it is most likely that Mr. Norris exercised his judicious experience in aiding to compose dissensions as to this subject, which had long and extensively prevailed. At the Synodical meeting of Elders in Boston, June 5th, 1656, with respect to the baptism of children, he was required to be present by General Court. Before his decease he was called to experience the trials of having his Church and Congregation much disturbed by the introduction of sentiments maintained by the Friends. However, these deemed themselves justified in addressing his people and prevailing on many of them to leave his pastoral care, yet he must have regarded such events with anxiety and regret. From the facts, which have come to us relative to his talents, acquirements and character, we have cause to believe that the two first were more than common, and the last worthy of our high esteem. His worth was an honour to the town, and its salutary influence must have been long experienced. As there is no name of his wife among the Church members, it is likely, that she died before he came to America. He left one son, Edward, teacher of the school, and bequeathed to him all his property.

Courts of Salem and Ipswich, to be sold to any of the English belonging to Virginia or Barbadoes by the County Treasurer. * Edmund Batter, the Treasurer, took some steps to execute this order, but it entirely failed. † The Court command Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick and their son Josiah, Samuel Shattock, Nicholas Phelps, Joshua Buffum, to depart from Massachusetts, on pain of death, by the 8th of June. ‡ In four days Shattock, Phelps, and Josiah Southwick, departed for England, by way of Barbadoes. Lawrence and Cassandra were sent to Shelter Island (near the East end of Long Island) where they shortly died within three days of each other. Buffum went to Rhode Island. § The Court enact that such festivals as Christmas shall not be observed, on penalty of 5s. As damage had accrued to merchants, by having no measurer of salt, they require every seaport to have such an officer. They appoint the 15th of June as a Fast for the unsettled state of England; for “the great thoughts in heart,” both of the Country and Parliament, now in session; for a good issue of their deliberations; for divisions in the Churches of the Colony, for its sensuality; the “sad face” of its rising generation; “threats of evil this Spring;” and to implore “God’s favourable presence yet to abide with our dear native country and with us his poor people and Churches in these ends of the earth and with our seed after us.” In appointing such a season, the Court evinced that a deep concern was taken here in the proceedings which were then in England. They must have heard that Cromwell had died the preceding Sept. 3d, and that intrigues were in operation to put down his son Richard. They well knew that a change in favour of Charles II. would bring on them his heavy displeasure for their evident partiality to the Revolution which overthrew his father. There was a petition handed into General Court, signed by William Hathorne, William Brown, George Curwin, Walter Price, of Salem, and seven others. They desired that a Plantation, of ten miles square, might be granted them, 40 or 50 miles from Springfield to the westward, two thirds of the way to Awrania, if commenced within 18 months. From another record of Oct. 16th, 1660, such a plantation was intended as a trading establishment on Hudson River, to have a Governor and authority to repel attacks from Indians and to be under the protection of Massachusetts. Since we have no evidence that this enterprise was carried into operation, it is most likely, that the changes, which soon took place in the mother country, were the means of its being prevented. The inhabitants of the part of Salem, called Bass River, desired to become a town. The Court recommend them to apply to Salem and this town to give them a speedy hearing.

Oct. 18th. The Court of Assistants convene. They appoint the 8th of December as a day of Thanksgiving for protections against errorists, the enjoyment of liberty, and a good harvest. They arraign several Friends of this place, who had gone to be present at the trial of Robinson and Stevenson, and Mary Dyar. They were Hannah Phelps, who was admonished, and William King, who was sentenced to receive 15 lashes. These two were also banished on pain of death. Margaret Smith and son, Provided Southwick and son, were ordered to be dealt with as the law directed. Bishop says, that Mary Trask, from this town, was confined with them. He states, that, on the 31st, Edward Wharton, for expressing himself as though his two acquaintances, Robinson and Stevenson, who had been very lately hung for returning from banishment, were unjustly treated, was apprehended in Salem, and Nov, 3d, was whipped 20 lashes and fined £20 in Boston. For passing sentence of death on the persons here mentioned, the Court of Assistants published a defence.

* November. Liberty was granted to Messrs Curwin, Price, and William Brown, to build a grist mill on South River, above Mr. Ruck's house, where it might be convenient. This permission was not immediately improved. "Joseph Miles being convicted for entertayning of a stranger, a Scotch, several weeks according to an ordinance made 20th of 4th month, 1657, wee have fined him 20s. to cleare the towne of him." John Southwick having brought into town the wife of Joseph Nicholson, about March 18th, was fined 20s. a week from this date till she departs. Thomas Spooner fined 10s. for entertaining "a strange woman."

† Nov. 29th. A number of the Friends, who have been named, were prosecuted. William King and James Smith, being of their persuasion, were presented; but were respited, on motion of Messrs Higginson and Brown. Samuel Gaskin had half of an £8 fine, laid on him by Ipswich Court, remitted, and his son set at liberty. Frances Simpson, who appears to have lately joined the Friends, was fined 10s. and fees.

1660.

‡ March 9th. On a second invitation to Mr. John Higginson for settling with them, the town offer him a salary of £160. § The Church had concurred in the two invitations of the town. Mr. Higginson answered them, that it was his desire to labour and die among them as his father had done. When his answer was given, he had preached for them nearly a year. On his coming hither, it appears that Mr. Whiting had declined becoming their minister and left them. Mather informs us, that Mr. Higginson had taught school in Hartford, officiated as chaplain at Saybrook fort, and been colleague with his father in law, Whitfield, at Guilford, before he came to Salem. When visiting this town, he purposed to follow Mr. Whitfield to England.

* May 18th. Provided Southwick, of the Friends, was fined 40s. for disturbing the peace at Salem. He was ordered to be imprisoned till this and another fine were paid, or to be sold. Henry Bachellor, of the same denomination, was fined for absence from meeting.

† 30th. General Court sits. Mr. Endicott was chosen Governor. William Hathorne was appointed a Reserve Commissioner. He and Henry Bartholomew were deputies. The Court require County Courts to have a care that there be an able ministry and that it be well supported. They appoint a Fast for the deplorable condition of England, for the prospect of its “good beginnings turning out bad;” for decline in religious affections, neglect of ordinances, and viciousness of the rising generation. They decline to grant the petition of Salem for a propriety in the Misery and Baker’s Island. But Oct. 16th, they allow their request, on condition that the two Islands be used for curing fish. John Endicott, jun. desired the Court that a deed of lands given him by old William, an Indian, might be confirmed. The Court thought it not suitable for them to take such power on themselves. They, however, remark, “considering the many kindnesses that were shown to the Indians by our honoured Governor (Endicott) in the infancy of these plantations, for pacifying the Indians, tending to the common good of the first planters; in consideration whereof the Indians were moved to such a gratuity unto his son, do judge meet to give the petitioner 400 acres of land.

‡ June 1st. Mary Dyar, of the Friends, who had been reprieved from death, was hung. Margaret Smith, of Salem, who was her companion in Boston, spoke against the laws of the Colony.

* 26th. Those of the Friends, who have been mentioned before as prosecuted, were fined from £2 10s. to £5. The wife of Edmund Nicholson was admonished and fined Court fees for absence from meeting. James Smith and Samuel Salmon were similarly dealt with.

† July 8th. Mr. John Brown was informed that he had been chosen Ruling Elder. He accepted this office, on condition that he might attend to his business in Virginia the following winter. He was selected at the special request of Mr. Higginson in his answer to the call of the Church. Under the same date, Mr. Higginson's ordination (or more properly, installation) is mentioned. The Churches of Lynn, Ipswich, Reading and Boston, were represented by their Elders and Messengers on this occasion. William Hathorne and the two deacons imposed hands on the Ruling Elder, who must have been Mr. Brown, and not Mr. Higginson, as a number of printed accounts incorrectly represent. The sermon was from 1st Cor. 3c. 7vs. Mr Norton of Boston gave the right hand of fellowship to both Elders. ‡ John Smith, of the Friends, for disturbance and crying out at the installation of Mr. Higginson, "What you are going about to set up, our God is pulling down," was committed to prison.

§ Sept. 10th. It was voted, that Mr. Cotton's Catechism should be used in families for teaching children, so that they might be prepared for public catechising in the Congregation. It was agreed that the Lord's supper should be once a month.

¶ 27th. News came that Charles II was proclaimed King. This was information calculated to put the public mind on considering the probable results. The Colonists had not laid up much stock of loyalty, on which they might draw to purchase the favour of his Majesty, when he should feel sufficiently confirmed to deal with them for their past expressions and policy.

* Oct. 16th. The Court of Assistants sit. They enact, that the last impression of the laws shall be in force after 30 days. As suicide was prevailing, they order, that the body of every person, who had killed himself, should be denied burial, except in some high way, as the selectmen shall direct, and that a cart load of stones should be laid on the grave, as a mark of infamy and warning. They require that those of the Friends should be tried by a Jury of 12. They release Margaret Smith and Mary Trask, of this denomination, and belonging to Salem, for the sake of their husbands. They granted liberty for the Friends in prison to embark for England, if they chose. Among them were Joseph Nicholson and his wife. The last had resided in this town for a short time.

1660 † Nov. 27th. A number of Friends were fined from 5s. to £7 10s. each. The wife of Robert Stone was fined Court fees. John Burton was presented and dismissed.

‡ Dec. 19th. A special General Court assembles. William Hathorne and Edmund Batter were deputies. The former was speaker. The main objects of the Court were to address the King and Parliament. They desire of both the continuance of their Charter privileges, and not to be condemned for accusations before they shall be fairly heard. They excuse themselves to his Majesty for their treatment to the Friends. § Their address to him on this subject was answered by Edward Burroughs, in England, who presented his reply to the King. ¶ The Court also instruct their agents in London to strive for preventing measures, which would require the Colonists to make appeals to the Crown; to justify their decisions in reference to the Iron works in Massachusetts; and to oppose permission for the Friends to reside within their jurisdiction.

ANNALS OF SALEM.

THE circumstances of issuing this work, will not allow of Biographies, in the following numbers, so full as some, given in the preceding numbers.—When some authorities, not adduced before, are referred to, they will follow their abbreviations in a parenthesis, at the bottom of the page, and afterwards be denoted by such abbreviations.

1661.

* Jan. 19th. Thomas Venner, made free 1638, and united to Salem Church 1640, was hanged, drawn and quartered in London. † He was a cooper by trade. He, while in this town, endeavoured to persuade others to leave Massachusetts and move to Providence, one of the Bahama Islands. In England, he was denominated a fifth monarchy man. ‡ With others of his opinions, he opposed the administration of Cromwell. After Charles II. ascended the throne, Venner “persuaded his followers, that if they would take arms, Jesus would come to put himself at their head.” They complied with his suggestion. Being sixty persons, they were mostly slain in fighting with a body of the troops, sent to suppress them. Venner and a few of his adherents were taken and he suffered as already stated. He, like many of various ages, was an unhappy example of the effects, which result from allowing the imagination to controul reason, conscience and revelation ; and to put forth its distempered conclusions in the violation of laws both human and divine.

* Josselyn. † Oldmixon. ‡ Goldsmith.

* March 3d. Richard Prince was chosen a Commissioner to meet other Commissioners, and hand in the votes of Salem for Magistrates, Associates and County Treasurer.—† 6th. A Fast was observed here for the general sickness of the past winter; for the prevalence of seducers; and for renewal of covenant; and adding to it a clause, of which the following is the conclusion:—"Therefore we do covenant by the help of Jesus Christ to take heed and beware of the leaven of the doctrine of the Quakers." The fact, here presented, shows that whatever may have been the merits of the controversy between the Friends and Congregationalists, it certainly excited deep concern, and was among the most prominent causes, which called forth the expressions and endeavours of our fathers. After the foregoing clause was put to the Covenant, Elder Brown rendered thanks to God before the Congregation for being returned home after suffering ship-wreck, having lost the vessel and cargo, and been in great danger from Indians. It appears that he had been on a voyage to Virginia.—‡ 14th. Edward Wharton was at the execution of William Leddra in Boston;—took leave of him, and protested against Leddra's not being permitted to speak with his friends. When the body of Leddra was cut down, Wharton and others caught it in their arms and gave it burial. At this time Wharton was under sentence of banishment, and seems to have defied its execution.

§ April 22d. The Selectmen agreed to meet once a month, and fine any one of their number, needlessly absent, 2s.—23d. The Town voted that £10 should be paid to Maj. Wm. Hathorne, the ensuing year, for training the foot company.

|| May 22d. General Court sat. Wm. Hathorne and Edmund Batter were Deputies. The former was chosen first reserve Commissioner for the Colony. The Court order "that Quakers," when discovered, shall be made bare from the middle upwards, tied to a cart, and whipped through the town towards the boundary of Massachusetts ; and, if returning, that they shall be similarly punished, with the addition, that some of them shall be branded with an R. on their left shoulder ; and, if coming back a third time, that they shall be banished on pain of death. The Christian Commonwealth, a book, written by John Elliot, of Roxbury, Missionary among the Indians, was censured by the Court, as opposed to Royal government. They required his acknowledgement to be transcribed and posted up in Salem and four other towns. They mainly agreed with him in political opinions, though their oath of allegiance required them to disapprove of his publishing these opinions. Bray Wilkins and Jno. Gingle, both of Lynn, who had purchased a farm, called Will-Hill, of Mr. Richard Bellingham, desired that it might belong to Salem. The Court granted their petition. William King, of this place, having returned from his banishment and renounced his adherence to the Friends, was pardoned by the Court. Hog Island, about a league from Falmouth, was granted to Gov. Endicott in lieu of 1000 acres assigned him in 1657. Mr. Higginson, minister of Salem, was allowed 700 acres for his services, as Scribe to the Synod in 1637. He had petitioned for such compensation in 1643, while at Guildford. The Court voted 500 acres to William Hathorne for his services, as Magistrate, several years in Salem and Marblehead, and “ otherwise to the great hindrance of his personal occasions and the diminution of his estate.” They designated July 7th as a day of Thanksgiving for “ the gracious answer” of the King ; for health, promising appearance of vegetation ; and for privileges of Government and of the Gospel. In reference to the first reason for thankfulness, it appears that Charles II. had given a very favourable reply to an address of General Court. But, as subsequent circumstances prove, he was only waiting for an opportunity to show the Colony, that he had not been a negligent observer of their course, nor forgetful of their preference to democracy. It is a painful reflection upon human nature, that state-policy too often discourses in words of friendship, till a convenient season arrives to perform deeds of enormity. The General Court raised a Committee of 12, among whom was Wm. Hathorne, to consider their "patent, laws, privileges and duty to his Majesty," and to present their result the next session.

June 10th. The Committee, last mentioned, reported. Another Committee of 6, among whom was Mr. Hathorne, were instructed to draft a letter to the King. *25th. John Hathorne of Salem was confirmed, as Quarter Master of the "three County troop."—28th. The Friends belonging to this town, were fined about £40. Among them was the wife of Nicholas Phelps. She was sentenced to pay £5, or be whipped, for asserting that Mr. Higginson "sent abroad his wolves and blood hounds among the sheep and lambs."

† July 30th. A vote was passed, that the children of persons, who had been covenant children, should be entitled to baptism.

‡ Aug. 2d. A few of the Friends were fined £10, for absence from the Congregational meeting on the Sabbath.—§7th. The Governor calls a special Court. William Hathorne and Edmund Batter were deputies. The reason for such a session was, that a vessel was to sail immediately for England, and that expediency required, that she should carry tidings of the King's being proclaimed. The Court accordingly order, that Charles II. shall be proclaimed as King the next day in Boston, after the lecture, by Secretary Rawson. They recommend the Governor, Collector Temple, Deputy Governor, Magistrates, Elders and people, four foot companies, one troop of horse, and masters of ships in the harbour, to be in attendance on this occasion. They also voted an address to his Majesty.

|| Sept. 9th. The Court of Assistants order Josiah Southwick, who had returned from banishment, to be stripped from his girdle upward, tied to a cart's tail, and whipped ten stripes in each of the towns, Boston, Rocksbury, and Dedham. Thus ordered out of Massachusetts, he came back the next day, but one, to his house in Salem.

* It was concluded, that the children of Church members here, should be under the watch of the Church.

October. Six persons of the Church were recorded as absenting themselves from its ordinances. They had a preference for the Friends. The Church voted to comply with the recommendation of other churches to keep a Fast December 23d for seeking divine aid in a prevalent sickness. Mr. John Blackleach and wife, Elizabeth, were recommended to Hartford Church. They afterwards resided in Boston. He became a freeman 1635;—member of the Church here before 1636;—and was granted 300 acres of land by this town, 1637. He represented Salem at the General Court 1636. He appears to have been a respectable man.

†Nov. 27th. General Court are convened to consider a letter from the King, which required them to cease from proceedings against “the Quakers,” and to send such of them, as were already apprehended, over to England for trial. They vote to comply with his instructions. These were brought by Samuel Shattock of Salem from London, whither he had gone, after being banished. The Court appoint Jan. 2d as a Fast-day, for the ignorance and dissipation of youth, neglect of domestic government, pride and excess in apparel; for complaints of enemies to the King, and for the combination of Antichrist to crush piety in the world.

‡Dec. 10th. “It is ordered that the bridge or causeway at the western end of Salem be sufficiently repaired and a stone walk to be built against the side thereof upon the County's charge.” Those of the Friends' society were fined as usual from £1 to £10 each. John Burton, of their number, declared to the Justices, that they were robbers and destroyers of the widows and fatherless, and that their Priests divined for money, and that their worship was not the worship of God. Being commanded silence, he commanded the Court to be silent. He continued speaking in this manner, till he was ordered to the stocks. * 31st. Special Court of Assistants assemble. They designate Simon Bradstreet of Andover, and John Norton of Boston, as agents to England; who, though loath to go, sailed Feb. 10th. No embassy had been watched with greater closeness and anxiety by the Colonists, than this was because of the difficulties, which it had to encounter in England. The Court order a Synod, composed of Elders and messengers of the Churches, to assemble in Boston 2d Tuesday of 1st month. The questions to be laid before the Synod were:—Who are the subjects of Baptism? Should there be, according to the Scriptures, a consociation of Churches? and, if so, what should be its form?

†Feb. 19th. Three persons were excommunicated for not attending worship. Three more were to be admonished, who were excommunicated the 26th. All six were thus dealt with for adhering to the Friends.— 26th. The Synod met in Boston. Messrs. Higginson, Hathorne and Bartholomew attended it, as representatives of the Salem Church. It continued a fortnight. As the members of the Synod perceived that the questions before them, were likely to be followed with important consequences, and that some of their number could tarry no longer, they adjourned to June 10th.

† March 3d. At Town meeting, it was “ordered that the Selectmen, with those masters of vessels, that are then in town to join with them, to advise with such as have lands granted at the burying point, how they may accommodate them so as that there may be a place left for graving of vessels, and that all further proceedings be suspended until this be done.”—*25th. Doct. Wm. Woodcock, of Salem, an Apothecary, was licensed to distil strong waters for a year and “sell by retail.”

† May 7th. General Court sits. Messrs. Hathorne and Bartholomew were Deputies. The Court forbid children and servants to be extravagantly clothed. They offer a reward of 40s. for every wolf killed. Such were the wants of the inhabitants and of strangers coming from England, and such the supplies needed for the fishery, the Court prohibited the exportation of wheat and flour after the 25th. A Fast was appointed to be observed June 5th, on account of sickness, disunion, drought, the unsettled state of great troubles, and to seek the divine blessing on the Agents in London, and on the Synod about to renew their session. The Court divided the cavalry of Essex County. They continued those of Salem, River-head, Manchester and Lynn, under the officers then over them. They had excused the people of Gloucester and Marblehead from military service, because of their engagements in fishing. They instruct Mr. Hull, the mint master, to coin half of the silver bullion, coming to his hands the first year, into 2*d.* pieces, and 1-5 of such bullion, as should be lodged with him for seven years afterwards, into the same currency. They grant Edmund Batter 250 acres of land “in the wilderness on the North side of Merrimack River and West of Beaver Creek.”

‡ June 4th. It was voted that a Bier be provided for carrying the dead.—§ 10th. The Synod met and adjourned to Sept. 10th.—|| 24th. Lawrence Leach died lately Æ. 83. He was proposed for a freeman 1630;—was a member of the Church here before 1636,—when the town granted him 100 acres of land. He left a widow, Elizabeth, and two sons. Of these Clement, the eldest, was married and lived in England.

The other was Capt. Richard Leach who died 1647, and left a son, John, who inherited his grandfather Leach's farm at Rial side. Mr. Leach had held various offices in town. He was one of the 13 men. His useful life rendered him respected.—26th. Daniel Rea had recently deceased. From his son's age, he was not less than 60 at death. His wife and children survived him. The last were Joshua, Bethiah wife of Capt. Thomas Lathrop, Rebeckah and Sarah. He had been one of the 13 men. He sustained a reputation, which secured him the confidence of others.

July 7th. Thomas Lathrop was allowed to take command of the foot company on "Cape Ann or Ipswich side."

* Oct. 8th. General Court assemble. They order all judicial concerns to be transacted in the King's name. They appoint Nov. 5th for Thanksgiving, because enough had been spared to sustain man and beast; the Agents had safely returned from England; and peace, liberty and the Gospel were still enjoyed. They set barley at 5s., malt 5s. 6d., peas and rye 4s. 6d., and corn 3s. for rates. They designate Dec. 5th for a Fast on account of the low state of religion in the world; prevalence of Antichrist in reformed churches "beyond the seas," and public rebukes at home. They revive an order against the Friends, because some of their denomination had appeared in the eastern parts. They accepted the result of the Synod and ordered it to be printed. The Court "as an acknowledgement of the great pains of Col. Wm. Brown (of Salem) in behalf of this country when he was in England, judges meet to grant him 500 acres of land." They confirm George Curwin, Capt. Thomas Putnam, Lieutenant, and Walter Price, Cornet, of the troop, belonging to Salem and vicinity.

† Nov. 7th. Elias Stileman sen'r had recently died Æ. not less than 70. He left a wife, and a son, Elias, who moved to Portsmouth, and became an emi-

He was a valuable member of the community.—* 12th. The Pastor and Henry Bartholomew attended the ordination of John Brock at Reading. Mr. Brock had preached at Rowley and the Isle of Shoals. He graduated at Harvard 1646, and died June 18, 1638, Æ. 68.—† 25th. The wife of Robert Wilson, for going through Salem, without any clothes on, as a sign of spiritual nakedness in town and colony, was sentenced to be tied to a cart's tail, uncovered to her waist, and be whipped from Mr. Gedney's gate to her own house, not exceeding 30 stripes. Her mother Buffum and sister Smith, being abettors of her conduct, were sentenced to be tied on each side of her, with nothing on to their waists but an under garb, and to accompany her the distance mentioned. From instances of discipline, found on the first records of the Friends in Salem, they, no doubt, as a body, disapproved of the preceding persons' conduct. Before any new denomination becomes consolidated, some of its members will show more zeal than knowledge, more violence than discretion. No body of people should have an ill name for the errors, which a few of them commit.—28th. Fines to the amount of £169 10 were laid on the Friends for absence from Congregational worship.

‡ Jan. 12th. The printed result of the late Synod came recommended by General Court to the Church. 24th. A house and an acre of ground were provided by the town for Mr. Higginson, their minister, which were to be the property of him and his heirs.—§ 26th. * May 11th. Voted, that the Deputies, who shall be at next General Court, shall petition for an enlargement of liberty to those, who were not Church members. Such an alteration had been strongly required by the King.—† 27th. General Court convened. Wm. Hathorne was elected one of the Assistants for the first time. He sustained this office annually, except 1673, till 1680. Messrs. Batter and Bartholomew were Deputies. Mr. Higginson preached the election sermon. His text was 1 Kings, 8 c. 57—8 and 9 vs. His subject was the cause of God and his people in N. England. In recommending his sermon, Rev. Messrs. Wilson, sen'r of Boston, and Whiting of Lynn, remark, "The sermon when preached was acceptable to all and found general approbation among all the wise hearted and godly so far as we have heard." The Court raise a committee of 13, who were Elders and Magistrates. Among them were Rev. Mr. Higginson and Henry Bartholomew. Their business was to draft an answer to the King's letter, which demanded greater liberty in the colonial elections and an amendment of the laws and charter. The Court invite persons, who are inclined to give their advice on these subjects, to forward it to the committee.

‡ June 30th. Col. Thomas Read had died abroad before this date. He became freeman 1634; joined Salem Church before 1636; and granted 300 acres of land 1637. He left a second wife, and two sons, the younger of whom was Abraham. He appears to have served under Cromwell and commanded a Regiment in England 1660, at the Restoration of Charles II.

§ July 4th. Edward Wharton was condemned by the Court at Dover, whither he had gone to pronounce a woe on the Justices for their proceedings against the Friends,—to be whipped in three towns at the cart's tail and brought to his house in Salem. Mr. Hollingworth was to pay the duties.—† 15th. Peter Palfrey died at Reading. He held the interesting relation to Salem of being among its first founders. He was often chosen a selectman. He was a prominent Deputy to General Court. He and his first wife Erdith were among the earliest members of the Church. He was made freeman 1631. He was granted 200 acres of land 1636. For his second wife, he married Elizabeth, the widow of John Fairfield, who died 1647, and left two children. He appears to have moved from this place before 1653. So worthy were his exertions to promote the welfare of Salem, he deserves to live in the remembrance of its inhabitants. ‡ Philip Veren, of the Friends, was sentenced to be severely whipped for saying, “ that we had murdered the dear saints and servants of God, and that he saw one of them murdered at Boston himself.” “ There are £50 allowed to build a prison at Salem out of the lands, already seized, which were the Quaker lands.”

§ Oct. 6th. The Pastor and Messrs. Lathrop and Allen, attended an ordination of John Emerson, at Gloucester. Mr. Emerson was son of Thomas Emerson of Ipswich. He graduated at Harvard 1656. ies. Here, it seems, the inconvenient custom for freemen to collect from every part of the colony, to vote for Governor and magistrates was discontinued. The alteration of such a practice was so unpopular, the practice was revived the next year, Oct. 10th The Court appoint Custom-house officers. Among them was Hilliard Veren, of this place, for the ports of Salem, Marblehead, and Gloucester. Such an appointment accorded with his Majesty's letter of June 24th, on the subject of navigation. The Court, considering the Friends as opposed to Civil and Ecclesiastical government, and knowing them as set against bearing arms, forbid them to vote with regard to public concerns. They permit the inhabitants of Salem to settle a plantation, 6 miles square at Pennicook, if getting 20 families on it within three years.

* Nov. 9th. The Pastor and Mr. Porter were designated to attend the gathering of a Church and ordaining Thomas Gilbert at Topsfield. Mr. Gilbert was a Scotsman. He and his wife came over 1661. He had been minister at Chedlie, Cheshire, and also at Edling, in England. He was made freeman 1664. He preached at Topsfield till after 1671. He died at Charlestown 1673, Æ. 63.—† 29th. Twenty-five of the Friends were fined £125. Samuel Shattock was one of them. For charging the Court and Country with shedding innocent blood,—he was sentenced to pay £5 or be whipped. Joshua Buffum was ordered to be put in the stocks one hour for affronting the Court about his marriage. Philip Veren was sentenced to be put by the heels into the stocks one hour for denying the country's power to compel any to attend Congregational worship.

‡ Dec. 8th. Salem was assessed £6 12s. as its proportion of the Colonial rate, for supporting the President and Fellows of the College.—§ The Pastor and Messrs. Conant and Lathrop were appointed to attend the ordination of Antipas Newman, at Wenham. Mr. Newman began to preach at Wenham 1657. He is supposed to have been a son of Rev. Samuel Newman, of Rehoboth. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Governor Winthrop, 1658. He died Oct. 15th 1672. His wife and five children survived him. At the ordination of Mr. Newman, Charles Gott and wife, Sarah, and son Charles, were recommended by Salem Church to the Church at Wenham, where they had a farm. He was the person who wrote to Gov. Bradford about the gathering of the Salem Church, 1629, in which he was a deacon many years before his dismissal. He became freeman 1632. He was granted 75 acres of land 1636. He served as selectman and Deputy to General Court while an inhabitant here. His wife died 1665, and he died Jan. 15th 1668. He was an intelligent, useful and esteemed member of the community. The Salem Church set apart one day for humiliation and prayer in each of the four following months, "for mercy with respect to the great affliction and reproach, which have come on so many thousands of ministers and christians (in England) in these times, by means of Episcopal usurpation ; also, with respect to dangers threatening ourselves." This extract shows, that our fathers were anxiously awake to the public welfare, which they perceived greatly threatened by late acts of the King.

* May 4th. Edward Wharton, who was actively engaged in spreading the doctrines of the Friends, was apprehended in Boston and ordered by the Governor to be whipped and carried to his house at Salem.—† 18th. ment of 1659. Although this was done, yet, for many years after, there was a controversy between these two towns concerning the same matter.

* June 5th. Elder Brown requested a dismissal from his office in the Church, because his trading to Virginia (whence he had lately returned) prevented him from attending to its duties as he desired.—† 28th. A few of the Friends were fined and others convicted for absence from worship.—‡ 30th. Edward Wharton having gone from Salem to Boston with Whenlock Christison to see Mary Tomkins, who was sick and had just returned from a mission to Virginia, was ordered to receive 30 lashes and be conducted to his house.

§ Aug. 3d. General Court assembles to consider communications from his Majesty's Commissioners, whose appearance in N. England, filled them with strong fears as to their liberties. They so altered the conditions of becoming Freemen, as that certificates from any regular Clergyman, representing persons to be correct in sentiment and conduct, would entitle them to such a privilege. This alteration, which made it unnecessary for men to be professors of religion in order to become members of the Legislature, was calculated to break the bond of union, which had existed between the Church and State for more than thirty years. The Court resolve to be loyal, but still to maintain their Charter rights. They order an address to his Majesty, which, under date of Oct. 25th, says, "Let our government live, our Patent live, our Magistrates live, our laws and liberties live, our religious enjoyments live, so shall we all yet have further cause to say, Let the King live forever." They appoint Sept. 1st as a Fast day for scanty crops and the threatening aspect of public affairs. They vote to comply with the request of his Majesty's Commissioners for troops to assist in reducing the Dutch at New Amsterdam. As we peruse the proceedings of our ancestors at this time, we perceive, that they considered themselves as very critically situated ; as on the verge of having the features of their government, which, as they believed, its strength, beauty and attraction, ~~were~~ <sup>were</sup> marred and destroyed by the power of Royalty. As imagination brings them before us, we note them as anxious and grieved, and yet, like men worthy of any age or nation, resolved to make every noble effort to keep their heritage from desolation and reproach.

Oct. 19th. General Court assemble. For the first time they vote an address to the Governor. They designate Nov. 16th as a Fast day "for frowns of greater evils." They confirm the choice of Walter Price, Capt., George Gardner, Lieut., and Zerubabel Endicot, Ensign, of the Salem company. They permit no other printing press than that of Cambridge, nor any thing to be printed, except by the consent of supervisors. They estimate wheat 5s., corn 3s., barley and barley malt 4s. 6d., peas and rye 4s., corn 3s. a bushel for rates.

* Nov. 6th. Mrs. Lydia Banks, who had been absent 22 years, desired a dismissal to the Church in London under Rev. Mr. Nye. Her request was granted. She was united with the Church here 1637. She had owned Playne's farm of 400 acres, which was sold about 1655. The Church records say, "The desire of our honoured Governor and wife for dismissal to a Boston Church, was granted." † A Comet was seen in N. England. It was thought to portend "great calamities and notable changes." ‡ It continued from Nov. 17th to Feb. 4th.

§ March 15th. Governor John Endicott died. He had scarcely moved from Salem, when he was called to his perpetual abode. He came from Dorchester in Dorsetshire, England. He was brother-in-law to Roger Ludlow, Deputy Governor. The consideration, that he was selected by the company, who fostered the settlement of Massachusetts to carry their plans into effect, is enough to show, that he stood high in the estimation of discerning and deserving men in his native country. Their recorded commendation of him coincided with their real opinion. *An English writer, in speaking of him, 1630, remarks: "a man well known to divers persons of good note." The merits of his character, as possessed by him when coming to this country, were not diminished, but greatly increased, by his long employment in public service. True, the individuals and denominations, against whom he deemed it his duty to act, would not allow him to be so estimable a person. They cherished opinions and commended an administration of the laws, which he did not approve; and, therefore, they considered him wrong so far, as he differed from them. They measured his reputation by the rule of prejudice in favour of their own cause, for which rule impartial observers always make many allowances. After all the severe reflections cast upon him, he appears, in the eye of candour, to have diligently enforced a policy of government, which was approved by many of the best among his co-temporaries; but which was found, by his successors, to need, in some respects, the correcting hand of experience. In his private and public relations, he was a man of unshaken integrity. For my country and my God,—was the motto inscribed upon his motives, purposes and deeds. That he had his imperfections, there is no doubt. But that he exhibited as few of them under his multiplied and trying duties, as the most excellent of men would in his situation, is equally correct. His many exertions for the prosperity of Salem, and his ardent attachment to it, should impress his name and worth on the hearts of its inhabitants as long as its existence continues. His first wife was Ann Gour, who came with him from England, and lived but a short time after her arrival hither. His second wife was Elizabeth Gibson, who survived him. He left two sons, John and Zerubabel. He was in his 77th year at his decease.

* May 3d. General Court convene. Edmund Batter and Walter Price were Deputies. The Court set apart June 22d for a Fast on account of caterpillars, salmon worm, and impending judgments. In compliance with the King's order, through his commissioners, the Court order a map of the Colony to be drawn. Wm. Hathorne acknowledges before the Court, that he had spoken unadvisely against his Majesty's commissioners. The Court agree that their declaration of allegiance to the King shall be published by Mr. Oliver Purchase on horse back, by sound of trumpets; and that Thomas Bleigh Treasurer, and Marshal Richard Wait accompany him; and that in the close there shall be audibly said: "God save the King." In this and other instances of paying homage to Kings, the rulers of Massachusetts acted more to avert threatened evils, than to please themselves. At the present time, the Commissioners of his Majesty were continually reminding them of their short-comings in loyalty, and menacing them with the scourge of his displeasure, unless they were more pliant to his views. General Court, to conciliate the King, voted him £500 worth of the commodity best suited for his navy. The committee raised to obtain this commodity, were nine, of whom were Wm. Brown and George Curwin.—† 24th. The King's Commissioners proposed to the General Court, that the Colony should abolish their coining establishment, as contrary to royal prerogative; should allow Episcopalians to be exempted from fine for not attending Congregational worship, and, also, to be freemen as well as others; should permit the Friends to go about their lawful business; should observe Nov. 5th as a day of Thanksgiving, because the King and country had been preserved from gun-powder treason; and keep May 29th in a similar manner, to commemorate the birth and restoration of Charles II.; and observe

Jan. 20th in fasting and prayer, "that God would avert his judgments for that most barbarous and execrable murder of our late sovereign, Charles I." These proposals appear to have been complied with. The last of them must have been exceedingly repugnant to the wishes of the colonists. * As General Court publicly proclaimed against the interference of his Majesty's Commissioners in the cases of two persons, who had violated the laws, they broke off all conference with each other. † One of the two persons, mentioned, was John Porter, jr. of Salem, who, more than a year past, was confined in Boston jail for mal-treatment to his father. ‡ An order from the Legislature came to the Church here for a Fast, on account "of difficulties with his Majesty's Commissioners, and for the Lord to incline the ear of his Majesty." § In May, Edward Wharton was apprehended in Boston with others of his denomination. He was sentenced to receive 15 lashes and be imprisoned a month.

|| Oct. 11th. Court of Assistants sit. They appoint Nov. 8th for Thanksgiving because of comfortable food, the Dutch fleet's being diverted from the coast, and of peace and liberty. Clap informs us that a report reached Massachusetts in July, that De Ruyter was in the West Indies and intended to come hither; that the Castle was prepared to resist him; and that, driven from our coast by contrary winds, he went to Newfoundland and "did great spoil there." The Court, also, designate Nov. 22d for a Fast on account of the plague in London and many other places of England.

¶ Nov. 28th. The Friends here were fined £56 10. John Hathorne was confirmed as Quarter Master.— Robert Moulton, sen'r, had died recently. His children, surviving him, were Robert, Abigail, Samuel, Hannah, John, Joseph, Meriam and Mary. He was a ship builder and lived in Salem as early as 1629. He became freeman 1631. He resided a short time at Charlestown, which he represented in General Court 1635. The town granted him 100 acres of land 1636. He held the chief offices of Salem and served as one of its Deputies to General Court. He sustained a reputable character.

1666.

* May 18th. Capt. Wm. Trask sen'r having died, the town make arrangements for his burial with military honours. He left a widow, Sarah, and children, William, Susan, Mary and John. He was among the first Church members. He became freeman 1630. He was granted 200 acres of land 1636. He sustained various offices in town,—was a Deputy to General Court, and several times served against the Indians. He was a brave man; a useful and respected member of society.—† 23d. General Court assemble. Wm. Brown and George Curwin were Deputies. The Court, considering the town and harbour of Salem much exposed, order it to be fortified. They encourage the people here, by an abatement of taxes, to build a battery in some suitable place. They instruct George Curwin to exert himself for finishing such defence. They require Marblehead to raise a company, to be trained by Maj. Wm. Hathorne of this place and Samuel Ward as serjeant of that place.—‡ 27th. The farmers, (living where Danvers now is) propose, that as the distance for them to attend meeting is great, they may be helped by the Congregation here to hire a minister, or that they may employ one themselves. Their petition was not yet granted.

§ June 13th. All males, above 16, were required to aid in making the fort on Winter Island.—|| 26th. Some of the Friends were fined £10. Josiah and Daniel Southwick and John Blevin, refusing to pay a fine of £1 apiece, were ordered to be whipped. Henry Skerry of Salem was chosen Marshal of the Court at £5 a year.

* Sept. 10th. A house belonging to Capt. Savage was burnt in this town. The incendiary, a woman, was ordered to Boston prison for trial.—† 11th. General Court convened. Some of the Elders met with them as advisers. Their object was to answer a letter of his Majesty dated 10th April. This letter stated that he had recalled his commissioners, and that he required the Governor and Council to choose four or five persons for meeting him in London, on the subject of existing difficulties, and that Wm. Hathorne must be of the number.—‡ 14th. Petitions were handed into the Court from several towns. One of them was from Salem, signed by 33 persons, composing a respectable minority. This minority thought, that the King's instructions to his Commissioners were paramount to the Charter; and that they, whom he had commanded to meet him in England, should go and endeavour to clear the Colony from charges of disloyalty.--17th. The Court, in answering his Majesty's order for agents to wait on him, decline a compliance with it, because they believed their case would be no better understood, even if a delegation from the colony were to visit him. By such a reply they gave him to understand, that they regarded their Charter, as the dernier resort in Colonial questions of difficulty, and not his absolute pleasure. At the same time, they inform him, that, however they deem an invasion of Canada inexpedient for want of forces, still they had proclaimed his declaration of war against the French by sound of trumpet; that the French had taken some of their Vessels; that they had granted commissions, under which some of the enemy's fishing ships had been captured.

§ Oct. 11th. The Court of Assistants assemble. They set apart Nov. 8th as Thanksgiving day, for continuance of civil and religious privileges; for preservation from invasion by the common enemy, and for sustenance through a drought. They also designate Nov. 20th for a Fast, because of sins, blatings, mildew, drought, grass-hoppers, caterpillars, and small-pox in Massachusetts; and wars and pestilence in England; and to pray that their liberties might be continued, country kept from invasion, and the fleet, lately sailed, have a prosperous passage.

* Nov. 27th. Some of the Friends are fined £7. "The Court do order that the wreck that was lately secured by the worshipful Maj. Wm. Hathorne, and left by him in the hands of John Devorix, all those goods or wreck shall be remanded by the said Maj. Hathorne and by him made use of for erecting a Cage in Salem and to be accountable for the remainder." It was the practice to punish some offenders by confining them in a cage, and exposing them to public view on lecture days. In the course of this year Richard, son of Thomas Gardner, moved to Nantucket. He married Sarah Shattock about 1652. She was cut off from the Church here 1662, for having attached herself to the Friends' Society, and, as one of them, was often prosecuted. It is likely these things induced them to leave Salem.

1667.

† Feb. 28th. The Church kept a Fast in reference to a motion for the brethren on Bass River to be a Church by themselves and settle John Hale as their minister.

April 2d. A Fast was observed here on account of the small pox in the Bay, and the burning of London.

‡ May 7th. The highway from Salem to Andover was laid out according to a previous plan of Gov. Endicott.—§15th. General Court assemble. George Curwin and Henry Bartholomew were Deputies. The Court order that foreign vessels, above 2 tons, shall pay 1-2 lb. of gunpowder, or an equivalent, for each ton. They appoint Wm. Hathorne to receive such powder for forts of Salem and Marblehead. They enact that, as enemies were by sea and land, there should be a military committee in every town to superintend the preparation of defences, so that they might serve as refuges to women, children, and aged people in time of danger, and thereby the soldiers be more at liberty to repel invaders. They designate a Committee of 5, among whom was George Curwin, to obtain an allowance on the charge, made by John Hull and Robert Sanders for coining, in consideration of the country's expense on the mint house. They grant the petition of Salem for two or three barrels of powder and two or three (large) guns.

* June 25th. A few of the Friends were fined.

† July 4th. The Church vote to use the Bay Psalm Book with Ainsworth. They consent that their brethren at Bass River shall become a distinct Church. ‡ This permission was put over for confirmation at a fuller meeting on Sacrament day, the latter part of the month. The number of persons, petitioning for the separation here contemplated, were about 74 of both sexes

§ Aug. 9th. By order of General Court, George Curwin, Wm. Brown and Walter Price were to receive contributions in Salem for his Majesty's fleet at Caribbee Islands.

|| Sept. 20th. The Church were invited to attend the ordination of Mr. John Hale. They concluded it best to have as many of their number attend as could. ¶ The separated members entered into covenant. Mr. Hale, being dismissed from Charlestown Church, was received into their fellowship. Including him there were 50 males and females, who signed the covenant. He was ordained by laying on of hands by Mr. Higginson of Salem, Mr. Thomas Cobbit of Ipswich, and Mr. Antipas Newman of Wenham. Then these ministers and their delegates owned the persons, who had just covenanted, to be a regular church. Mr. Hale preached for his people 3 years before his ordination. He was preceded in preaching for them by Joshua and Jeremiah Hobart. These two were sons of Rev. Peter Hobart of Hingham. Joshua became minister of Southhold, L. I. Jeremiah, who married Dorothy, daughter of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn, became minister of Topsfield, then of Hemstead, L. I., and then of Haddam, Connecticut, where he died 1715, in his 85th year. He was grandfather to David Brainard, the noted Missionary. Both of the Messrs. Hobarts graduated at Harvard 1650. The salary of Mr. Hale varied from £64 to £85 and 30 cords of wood. This article, as drawn for him, was estimated at 6s. a cord. He was son of Robert and Rebeckah Hale of Charlestown. He was married thrice. He died May 15th 1700, in his 64th year.

* Sept. 25th. Mrs. Alice Sharp, widow of the Ruling Elder, had died recently. She left children, viz. Nathaniel and Hannah, and three other daughters, married to Thomas Jeggles, Christopher Phelps, and John Norton. Her name is among the first Church members. She lived and died respected.

† Oct. 9th. Court of Assistants convene. They appoint 5 persons, of whom was George Curwin, to superintend the building of vessels, because some had been built, which, in materials and models, were calculated to injure the colony's commerce. They propose, that any person who would build a dry dock for ships of 300 tons within 12 months should have the income of it, and no other dock should be made for 15 years. They set wheat at 5s., rye, barley, barley malt 4s., peas 3s. and corn 2s. 8d. a bushel for rates. They appoint Nov. 5th as a Thanksgiving day, for continuance of liberty, preservation from common enemy and a good harvest. They designate 1st Wednesday of Dec. for Fast day on account of troubles in Churches of all parts, particularly England, terrible tempests and the capture of vessels.

*Nov. 26th. As many in Salem had not taken the oath of fidelity, they were required to do it before Judge Hathorne. Josiah Southwick was sentenced to pay 10s. "for contempt of authority by keeping on his hat after he was required to put it off." Others of the Friends were fined £14. If refusing to pay or give security, they were to be confined a week in the House of Correction at Ipswich at their own cost, and the Marshal was to impress carts and horses for their safe conveyance.—Messrs Higginson and Hathorne were desired to consult with persons of Marblehead about a petition, which these persons had presented for liberty to call and settle some one to assist Mr. Walton in the ministry.

†Jan. 14th. A day of Thanksgiving was kept by vote of the Church, for the preservation of liberty and for news of peace between England and Holland, which had arrived months before.

‡March 8th. Governor and Council request the ministers of all the towns to go, in imitation of Congregational ministers in England, and converse from house to house with young and old within the bounds of their parishes. Compliance with this advice was attended with good effects.

§April 15th. Robert Tufton Mason, proprietor of the Province of New-Hampshire, grants Wm. Trask of Salem the improvement of his house and land, except mines, for 15s. a year. Mr. Mason appears to have revived the claim, of which his grandfather, John Mason, had granted him by Plymouth Council in England, 635, as to lands from Naumkeag, or North River of Salem, to Piscataqua River.—The claim which Wm. Trask allowed, was disputed strenuously by inhabitants of Ipswich, Gloucester and Beverly, in 1631. According to the testimony of Richard Brackebury, William Dixy, and Humphrey Woodbury, in

1681, the ground for opposing Mason's claim was, that the Massachusetts Company purchased the right to land on the North side of Naumkeag River of the Dorchester Company, before Gov. Endicott came from England.

*29th. General Court sit. Edmund Batter and John Porter were Deputies. The Court instructed Messrs. Batter and Bartholomew, as assessors, to estimate the merchandize in the Salem warehouses, and give a report of it to the County Commissioners. They require this and other towns to have a contribution, as a mark of their loyalty, for the paying of freight on masts, which had been, and were to be transported for his Majesty's navy. They order several Baptists of Boston to leave the Colony, unless they renounced their opinions. † This accorded with an able protest of the Congregational ministers, assembled in Boston, which was dated April 30th, and was particularly aimed against an assembly of Baptists, lately set up in Boston.

‡ June 30th. Ordered that £20 of a county rate be paid towards erecting a prison at Salem. Some of the Friends were fined £9 5. Edward Wharton, though uncalled for, repeatedly entered the Court "in an un-reverent manner with his hat on," and declared that the Government had shed innocent blood. He was asked, if he did not wickedly by thus expressing himself. He replied, "God forbid I should own that to be wicked, which God requires of me." He was fined £50 and ordered to be imprisoned till his fine was paid.

§ July 8th. As the inhabitants at North Neck were fearful of Indians, who resided thereabouts, they had leave for a watch to be set.

Sept. 10th. Mr. Nathaniel Pickman died. He had come from Bristol, England, to this town with his family 1666. His wife was Tabitha, and children, Nathaniel, John, Benjamin, William, Samuel, and Bethiah. 15th. Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Mr. George Curwin died. She was the widow of Mr. John White before she came to this country and married Mr. Curwin. She had some property by her first husband, which her second husband greatly increased. She united with the Church here 1640. Besides her children by Mr. Curwin, she had two daughters by Mr. White, one, Mary, married to Samuel Gardner, and the other to Samuel Andrew. She was a worthy woman.

* Oct. 14th. Court of Assistants convene. They pass a law against travelling to improper places on the Sabbath. They enact that no persons, except church members in full communion, shall have liberty to choose and call a minister. † "The people at Cape Ann side received permission from General Court to be a Township, called Beverly." Beverly originally belonged to Sagamore John of Agawam, who granted it to the Colonists. Three of his grand children requested something for it; and, to satisfy them, though having no equitable claim, the inhabitants of Beverly paid them £6 6 8 in 1700. Among the useful persons set off from Salem to Beverly, were Richard Brackenbury, Roger Conant and Thomas Lathrop. Mr. Brackenbury came over with Governor Endicott. He was among the original church members. He became freeman 1630. He was granted 75 acres of land 1636. He died 1685 in his 85th year. He left descendants. Mr. Conant was an estimable man. He was at the head of the Planters, who came from Cape Ann and first settled in Salem. He was among the first church members. He became freeman 1631. He was granted 200 acres of land at the head of Bass River 1636. He, while an inhabitant of this town, held its principal offices and represented it at General Court. He petitioned General Court for land, "as an ancient planter," in 1671, and they granted him 200 acres. He came to this country from Budleigh in England. He died Nov. 19th 1679, in his 89th year. He left children. Capt. Lathrop was an active, intelligent and useful man. He, while within the limits of Salem, often held its chief offices, and was a member of the church here before 1636. He was made freeman 1634. He was granted 30 acres of land 1636. He was an active and brave officer; and as such, was in several contests with the Indians and French. About 1654 he was a Captain under Major Sedgwick at the taking of St. Johns. He then desired the Major, that he would grant the bell, which was there, for Bass River meeting house. The Major answered, that this bell was promised, but that he would give him the next one taken. Port Royal was soon captured and Capt. Lathrop renewed his request. The Major accordingly ordered the bell, in the "New Friary" of Port Royal, to be put into the hands of the Captain, who had it transported to Bass River, (afterwards Beverly) and placed there in the meeting house. Capt. Lathrop was slain in a deadly battle with the Indians 1675. He came from England where he left a brother. He brought over a sister, Ellen, who became the second wife of Ezekiel Cheever, the noted school-master. He left a widow, Bethiah, daughter of Joshua Rea, and afterwards wife of Joseph Grafton. He had no children.

* Nov. 24th. Salem is allowed £6 13 4 towards building a bridge over Ipswich River for the new road to Andover. Some of the Friends were fined £8 10. Samuel Shattock, John Blevin, Josiah Southwick and Joshua Buffum were committed to prison one month for not paying their fines. Nathaniel Hadlock was admonished for attending a meeting of the Friends; fined 40s. for refusing to assist a constable; and to be severely whipped for declaring, that he could receive no profit from Mr. Higginson's preaching, and that the government were guilty of innocent blood. He was also to give bonds for £20 that he would keep the peace.

Messrs. Higginson of Salem, and Thatcher of Boston, recommend to the public Morton’s Memorial.

* April 3d. A letter was received by the Church here from dissenting brethren of the first Church in Boston. † These brethren, being 23, were opposed to the settlement of John Davenport over their society in 1667, particularly because he had objected to the result of the Synod in 1662, and because his Church of New Haven did not consent to his leaving of them. They had tried for a dismissal, but had not succeeded. ‡ For this purpose they desired the Salem Church to credit no evil reports against them, and to send their Elder and messengers to meet with others in Boston on the 13th, to advise them. The Pastor and Capt. Price were designated to attend this Council.—30th. The Pastor reported, that messengers from 13 other churches, besides those of Salem and Lynn, had met in Boston. He stated, that members of the Council applied to the Elders of the first Boston Church twice and then to both Elders and the brethren by way to pacification, but were denied any conference. He represented, that after these steps, the Council approved of advice, given to the aggrieved brethren by a former Council, and advised them to form another Church by themselves.

Elders of the first Church in Boston was read before the Church here, which requested, that they would not think uncharitably of them. The Pastor observed, that, as the dissenting brethren had been formed into a Church at Charlestown by representatives from five Churches, according to advice of two Councils, he saw no necessity of doing any thing about the letter. The Church thus formed at Charlestown became the third Church of Boston, and is called the Old South.—* 19th. General Court assemble. George Curwin and Henry Bartholomew are Deputies. For carrying the law into effect against exporting coined money, the Court appoint searchers for it in different towns. They commission Edmund Batter to act in this business at Salem. As the Imitation of Christ by Thomas a Kempis, a Catholic Priest, was about to be printed, they order it to be revised by the Licensers. They instruct George Curwin to see that the Salem Fort is finished, and the Selectmen to assess taxes for meeting the expense † June 29th. By an account allowed, it appears that the Colony had been answerable for the expenses, which the Magistrates and Deputies were at in passing to and from General Court. Benjamin Felton was appointed to keep the Salem prison. He accepted the trust for one year, having as much as Mr. Wilson, the keeper of Ipswich prison had. Some of the Friends were fined £9 10. John Blevin and Robert Gray of them were imprisoned for not giving security. As usual the Judges allow the servants where they boarded some compensation for attendance. Tamson, the widow of Robert Buffum, was appointed administrator of his estate; but as Gertrude Pope and Elizabeth Kitchen, of the Friends, and witnesses to his will, would only testify and not swear to its correctness, it was not allowed to remain on file.

* Nov. 3d. Messrs. Hathorne and Price, as messengers from the Church here, met with a Council in Newbury concerning difficulties between the Pastor and people there. This contention was renewed and occasioned another Council in about a year.

† April 5th. Wm. Brown sen. Edmund Batter, Henry Bartholomew and George Curwin, were appointed to agree with carpenters for building a meeting house not to exceed £1000. This building was to be 20 feet stud and set at the West end of the old meeting house towards the prison. The town gave land to set it on.

‡ May 11th. General Court assembles. George Curwin and Edmund Batter are Deputies. The Court say, "Whereas by the blessing of God, the trade of Fishing hath been advantageous to this country, which is likely to be much impaired by the use of Tortuga salt which leaves spots upon the Fish, by reason of shells and trash in it;" and they forbid such fish to be accounted merchantable. They appoint June 16th as a Fast-day for neglect of the young, and of maintaining the ministry in some places, and other transgressions. They choose a committee to report what had been the cause of divine displeasure against the laud. The Committee after stating such things, "as a subversion of Gospel order," to be the occasion of judgments, speak against the formation of the 3d Church of Boston as irregular. The question, whether a man may marry the sister of his deceased wife, is decided by the Court in the negative.

§ June 18th. Daniel Epes was hired to keep the school. He was from Ipswich. Mr. Norrice, who was his predecessor, was still kept in part pay. || 27th. Mr. Thomas Ruck had died lately. He and his wife, Elizabeth, joined the Church here 1640. He was made freeman the same year. He left a widow and children, among whom was John Ruck. He appears to have sustained a respectable standing in society.—* This month, it was agreed, that candidates for the Church should be admitted P. M. at the close of the sermon.—It was customary for such candidates to stand propounded a month before admission.—†28th. A fine of £6 was laid on some of the Friends. Attachments were to be laid on the property of others, that they might be compelled to appear at Court.

Nov. 29th. Mr. John Croad, merchant, had recently deceased. He had married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Walter Price. She and their children survived him. He had held the office of Marshal, and seems to have possessed a reputable character.

Dec. 2d. William Hathorne, Judge, Æ 63, testifies, that Lady Moody came over about 30 years ago, and paid Mr. Humphrey for his estate £1100.

1671.

‡ March 3d. Capt. John Smith allowed 40s. for entertaining sick people at Castle hill.

§ May 31st. General Court sit. Messrs Batter and Bartholomew are Deputies. Clergymen are freed from country, county and church rates. They are also freed from town rates, except a contrary agreement is made. As the property of Governor Endicott's widow was not sufficient for her support, she was granted an annuity of £30 during her widowhood. This act was an indication of public respect both for her and her deceased husband. Fifteen ministers who counselled the 3d Church of Boston to form a Society by themselves, present an address to the Court, requesting, that, as their committee the last year reported them as disorganizers for giving such counsel, they may have a hearing either before the Court or a Convention of Churches. The Court consider their address, and apologize to them for improper terms, applied to them by their committee. Of the clergymen so concerned was Mr. Higginson.

* June 25th. Elias Stileman was recommended to the Church at Portsmouth, where he was a useful and eminent man.—† 30th. Pasco Foot had died lately. He became a member of the Church 1652. He left children, Pasco, Elizabeth, Mary, Samuel, and Abigail. He was an enterprizing merchant.

‡ July 17th. For £160 salary voted to Mr. Higginson, and understood to be payable in country produce, he agreed to take £120 in cash. This shows that discount on contracts for produce, when paid in money, was occasionally 1-4 part.

§ October. About this time, James Bailey, of Newbury, began to preach for the people of Salem Village.

1672.

|| March 22d. Permission was granted to the farmers to have a minister by themselves.—¶ 22d. Two persons who had been covenant children of the Church were publicly censured and admonished for ill-conduct. This shows that an immediate watch was kept by the Church members over those, who had been baptized in infancy. An example of this kind is now worth imitating.

** May 1st. As complaint was made against racing horses to the danger of people's lives, and against riding fast to and from meeting on the Sabbath, such practices were forbidden on penalty of 40s.—†† 6th. The town by consent of Mr. Higginson and Church, request Charles Nicholet to preach for them a year on trial for settlement. They also desire him to preach a lecture once every week. Mr. Nicholet came from Virginia and had preached several times before he was invited to continue his labours.—8th. The Selectmen publicly forbid 12 persons to spend their time and es-rates at the two ordinaries of Salem in drinking.--*15th. General Court sit. George Curwin and Henry Bartholomew are Deputies. The Court agree to observe the 22d as a Fast day in the Court House. Several ministers are designated to perform the religious services. June 13th is appointed for a Fast day, because of the involved state of England, and threatening wars of Europe. The Court order, that scolds and railers shall be gagged or set in a ducking stool and dipped over head and ears three times. They forbid persons to give their workmen wine or strong liquors on fine of 20s. except in cases of need. It appears by the repeal of a law, that none but tanners had been allowed to trade in hides. Wm. Hathorne and another are designated to make diligent inquiry concerning memorable events, and particularly "what hath been collected by John Winthrop sen. Thomas Dudley, John Wilson sen. and Edmund Johnson, or any other, that so matter being prepared, some meet person may be appointed by this Court to put the same into form, that so after perusal, it may be sent to the press." Joseph Gardner is appointed Lieutenant of the company under Capt. Walter Price.—† 28th. War was proclaimed in Boston against the Dutch, as had already been done in England.

‡ June 25th. Not long before this, Mr. Theodore Price was lost at sea. He was son of Walter Price. He married Ann Wood 1667. He left her with two daughters. His widow married Dudley Bradstreet, of Andover, son to the Governor, 1673.

§ Aug. 11th. Mr. Nicholet was admitted a member of the Church here.—|| 17th. It was voted, that the Old Meeting House should be pulled down on the 19th, and that 30 men a day be employed for this business. It was agreed that "the old pulpit and the Deacon's seat be given to the Farmers."—19th. It was voted, that of the meeting house materials a school house and watch house should be built.

† Oct. 8th. Court of Assistants convene. Fast is appointed to be Dec. 24th, for unusual sickness the latter part of the summer and its continuance in some towns; for hay hurt by rains; for England's being greatly concerned in the Protestant wars of Europe. The inhabitants of Salem village are allowed to raise money for the support of the ministry and erection of a meeting house. Wm. Hathorne is allowed land of a mile square at or near Pennicook, for 500 acres granted him 1661, provided it should not hinder the town already granted. Henry Bartholomew and Joseph Gardner are appointed a Committee for Essex to settle the accounts of what was received for the relief of his Majesty's fleet at Caribee Islands; and, also, to collect the back contributions.

‡ Nov. 11th. Mr. Bailey was voted £40 for his first year's preaching.—§ 29th. Mr. John Norman had died lately. He was one of the persons, employed by the Dorchester Company and was at Salem with his father, when Governor Endicott arrived. His age was about 60. He left a wife, Arabella, and children. She joined the Church here 1636.

|| Dec. 26th. The people of Salem village agree to build a meeting house, 16 feet stud, 28 broad, and 34 long.

¶ Jan. 14th. Mr. Wm. Lord, sen. Cutler, died, Æ. about 89. His relict was Abigail. He united with the Church here 1639. He had been selectman and sustained other offices in town. He was a benevolent and useful member of society.

Voted by those of Salem village, that 1-5 of the rate for building a meeting house, shall be paid in money or butter at 5*d* per pound.

‡ April 14th. The town, contrary to Mr. Higginson's wish, requested Mr. Nicholet to preach for them another year after the first shall have ended.—21st. A Committee were chosen to build a school house, which was to serve as a watch and town house, of the timber, that was in the old meeting house.—26th. Among the services of the sexton, he was to call at Mr. Higginson's house for him, in the morning and afternoon of every Sabbath.

§ May 7th. General Court assemble. Henry Bartholomew was Deputy. Wm. Brown sen. had been chosen with him by the town, but he seems not to have appeared at the first of the session. Wm. Brown sen., George Curwin and two others, are requested to import, on account of the Colony, 60 great guns, and a proportion of shot, from Bilboa, where they traded.

|| June 24th. Mr. Jacob Barney had died recently, Æ. 73. He became freeman 1634, and a member of the Church here, about the same time. He had a grant of land 1636. He was often selectman and Deputy to General Court. He was an intelligent merchant. He left a wife, Elizabeth, and children, Jacob, and a daughter, married to John Cromwell. The loss of such men as Mr. Barney is not easily supplied. Rev. Mr. Nicholet took the oath of freeman.

and preservation from enemies on neighboring coasts. The enemies here referred to were the Dutch, in a squadron from Holland, who had destroyed the commerce of Virginia and re-captured New-York. The Court order 100 militia men, and 30 troopers to be impressed from Essex Regiment. They having been informed, "that there is one Robert Stone, master of a vessel, lately come from New-York and arrived at Salem, do judge it necessary in order to the present affair under consideration, that said Stone together with Mr. Hollingsworth, who was lately taken by the Dutch, be forthwith sent for;" that the Court "may receive such information as they can give." Persons, not members of Churches in full communion, and desiring to become freemen were henceforth to hand in their names at the Court of Election, and have them read over some day of the session, and the vote, for their being admitted freemen, was not to be taken till next Court of Election. As sheep had been set too high in country rates, the Court order them to be valued at £5 a score. As piracy was prevailing, an act is passed, that it shall be punishable with death. * One occasion of this law was that an English crew had taken their ship from the captain and put him with some of his officers into the long boat. He arrived at Boston, whither the mutineers soon came with his vessel. They were executed in Boston.

† Nov. 7th. Those of Salem village voted Mr. Bailey £47 and 40 cords of wood for his second year. They, also, voted to build a house for the Ministry, 13 feet stud, 20 wide, and 28 long, and a "leantoo of 11 feet at the end."

‡ Dec. The selectmen, knowing that some persons neglected to have their children instructed and brought up to useful employment, advertize the children of five such persons, as ready for being bound out to service.

* Jan. 6th. General Court grant Richard Hollingsworth 500 acres of land. They order that every postman, on public service, shall have 3*d.* a mile, and that no inn-holder shall charge him more than 2*s.* a bushel for oats, and 4*d.* for hay during day and night.

† Feb. 19th. Mr. Higginson, knowing that a majority of his people were about to invite Mr. Nicholet to preach a third year, which would begin June 14th, called a Church meeting, and stated that he was decidedly opposed to Mr. N's. staying any longer. The reasons of his objection were, that Mr. N. did not preach sound doctrine; that his continuance was calculated to increase difficulty; and that he was no help to him. Mr. H. laid these reasons before the Church, that Mr. N. might have reasonable notice to provide for himself elsewhere. Much debate ensued. Mr. H. was inclined to take a vote on the subject, but the principal of the brethren advised him to delay, lest a minority of them should join the town and have Mr. N. at all events. Mr. H. complied, and observed, that he felt satisfied with having done his duty. In the beginning of March, the town desired Mr. H. to attend their meeting; and asked his reasons for objecting to Mr. N's preaching for them. He answered, You know. When they stated that they wished for Mr. N. to abide with them another year, Mr. H. said, that he would be passive but not concur.

‡ March 31st. John Ruck, and John Putnam, of Salem, were part of a company who owned iron works at Rowley village.

§ May 27th. General Court assemble. George Curwin and Henry Bartholomew are Deputies. The Court order, that Salem Company shall be divided into two; that Joseph Gardner be captain of one, and John Curwin captain of the other.

|| June 5th. Capt. Walter Price died Æ. 61. His wife was Elizabeth, who deceased the succæding Nov.

11th, Æ. 73. They were married in Bristol, England. They appear to have come to Salem 1641. They united with the church here 1642, and he became freeman the same year. He left children, Elizabeth, married to her second husband, John Ruck, and Hannah, wife of Hilliard Veren, jun. and two sons, John and William. He was a respectable merchant. His estate was over £2058. His offices were various. He was often one of the Selectmen and of the Deputies to General Court. He was an estimable member of the community.—

* 30th. A person, for slandering Mr. Higginson, was sentenced to make an acknowledgement before the Assembly on Lecture day, and audibly crave his pardon, or be whipped 15 stripes and imprisoned till bonds be given for £5. Mr. Thomas Gardner had died recently. He was son of Thomas Gardner, who came from Scotland, and who was an overseer of the Plantation at Gloucester 1624, and moved thence to Salem. He, and his first wife, Margaret Frier, united with the church here 1639. He became freeman 1641. His last wife, Damaris Shattock, connected herself with the Friends, and for this was often fined. She survived him. His children were Sarah Balch, Seeth Grafton, Thomas, George, John, Samuel, Joseph, and Richard. He had lost a daughter, Miriam Hill. According to the custom of his time, he left his son, Thomas, a double portion. He was selectman and held other offices of the town. He was a respectable merchant.

† September. Mr. Nicholet began to preach nine farewell sermons, as if he were about leaving Salem.

October. The town, to prevent Mr. Nicholet's departure, gave him a call to continue with them for life. The lecture day following he accepted their invitation. Not long after this, some persons, none of whom belonged to the Church, attempted to gather another Church in Salem.

Nov. 30. Mr. Higginson acquainted his Church, that the Deputy Governor and Major General had been applied to, by individuals, for permission to form a Church at Lynn on Dec. 8th, but that they did not grant them permission. The Church voted to send the Pastor, and brethren, Wm. Brown, Edmund Batter and Samuel Gardner, to oppose the gathering of the proposed Church. He and two of these brethren appeared at Lynn Dec. 8th, and with messengers from Ipswich, Rowley, and Beverly, voted against the organizing of the Church. Messengers from other churches thought, on examination of the persons intending to become a Church, that they had better delay being so organized. Chief Justice Sewall informs us, in his diary, that the object of forming such a Church was to get Mr. Nicholet for its minister.

It appears, that as Mr. Nicholet's friends were defeated in having a Church organized in Salem, they tried for the same object at Lynn. Had they succeeded, they would, in all probability, have had the Church so gathered, returned to this town, and called the second Church of Salem.

1675.

* Jan. 10th. The Church here was invited to attend the ordination of Joseph Gerrish at Wenham on the 13th. Edmund Batter and Henry Skerry were chosen to go with the Pastor. Mr. Gerrish was son to Mr. Wm. Gerrish, of Newbury. He was born March 23, 1651. He graduated at Harvard 1669. He married Anna, daughter of Maj. Richard Waldron of Dover. He began to preach at Wenham 1673. He died there Jan. 6th, 1720, in his 70th year. He left four sons and three daughters. He was an intelligent and estimable minister.—18th. A letter from the Governor and Council was read to the Church. It proposed the expediency of asking advice from churches about the difficulties, occasioned by the continuance of Mr. Nicholet. The Pastor and Hon. Wm. Hathorne and most of the brethren thought best to comply. The Church agreed on Feb. 18th for a day of Humiliation to seek divine guidance, when Messrs. Higginson and Nicholet perform the services.

Feb. 19th. The Pastor excepted against Mr. Nicholet's doctrine and practice. Mr. N. made some explanation and concessions; and his acknowledgement was accepted as satisfactory. Mr. Joseph Brown was dismissed to Charlestown Church for which he preached. He was son of Hon. Wm. Brown. He graduated at Harvard 1666. He married Mehitable Brenton, who died Sept. 14th, 1676. He died at Charlestown 1678. On Harvard Catalogue the name of Mr. Brown is not printed in Italics, which, at first sight, would seem to denote, that he was not a preacher. But the fact is, that the names of preachers not ordained were printed as his is. In his day it was customary to preach three, six or more years for a society, before ordination over them. This spring a majority of the town and many of the Church attempted to build a Meeting House, which they carried forward so far as to raise the roof of it on the Common. They petitioned General Court that Mr. Nicholet might become their minister.

* May 12th. General Court sit. Samuel Brown and Edmund Batter are Deputies. The Court direct letters to every town clerk, requesting ministers to stir up the inhabitants to pay what contributions were due and to contribute more to finish the new building for the college. They confirm John Pierce as Lieutenant, and John Higginson, Ensign, of the company under Capt. Joseph Gardner; and Richard Leach as Lieutenant, John Pickering, Ensign, of the company under Capt. John Curwin. They order that a person be appointed in every sea-port to prevent the exportation of sheep, wool, and racoon furs. They require Constables to carry their black staves as before, except when in pursuit of delinquents, and then do as convenient. On account of the petitions and remonstrances from Salem about Mr. Nicholet, the Court designate the Governor, Deputy Governor, and eight more, as a committee to meet here and endeavour to make an amicable adjustment of difficulties.

* June 8th. The Committee, last mentioned, came hither and were in session three days. Their report was dated the 10th. They regret the contention. They declare the manner of calling and settling Mr. Nicholet, by a promiscuous vote of the town, very irregular and contrary to all known wholesome laws of the Colony, and of a tendency dangerous both to Church and State. They advise that the church and town observe a day of Fasting and Prayer and settle their differences; that the ministry be carried on by Messrs. Higginson and Nicholet together; and that when another society should be formed, it should be done with harmony. "At the same time the committee were in session, news came that Philip and the Indians had begun war with the English."

† June 29th. Fast day on account of Indian troubles.

‡ July 9th. Edmund Batter and Wm. Brown appeared as Deputies at General Court, which voted, that the charge for an expedition against the Indians shall be laid on the whole colony.—§ 20th. Richard Prince died recently, Æ. 61. He joined the Church 1642, and became freeman the same year. He was long Deacon of the Church here. He was a tailor by occupation. He was frequently one of the selectmen. He was an active, influential and worthy man.—26th. Governor Winslow of Plymouth writes to Mr. Leveret, "my person, I hear, has been much threatened by Indians. I have about twenty men at my house; have sent away my wife and children to Salem, that I may be less incumbered; have flanked my house and resolve to maintain it as long as a man will stand by me."

† Oct. 8th. £10 13 were distributed to persons in and out of Salem, who had suffered by the Indians.—

‡ 13th. Court of Assistants convene. They require the Military Committee to see that every town is guarded against invasion. Owing to the pressing charge on account of the Indian War, they order seven single country rates; each of which was to be for Boston £300, Salem £180, Charlestown £80, and Ipswich £70. The single rate of all Essex was £474 10 11; Middlesex £465 8 6, and Suffolk £613 6 11.

Nov. 3d. The General Court publish what they consider twelve evils, which brought on the country the burning and depopulating of several hopeful Plantations, and the murdering of many people by the Indians. One of these evils is thus expressed: "Long hair, like woman's hair, is worn by some men, either their own or others hair made into perewigs; and by some women wearing borders of hair, and their cutting, curling and immodest laying out their hair, which practice doth prevail and increase especially among the younger sort." Another evil, as described by the Court was, "Pride in apparel, both for costliness in the poorer sort, and vain new strange fashions both in poor and rich, with naked breasts and arms, or as it were pinioned with the addition of superfluous ribbons both on hair and apparel." The Court revive their laws against the meetings of the Friends and their being brought into the Colony. Lest the Indian war should make provision scarce, they prohibit the exportation of wheat, biscuit, and flour. They consider some reflections made on them and the Maj. General in presence of Capt. George Curwin by Capt. Haskett of Salem; whom they require to apologize to Capt. Curwin here on a lecture day, and pay £50. They appoint Dec.

‡ Nov. 4th. Mr. Higginson attended a Council at Rowley, to advise the church there, to settle their difficulties about Mr. Shepard's preaching for them.—§25th. Eleven men were impressed for the country's service, some of whom belonged here.

Dec. 1st. Thirty-one men were impressed from the Salem companies. They appear to have been selected for an expedition against the Narragansets. They marched with other troops from Boston the 8th. On the 15th, two men of this town were killed, and one more wounded by Indians. Capt. Joseph Gardner, of this town, and others, went out immediately and killed an Indian, who had slain one of the Salem troops and had his cap on.—19th. The forces of Plymouth, Connecticut and Massachusetts attacked the Narragansets in a Swamp. After a warmly contested battle of three hours, the English took the enemy's place and fired their wigwams. One thousand of the Indians perished. Eighty-five of the English were killed or died of their wounds, and one hundred and forty-five others wounded. Among the killed were Capt. Gardner and six of his company, besides eleven more of them wounded.

|| "Maj. Church espying Capt. Gardner amidst the wigwams in the east end of the Fort made towards him; but on a sudden, while looking at each other, Capt. Gardner settled down. The Major stepped to him and seeing the blood run down his cheek, lifted up his cap and called him by name. He looked up but spoke not a word, being mortally wounded, shot through the head, and observing the wound the Major ordered care to be taken of him." Thus fell an inhabitant of Salem in the camp of his enemies. The loss of him and others of his townsmen in so bloody a contest, must have occasioned here, when related, general emotions of regret. Capt. Gardner was son of Thomas Gardner. He appears to have followed the seas as a commander. He had married Ann, daughter of Emanuel Downing, before 1657. He left no children. His widow married Governor Bradstreet about 1680. By his patriotic devotedness, he honoured both his town and country.

* Dec. 21st. A question arose among the Friends here as to the propriety of the hat's being worn in time of prayer. The greater part of them decided this question in the negative.

† Jan. 11th. A considerable number of persons had fled to Salem for protection. The record as to them is, they "being driven from their habitations by the barbarous heathen, are added as inhabitants of the town, though most of them affirming they have provision for themselves and families a year." Some of them had emigrated from Salem. Many towns were thus resorted to by those, who escaped from places, exposed to the Indians.

‡ Feb. 21st. General Court order 20 foot soldiers and ten troopers to be impressed out of Essex. They grant commissions to Lieut. John Peirce and Ensign John Higginson, of the company, lately under Capt. Joseph Gardner. As there were many Indians skulking about the Colony, the Court offer £3 for every one of them killed or taken prisoner.

§ March 15th. A Committee were to see that Essex was fortified. Salem was mentioned with other towns, as preparing, besides its Fort, several garrisons to secure the people of its farm houses.—27th. A letter from Maj. Wm. Hathorne, then commander at Wells, stated, that the people there were much distressed ; that the forces at Winter Harbour could not hold out, unless re-inforced ; and that many of his soldiers were sick.

April 8th. Major Wm. Hathorne writes to the Governor again from Wells, that the Indians had burnt Cape "Nettiok," killed 6 or 7 persons, besides two of Wells.—* 20th. Mr. Nicholet preached his farewell sermons. Being bound on a voyage to England, he removed to Boston. The Church here recommend him to the Churches of London and elsewhere. Thus closed the ministry of Mr. N. at Salem. It was unfavourable to the peace of himself and the congregation, that he was not approved of by Mr. Higginson, a majority of the Church, and a minority of the town. Though charged with offences in doctrine and conduct, yet he was conciliatory, and considered by most respectable men as fit to be colleague with Mr. Higginson. No doubt his conclusion to leave the country was more prudent, than if it had been to continue. The extremes of attachment and dislike, in circumstances like his, are more apt to converge to a happy medium, by the occasion of such extremes being removed, than by its being retained.

† May 3d. General Court convene. George Curwin and Henry Bartholomew are Deputies. As Salem found it difficult to have Constables stand, when chosen, the Court impose a fine of £10 on any one, refusing to serve as such, when elected. The Court require Essex to impress its proportion of men for service. To adjust demands against the Colony for carrying on the war, a committee was appointed in each county. There were three on the Essex committee, of whom was Henry Bartholomew. Capt. George Curwin was called by the Court to answer for a misunderstanding between him and Capt. Henchman, commander-in-chief of the forces, then out against the enemy. Capt. Curwin was required to give up the command of his cavalry and pay the country £100. But at the Sept. session, the * June 19th. "Agreed with John Marston to move the prison into Benjamin Holten's garden."—† 29th. Thanksgiving for the prospect of subduing the Indians.

‡ July 18th. Josiah Southwick was presented for bringing the wife of John Smith to address the people, on the Sabbath to their great annoyance. He was fined 10s. and ordered to bring the wife of said Smith before the Court to-morrow or pay 30s. The wife of Henry Trask was fined 5s. for disturbing the congregation, as they came out of meeting. John Robinson was fined 10s. for being twice at the Friends' meeting. Six others were arraigned for absence from congregational worship. Thus the Friends, after a few years' respite, began to feel the severities of law.

§ Aug. 6th. From a letter of Gen. Denison great alarm existed in this quarter because the enemy had passed the Merrimack.—12th. King Philip, the powerful foe of the English, was killed at Mount Hope Neck, R. I. He was the youngest son of Massasoit, and succeeded his brother Alexander 1657, as Sachem of Pokanoket. He had professed friendship for the Colonists. But he perceived that their extending settlements would demand either the removal of the Aborigines, or the obliteration of their name as a separate and independant people. Besides his apprehensions on this subject, he cherished a prejudice against all his civilized neighbours for injuries, which he or some of his subjects had received from a few of them. By expecting too much from the English, he arrived to the state of feeling, wherein he was satisfied with nothing at their hands. Thus unhappily inclined, he strove, for several years, to foment a spirit of jealousy and revenge in various tribes against the Colonists. His measures for this object were planned with much ability and executed with much adroitness. Thus intent, he resolved to make a mighty effort to rid the land of the English.

*T. R. †Mather. ‡Qt. Ct. R. §Col. P.

In 1675 he and his allies began their work of destruction. They were more powerful and more successful, than the Colonists supposed they could be. They spread desolation, terror and lamentation wherever they came. At length their tide of success began to ebb. Philip, their chief, was pursued with some followers, to the place of his death. The tidings of his fall spread joy through N. England. Could courage, enterprize, hardships, sagacity and patriotism, give victory, he would have succeeded. But well for his opponents, their superiority in discipline proved his overthrow. For the sufferings he brought upon them, they accounted him as the worst of his species. Still could some historians of his own nation have described the principles of his policy, and the traits of his character, they would have presented him before us as one of the greatest heroes of his age. Thus it is that adverse parties have always allowed themselves to cherish opposite views of the same motives, actions, and persons.

* Sept. 3d. A letter was received from Rev. John Wheelwright, of Salisbury, requesting messengers to attend a Council there Sept. 19th, with respect to Maj. Pike's ex-communication. Edmund Batter and John Hathorne were designated to attend. They reported that the Council advised Salisbury Church to repeal the vote for the cutting off of Maj. Pike. Mr. Wheelwright, who sent the said letter, was the one banished from Massachusetts 1633. After changing the place of his ministry several times, he settled at Salisbury, where he died Nov. 15th, 1679, at an advanced age.—† 6th. Maj. Wm. Hathorne, and other commanders, with their troops, surprised 400 Indians at Quecheco. Two hundred of these Indians were found to have been perfidious and were sent to Boston. Seven or eight of them were sentenced to immediate death and the rest were sent away and sold as slaves. Mr. John Porter died recently, Æ. about 80. He was made freeman 1633. 1649. He was afterwards concerned in transacting business of the town. He was frequently Selectman. He was Deputy to General Court. He left children. He was worthy of the confidence, which was largely placed in him.

* Nov. 6th. Jeffrey Massey's will was dated, and he died soon after, Æ about 84. He left a wife, Ellen, and a son, John. He was among the first Church members. He was often employed as Surveyor and also, on the board of Selectmen. He held these and other offices with honor to himself and usefulness to others. The question whether John Massey or Roger Conant was the first child, born in Salem, formerly received considerable attention from some. Jan, 1640, Roger Conant had land as the first born child of this town. John Massey petitions, March 1686, for the Ferry, as "the oldest man now living in Salem, that was born here." March 1704, the Church voted John Massey an old Bible, "he being considered the first town born child." The truth appears to be that Roger Conant was the first child born in Salem. But as he and his father were set off to Beverly years before Massey's petition, Massey, when petitioning for the Ferry, was the oldest man then living in Salem, who had been born here. The phrase in the Church Records, which represents Massey as the first born of this town, seems to have been either a misconstruction of the words in his petition, or a mistake of tradition respecting him.

† March 1st. Fast was observed by order of Court on account of the war.—March 6th. At the Court of Assistants, John Flint of Salem, was tried for being the means of Eliezer Coates' death. The verdict against him was manslaughter. He was fined £20, and required to pay £20 more to the father of the deceased.

town house at £4.—It is noticeable that what are now called clapboards, are written on old Records “clapboards” or “clayboards.” Clayboards appears to be more correct orthography than clapboards,—because such kind of lumber (perhaps of a larger size than at present, though of the same form) was formerly used to cover the clay, daubed upon the bricks, which were put in the sides of a house, as may be seen in some ancient, decaying buildings.

* May 6th. It was agreed that the Lord’s supper be every month.—† 23d. General Court sit. Edmund Batter was Deputy. Thomas Greaves is put down as another Deputy from Salem, but he belonged to Charlestown. The Court enact that the laws against profaning the Sabbath be read by each minister before his congregation twice every year, viz. in March and September. They order that tithing men be appointed, each of whom, in the various towns, shall have the care of ten families, so that Sabbath breakers be restrained. As, on the 11th of June, twenty-five tithing men were chosen by Salem to superintend its families, there were about 250 families here. If reckoning 5 2-3 to a family, as in England, there were 1416 inhabitants, besides a fraction, in this town. The Court require Cages to be set up in the market place of Boston and such other towns as the County Courts shall specify, for confining violators of the Sabbath. They empower Constables to make diligent search for the Friends on the Lord’s day, if suspected of being met together, and, if the constables be denied admittance where the Friends are, to break open the doors and apprehend them. As horses had been rated at the price of £5 each, but had fallen, the Court order, that from three years old and upward they shall be set at £3 apiece, between two and three years at £2, between one and two years at £1.

* July 8th. A vessel arrived at Salem, which took Capt. Ephraim How, of New-Haven, the only survivor of his crew, from a desolate Island near Cape Sables, where, for eight months, he endured severe suffering from cold and hunger.—† 16th. A part of the principal men of Salem write to the Council: "Some of us have met with considerable loss by Indians lately taking our vessels. Some vessels, lately come in, say that the Indians purposed to pursue four more of our Ketches, we therefore desire that a vessel with forty or fifty men may be immediately sent to protect them and retake those and the poor captives already taken." They also state that the enemy were at Cape Sables. The Council granted their request. It appears by Mr. Higginson's account, that a Ketch was fitted out against the enemy and was successful.—‡ 25th. "The Lord having allowed the Indians to take no less than thirteen Ketches of Salem and captivate the men (though divers of them cleared themselves and came home) it struck great consternation into all people here, and it was agreed, that the Lecture day should be kept as a Fast." The services were performed by the Pastor, Messrs. Hale, Cheever and Gerish. "The Lord was pleased to send in some of the Ketches on the Fast day, which was looked on as a gracious smile of Providence; also 19 wounded men had been sent to Salem a little while before. Also a Ketch with 40 men was sent out of Salem as a man of war to recover the rest of the Ketches. The Lord gave them success."

§ Aug. 4th. The Friends have a monthly meeting of men and women at the house of Josiah Southwick.

|| Sept. 6th. Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of Rev. Antipus Newman, of Wenham, claimed a tract of land at Ryal's side, granted to her brother, Gov. John Winthrop, jr. by Salem, for Salt Works. The town settled her claim.

* Oct. 7th. Samuel Cheever, minister of Marblehead, was admitted to the Church here, recommended by Ipswich Church. He was son of Ezekiel Cheever, the School master. It appears that he and the professors of religion, who heard him, still held their connexion with Salem Church.—† 10th. Court of Assistants convenc. They appoint Nov. 15th as Thanksgiving day for plentiful harvest and the diminution of the enemy's rage. They order three rates, two of them to be paid in the money and one in produce, which, if paid in money, was to have one third part discounted. They instruct the Treasurer to send his Majesty "10 barrels Cranberries, 2 hhds. of special good Samp, and 300 Cod Fish." The men of Salem village petition for leave to form a Company. The Court allow, that those of them on west of Ipswich road, may be free from Capt. John Curwin's company and be exercised at home by Lt. Richard Leach, leaving it to Salem militia to limit their two companies. As attempts had been made to fire Boston and other towns, the Court instruct the Selectmen, Tithingmen, and Constables of every town, to make a census of its inhabitants once in three months, that all may be known, who had not taken the oath of Fidelity, and be required to take such an oath. As his Majesty had sent instructions for his acts of trade to be observed, the Court order that all vessels going from Ports in the Colony, or coming to them, shall comply with these acts. To effect this object, they institute a Naval Office (probably at Boston) for all the vessels in Massachusetts.

Oct. 28th. The Court allow, that, as Mr. Bailey is recommended by Salem Church and others, he may become the minister of Salem village, where he had preached about six years.

† Nov. 18th. The Pastor read a vote of the town, dated 9th, that a contribution be taken for the poor every Sabbath, and that those, unable to give money, may put on paper what they will otherwise give.

Dec. 3d. Mr. James Bailey, minister of the village, was admitted to the first Church here by recommendation from Newbury Church.—* 28th. Council meet. They address letters to the ministers and selectmen of towns about bringing in the remainder of subscriptions, for the College brick building. As letters had been thrown on Exchange (in Boston) so that any body might take them and thus had been lost, the Council appoint John Haywood Post Master for the whole Colony.

† Feb. 19th. Baker's Island was leased to John Turner for £3 a year. Great and Little Misery together were leased to George Curwin at the same rate. The paving stones and ballast on these three Islands were to be free for the people of Salem. Neither wood nor timber was to be sold from them except to said people. The income of these Islands was appropriated towards the support of the Grammar School.—‡ 21st. Fast was observed by order of Council for Small Pox in some towns; fears of further trouble with the Indians, and on account of the Agents gone to England. These Agents were employed to settle the claims of the heirs to Gorges and Mason.

March 3d. Mrs. Mary Higginson was received into the Church by recommendation from a Boston Church. She was the Pastor's second wife, whom he appears to have married recently. § Edward Wharton had died lately. He had a brother George in London. He had done and suffered much to promote the doctrines of the Friends here and elsewhere. He appears to have been an intelligent and worthy man.

* Aug. 4th. Mrs. Baldin, a French lady, from the Isle of Jersey, who had testimonials from French ministers and had resided here some years, read a confession of faith in her own language, which was translated into English by Mr. Croad, and then read by the Pastor. She was admitted to the Church. At the same time Mrs. Endicott, formerly Newman, but now wife of Zerubabel Endicott, was admitted to the Church by recommendation from Wenham Church.—22d. Governor and Council recommend contributions to meet the expenses of redeeming captives in Canada, who had been taken by Indians from Hatfield. Salem contributed £5 8.—† 23d. There were 300 heads or male persons taxed in Salem. In reference to them the selectmen say: “We do desire that the commissioners would please to consider this town in abating what may be, our town being much impoverished by the Indian War.” The Commissioners here referred to were Wm. Brown, Edmund Batter and Bartholomew Gedney. They had been chosen by the Freemen of Salem, and confirmed the November preceding by County Court.

Sept. 2d. The Selectmen desire Wm. Hathorne to inform General Court, that the reason why they wished him to deliver in an appeal against some of Salem village, and did not do it themselves, was, that the Small Pox was at Boston and some of them aged, not able to travel.

‡ Oct. 8th. Court of Assistants convene. They require all the males of every town, above sixteen years, to take an oath of allegiance to the King. The number in Salem, who had not taken such an oath, were 160. Among the clauses of this oath is the following: “I do from my heart abhor, detest and abjure as impious and heretical this doctrine, that Princes, which be excommunicated by the Pope, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects.” The Court also enact that treason against the King shall be punishable with death. by what was called the Popish Plot to take the life of King Charles. But such a plot, which excited deep and general anxiety, appears to have been all a farce, played off by men in England to promote their own political interests. The Court repeal the law of 1675, which prohibited the exportation of provisions. They order that fifty seamen and fishermen, living in east part of Salem, below the meeting house and belonging to Capt. Peirce's company, to join Capt. John Curwin's company. They appoint Wm. Brown, sen., an associate Judge. They designate Nov. 21st as Fast day, to seek divine aid in their endeavours to gain the favour of the King and the continuance of charter privileges.—* 11th. Small Pox appears in Salem and spreads some. It excited alarm. † This year, Wm. Bowditch of Salem and Company, agreed for the erection of a Wind-mill at Marblehead on Rhodes' Hill. ‡ Edward Raudolph came again this year from England to watch the conduct of the Colonists. He had power to act as Inspector of the Customs. He brought a commission for the Council and others, empowering them to administer an oath to the Governor, that he would faithfully execute the Royal Act of Trade. Gov. Leverett declined taking such an oath. Among those thus commissioned was George Curwin, sen. of this place.

the day as a Fast for mortal sickness in many towns ; for the decease of many Pastors and principal men ; and for time of “ doubtful expectation as to great concernments.” They order that a Synod, according to petition of Elders, be held the 2d Wednesday of September in Boston, for a revision of the Church Platform, so that schisms, heresies and profaneness be prevented and Gospel order established. They require the expense of the Synod to be borne by the Churches. They assess four single rates to pay the Colony’s debts, and allow one half of the rates to be discounted if cash be paid. They forbid all liquor, except beer at 1d. a quart, to be sold where soldiers are mustered, because many English and Indians get intoxicated. As attempts had been made in several towns, where divisions existed, to erect meeting houses, the Court enact, that no such houses shall be built without a vote of the Freemen and license from County Court, or without permission from General Court. This law refered to the beginning of a meeting house here, for Mr. Nicholet, and to another recently built at Chebacco Parish of Ipswich.

* Aug. 13th. Indians required to leave this town by sun set and not return till sun rise. The Selectmen and two more were to have full power to manage at fires, to blow up houses or pull them down as need may be. Hooks and other instruments for fires are to be procured. Two or three dozen of cedar buckets are to be gotten till leather ones can be obtained.—† 31st. The Pastor, Wm. Brown and Joseph Brown sen. are chosen to attend the Synod Sept. 10th.

‡ Sept. 11th. The people of Salem Village vote Mr. Bailey £55 for his salary ; and that if he have a call to any other place, they will get another minister.—§ 17th. The Pastor relates to the Church that the Synod approved the substance of the Platform, and the remedies for provoking evils, and that they had appointed a Committee to draw up a Confession of Faith. He states, that the Synod had adjourned till the week before the next Court of Elections. Mather informs us, that the question, whether laymen, as messengers from Churches, with their Pastors, might be members of the Synod, was decided in the affirmative.

* Oct. 15th. The Council meet. They require the Church of Salem and other Churches to meet 2d Wednesday of November, at Rowley, and endeavour to settle the Church difficulties there. Mr. Cheever, minister of Marblehead, and Mr. Bailey, minister of Salem Village, both belonging to the Church here, were its delegates to Rowley. They reported that the difficulties at Rowley were adjusted. Thirty house-holders of Salem Village petition, that Mr. Bailey may be ordained over them. Their petition is granted. The Council instruct the inhabitants here to repair their fortification and promise, that General Court will make a suitable allowance. They order that the night alarm shall be as usual, and the day alarm shall be the cry of Arm, Arm. They commission Hilliard Veren sen., as Collector for Salem and Marblehead, to require 12d. a tun for all vessels, except those of Confederate Colonies, towards the maintainance of public fortifications. Similar instructions were given to other Collectors.

† Nov. 13th. Ship Hannah & Elizabeth arrived at Salem from Dartmouth, with 47 passengers, among whom was Dr. John Barton, who had previously practised his profession here.

1680.

‡ Jan. 9th. John Bullock, who had been made a cripple in fighting against the Indians, is allowed to keep a victualling shop.—|| 12th. The answers of the Synod to the two questions,—first, What is the occasion of divine judgments against New-England; second, What are the remedies for such evils, were read before the Church and considered. As John Horn was enfeebled with age, having been Deacon of the Church above fifty years, two more Deacons were chosen, viz. Hilliard Veren and John Hathorne.—22d. Thanksgiving-day for the return of the Colony's Agents from England and for other mercies.

Feb. As Mr. Hathorne declined being Deacon, Eli Gedney was chosen in his stead.—22d. The negro of John Ingersoll testified, before the Court of Commissioners, against Bridget Oliver, of Salem, as a witch. Among other things, he deposed that he saw the shape of said Bridget on a beam of the barn, with an egg in its hand, and that while he looked for a rake or pitchfork to strike her shape, it vanished. She was required to give bonds for her appearance before the Court of Assistants, or be imprisoned till their session.

March 10th. It was agreed that Messrs. Gedney and Veren shall be ordained as Deacons April 15th, and that the Covenant shall then be renewed. Mrs. Ann Garduer, having been married to Gov. Bradstreet, receives a letter of recommendation from the Church.

* April 6th. A Committee at Salem Village are appointed to get some one to preach instead of Mr. Bailey, and to ask advice of Mr. Higginson or his Church.

† May 2d. The wife of Dea. Eli Gedney is received from South Church in Boston.—‡ 19th. General Court assemble. Bart. Gedney and Wm. Brown are chosen Assistants, and continued as such till 1684. John Putnam is Deputy. The Court instruct the Selectmen of twenty-two towns, among which is Salem, to make returns about the new Brick building for the College. As the Baptists of Boston had built a meeting-house, contrary to law, the Court summon them to appear. The Court decide that as a person of Salem was a factious, litigious townsman, he shall have no case before any civil judicature, sustain no office, nor vote in town affairs, during their pleasure. ols, John Johnson, John Royal and Jonathan Putnam, most of whom were of Salem, for a Plantation at the bottom of Casco Bay on a River, called "Swegustagoe." These petitioners were to have a township five miles square and two of the adjacent Islands, on condition, that they should settle twenty or thirty families under an able minister within two years, and allow, as an acknowledgement of the Governor and Company, or the Chief Proprietors by his Majesty's Charter, after the first seven years, five Beaver skins a year. The Court, hearing that these petitioners were not approved by those of Casco Bay, who favoured Gorges' claim, granted them a township on the north of the Bay. Of a committee to superintend this settlement at Casco Bay, was B. Gedney. This committee were to build a Fort and sell £100 worth of the land there. The Court approve the Confession of Faith and Platform of the late Synod, and order them to be printed.

*June. As Barbadoes was inflicted with small pox, no vessel coming thence to this port, is allowed to land its crew, passengers and cargo, till examined and permitted.—†29th. A petition for a new meeting house and another congregation here was granted by County Court. It says: "Whereas it hath pleased God to increase the town of Salem so greatly within these few years past, insomuch that contrary to former expectation the meeting house will not contain about two thirds of us with any convenience, the which is made the general plea for abstaining from the public worship of God, whereby the Sabbath is greatly profaned, we therefore, inhabitants of said town, sadly considering the same, do judge it necessary to have another meeting house." Court of Assistants convene. Wm. Brown and Bartholomew Gedney were among them. The Court order the Essex Regiment to be divided into two. Salem, Ipswich, Wenham, Beverly, Gloucester, Marblehead and Lynn were to form one Regiment and the remaining towns another. They estimate wheat at 5s., barley and barley malt 4s., peas 4s., corn 3s., oats 2s. for rates. They enact that the freemen shall vote for their public officers with Indian Corn. They agree that according to his Majesty's instructions the number of Assistants shall be eighteen as at first. They order that as cattle, sheep, horses, and swine are brought from other Colonies and thus injure the market for such animals raised in Massachusetts, there shall be paid for them when brought into Massachusetts, 2s. 6d. a head for cattle, swine 1s., sheep or lambs 6d., horses 2s. 6d. The rate as to cattle was repealed next May. ‡ John Turner had deceased lately. * Jan. 4th. General Court assemble. They consider his Majesty's letter by Edward Randolph, which complained of them because they had neglected to send over agents, instead of those returned, and required them to dispatch others to answer the claim, which the heirs of John Mason made to the territory from Naumkeag River to the Merrimack. The Court choose two agents, but they decline.—† 20th. Richard Brackenbury of Beverly testifies, that he came to Salem with Governor Endicott; that he found here old Goodman Norman and son, Wm. Allen, Walter Knight and others; that these persons stated, that they came over to Cape Ann for the Dorchester Company; that they and R. Conant, J. Woodbury, P. Palfrey, J. Balch and others, had houses erected at Salem; that he was informed that the Dorchester Company had sold their right to Massachusetts Company before Mr. Endicott came over; that Mr. Endicott, when arrived hither, took possession of Cape Ann, and, in the course of the year, had the house, built there, pulled down for his own use, and also took possession of Cape Ann side and soon after laid out lots for tillage there.

Feb. 16th. Wm. Dixy of Beverly, Æ. 73, deposes, that he came to New-England 1629, and that Cape Ann was under the care of Governor Endicott as certified by Brackenbury. He also remarks: "Before we came to dwell here, the Indians bid us welcome, and showed themselves very glad that we came to dwell among them, and understood that they had kindly entertained the English that come over before we came, and the English and Indians had a field together, and the Indians fled to shelter themselves under the English often times, saying they were afraid of their Indian enemy in the country. I remember sometime after we arrived the Agawam Indians complained to Mr. Endicott that they were afraid of the Tarrentines, and Hugh Brown with others were sent in a boat to Agawam for the Indians relief and at other times we gave our neighbour Indians protection from their enemy." Humphry Woodbury of Beverly, Æ. 72, testifies, that John Woodbury, his father, with others came to Cape Ann about 1624, under the Dorchester Company, and brought cattle and other things with them; that they built a house there and afterwards removed to a Neck of land called Salem; that his father after three years absence returned to England, described the settlement here and staid about six months and came back to Salem 1628; that he was knowing to the fact that Massachusetts Company bought of Dorchester Company all their houses, boats and servants and that Mr. Endicott took possession of them; that the Indians were glad of the Colonists' company, planted by them, and came to them for protection against their Indian enemy up in the country; and "we did shelter them when they fled, and we had their free leave to build and plant, where we have taken up their lands; the same year or next after we came to Salem, we cut hay for cattle, which we brought over, on Beverly side and have had possession of Beverly side ever since." These depositions were given in reference to the claims which the heirs of John Mason were endeavouring to enforce as to all territory from North River to the Merrimack. They inform us, that Salem side was first settled and not Beverly side, as some have conjectured; and that the Indians granted the land of Naunkeag to its first settlers for defending them against their Indian enemies. * Inhabitants of Salem village vote to build a parsonage house of 13 ft. stud, 20 by 42, and four chimnies and no gable ends. Thomas Putnam and Jonathan Walcott are chosen to serve as Deacons among them. Mr. Burroughs, by consent of the * March 29th. Two females, for incest, are sentenced to be imprisoned a night, whipped or pay £5, and to stand or sit, during the services of next Lecture day, on a high stool, in the middle alley of Salem meeting house, having a paper on their heads with their crime written in capital letters.

† April 20th. A Salem Ketch, Capt. Edmund Henfield, picked up a boat with Capt. Andrew and six of his crew 150 leagues from Cape Cod. These persons, so saved, belonged to a Dublin ship, bound to Virginia. She sank the 18th with sixteen men and three women, who perished.

‡ May 11th. General court sit. Edmund Batter and Samuel Gardner sen. are Deputies.

§ June 28th. Hon. Wm. Hathorne died lately Æ. 74. He left a widow, Ann, and children, Sarah Coaker, wife of Israel Porter, Sarah the widow of his son William, and John. He also left a grand child, Jervice Helwyes in Europe, and children of his son Eleazer, deceased. From the time of Mr. Hathorne's coming from Dorchester to Salem 1636, he sustained some town or colonial office. The public both at home and abroad, appeared to believe that his services might be applied to political, military, judicial, and ecclesiastical concerns. As Selectman, Surveyor, Deputy, Major, Assistant, Judge and Commissioner of the United Colonies, he ever showed himself able, faithful and worthy of confidence. He was actively and respectably useful to his country till the last. If long, various, multiplied and important duties, performed from patriotic motives, should bring the reputation of any man to our minds with sentiments of respect and esteem, then should the reputation of Mr. Hathorne be thus remembered. He knew what it was to offend his own Legislature and his Kings, by the open expression of his opinions; but he refused not, when convinced of his mistakes, to make a manly apology for them. He was a pillar, which sustained and adorned both church and state, till prostrated by the strong hand of death.

* Oct. 12th. Court of Assistants meet. As Wm. Bowditch, collector of Salem, had died suddenly, a committee are designated to act for the colony when his estate is settled. The Court set wheat at 6s., rye 4s. 6d., peas, barley, barley malt 4s., corn 3s. 6d., oats 2s. for rates. They notify the Indians to take up their residence at Natick, Punkepaug or Wamesit, and be under the rulers set over them, where land was provided from many families more than were there already. They empower the Selectmen of each town to put all Indians, refusing to comply with such notice, into the House of Correction or Prison until they do comply.

From the business of this session, it appears, that our fathers were constrained to obey some of the reiterated commands of their Sovereign. Though his situation was critical at home, yet he was determined that they should be more compliant with his wish, than they had been.

May 24th. General Court sit. Edmund Batter and Samuel Gardner sen. are Deputies. They set apart June 22d as a Fast, to seek a divine blessing on the Agents bound to England, so that their Agency may be a means of securing charter privileges.

* June 5th. Mr. Higginson, on account of his age and infirmities, requests help in preaching.

† Aug. 21st. There were 310 taxable persons in town.

‡ Oct. 10th. After a difference of opinion for years had existed in the Friends' Society here, about wearing the hat in time of prayer, thirty-two males and females at a monthly meeting in the house of Matthew Estis, bore their testimony against two of their brethren, who considered themselves as correct in wearing their hats when prayer was offered.—§ 11th. Court of Assistants assemble. They instruct Salem to mount its great Artillery upon good carriages, and provide a number of cannon baskets sufficient to protect the men. They appoint surveyors of goods damaged on board of vessels. For Salem they designate John Hardy sen., John Brown, and Richard More. Such surveyors were to be chosen annually by each town where required.

|| 23d. Nicholas Noyes had an unanimous call to preach here. His salary was £80 and 20 cords of wood. Benjamin Gerrish brought him from Haddam, Connecticut, where he had preached thirteen years. As Samuel Beadle was crippled in serving against the Indians at Narraganset, the town recommend him to County Court as suitable for an Inn-keeper. He had permission from the Court.

* Dec. 18th. £25 5 3, which had been given by Wm. Brown sen. for the use of the Grammar School, was let on interest. † Capt. John Peas sen. Æ. 52, had moved lately from Salem to Enfield. He had been a Deputy to General Court.

1683.

‡ Feb. 7th. Court of Assistants meet to consider his Majesty's letter, concerning the complaints of Randolph and others against the Colony.—9th. They agree to observe 13th as a Fast day for threats of the King to deprive Massachusetts of its Charter. They prepare an address for him, and propose that another be sent him by the inhabitants. They appoint May 10th to be kept as a Fast day for late deaths of eminent persons; for sword, fire, blasting, losses at sea, threatening aspect of public affairs, and conflicting state of Protestant nations. They order that the Port of Boston, to which Charlestown is annexed, and the Port of Salem, to which Marblehead, Beverly, Gloucester, Ipswich, Rowley, Newbury, and Salisbury are annexed, as members; shall be the lawful Ports in this Colony, where all ships and other vessels shall lade or unlade any of the Plantations' enumerated goods, or other goods from foreign parts and no where else, on penalty of the confiscation of such ship or vessel with her goods and tackle, as shall lade or unlade elsewhere. According to a petition, Mason's claim to land on northern side of Salem North River, had been tried at Ipswich Quarterly Court band had been allowed. It seems from this, that Mr. Mason got his case, as to his claim for lands North of Naumkeag River. The Court estimate oxen of four years and above at £3 each; every cow and steer of three years and above at £2; all of two years at £1 10; yearlings 15s.; and swine of one year 10s.—for rates. * 24th. Deodat Lawson was invited to preach at Salem Village.

† June 24th. Joseph Grafton sen. had died lately at an advanced age. He was made freeman 1637, when his mother was living here. He left a daughter Bethiah Goodhue, and a son John. His wife and sons Joseph and Nathaniel, and daughter Priscilla Gardner, died before he did. He had been an enterprising commander of vessels belonging to Salem. He suffered much when taken by D'Aulnay 1645. He was of the selectmen several years. He was a useful and respected man.—26th. As the Prison here was decayed and another greatly needed, one was ordered to be built 13 ft. stud and 20 ft. square, with an inclosed yard, at the expense of the County. Salem was to find a convenient spot for the prison, in which a chimney was ordered, the next year, to be built.

July 12th. Capt. John, son of George Curwin, died Æ. nearly 45. He was born July 25th, 1638. He married Margaret, daughter of Governor Winthrop. She deceased Sept. 28, 1697. Their children died in infancy. He was often one of the Selectmen. He was Deputy to General Court. He commanded a military company. He was cut off in the midst of usefulness, and when his prospect was fair for unusual eminence. ‡ About this time, Zechariah Symmes was ordained at Bradford. On this occasion the Salem Church was represented by its messengers. Mr. Higginson and other clergymen, the preceeding Dec. 31st, advised his people to settle him. He was son of the clergyman at Charlestown. He graduated at Harvard 1657. He had preached at Bradford as far back as 1668. He died there 1703.

* Aug. 12th. John Wise was ordained at Ipswich, Chebacco parish. Salem Church sent its messengers to attend on this occasion. As recommended by General Court, Mr. Wise began to preach to his people 1680. He graduated at Harvard 1673. He died 1725, Æ. 73.—† 16th. Mr. Lawson was requested to preach longer at Salem village on trial.

‡ Nov. 14th. Nicholas Noyes, having been called by Church and Society here, was ordained as Teacher. Newbury, Rowley, Ipswich, Wenham and Beverly Churches were invited. Mr. Noyes preached from Mark i. 7th and 8th vs. Wm. Hubbard of Ipswich, Samuel Phillips of Rowley, and the Pastor imposed hands. Mr. Hubbard also gave right hand of fellowship. He observed that as Enoch was the 7th from Adam, so Mr. Noyes was the 7th ordained church officer of Salem. Mr. N., at the first of November, by recommendation from Newburyport Church, was admitted to the Church here, and, also, Daniel Epes and his wife, from Ipswich church, were admitted.—§ 15th. The Governor and greater part of the Assistants, having heard that the King was resolved to wrest from them their Charter, agree to throw the Colony upon his mercy.—30th. Their decision lay in the House till this date, when the Deputies refused to agree with them.

|| Dec. 20th. Hilliard, son of Philip Veren, died Æ. 63. He married Mary Conant who survived him. He left children, the wife of Samuel Williams and the wife of Benjamin Marston. He had a son Hilliard, who died about a month before his death, and also a deceased daughter, Sarah, wife of Deliverance Parkman, who left two children. He joined the Church here 1648, of which he was afterwards Deacon. He was a merchant, Clerk of County Court, and Collector of the Customs. He lived to be useful and died esteemed.—* 25th. Mr. Epes is hired to preach at Salem village for 20s. a sabbath, half money and half provision.

Feb. 11th. About this time Randolph, the resolute and powerful instrument of the King, forwarded communications to the towns, requesting them to vote for a surrender of their Charter into his Majesty's hands. But the towns seem to have unanimously rejected his proposal. Though this fact does not appear on Salem Records, yet it does on Records of neighbouring towns. * 22d. Persons of Salem village were employed to get a boat for removing Mr. Lawson's goods. He was offered £60 salary, and in April was voted 30 cords of wood at 4s. a cord. While he was absent, Mr. Epes supplied his place.

† March 6th. George Curwin's house was broken open by a gang and £505 were stolen. The thieves were apprehended and punished. The principal of them were a man and his wife. He was sentenced to pay treble damages,—be branded on the forehead with B, and receive thirty-nine stripes or pay £10. She was to be similarly branded and receive thirty stripes or pay £10.—‡ 12th. Persons are designated to command a nightly watch of seven men. Each of the Selectmen, with another person, was to walk the rounds twice a week. The watch began at 9 o'clock.—27th. Zerubabel Endicott died recently. He was son of Governor John Endicott. His second wife, Elizabeth, the widow of Rev. A. Newman and daughter of Governor Winthrop, survived him. He left ten children, John, Samuel, Zerubabel, Benjamin, Joseph, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, Hannah and Mehitable. He was a respectable inhabitant.—§ 31st. Ten merchants are allowed to build wharves at Winter Island, under the direction of a committee.

April 21st. Overseers are empowered to employ the poor in spinning, and, if necessary, to lay out £50 of the town's money to purchase wool.—* 29th. Lynn, Marblehead, Beverly, Wenham and Gloucester, towns, which sent their juries to Salem, are required to join this town and build a House of Correction here near the County Prison. Towns which sent their juries to Ipswich, are required to help build one there.

† May 7th. General Court assemble. John Hathorne is elected an Assistant. B. Gedney and Wm. Brown sen. with several others, who thought best to submit to his Majesty's pleasure about the Charter, were not chosen Assistants as usual. Wm. Bartholomew and Jonathan Curwin are Deputies. Benjamin Gerrish is appointed Collector instead of Mr. Veren, deceased. The Court send an address and petition to the King about their difficulties. They as well as the people, were doubtful what he would do in reference to their Charter. Such a state of mind produced a stagnation in every branch of business.

‡ June 24th. John Hathorne sits as Judge. Edward Norrice died recently, Æ. 70. He was son of the minister of the church here, which he joined 1639. His wife, Dorothy, seems to have died before his decease. He left two children, Edward and Elizabeth. He began to teach the Grammar School 1640, and continued to be thus employed till 1671, when Daniel Epes was chosen to supply his place. Though through age he was unable to instruct the school, yet the town allowed him £10 a year for a few years after Mr. Epes came. He long sustained a toilsome but useful office. He deserved well of the town, and went down to the grave with their benedictions. Benjamin Gerrish is chosen Clerk of County Court and sworn into his office. As one of the persons, who was accessory to robbing Capt. Curwin's house, threatened to burn Salem, he was required to give bonds for £1000.

* July 9th. Court of Assistants convene. They consider a letter from the King. According to its contents, they forbid the Colonists to serve any power against him or his allies, as some have done ; and to have intercourse with Privateers or Pirates, which should come into their ports or be on their coasts ; and command them to do all they can to have such vessels seized. † W. Bartholomew and J. Higginson, jr. are chosen Deputies.

‡ Aug. 13th. Rev. Samuel Cheever and forty-nine others desire to be set off from the Church here. Their desire is granted. The churches of Lynn, Beverly, Wenham, Ipswich and Salem, attend by their Elders and messengers on the ordination of Mr. Cheever. After Mr. Cheever had prayed and preached, he read a Confession of Faith and a Covenant, to which his Church members expressed their assent. Having done this, they were approved by the Elders and messengers, as a distinct church of Marblehead. Then the brethren expressed their choice of Mr. Cheever for their Pastor. Mr. Higginson and three other Elders imposed hands on him. Wm. Hubbard gave him the right hand of fellowship.

§ Sept 11th. "Voted that the meeting house (at Salem village) shall be filled and daubed, all where it wants, below the beams and plates ; and that six casements shall be hanged in the meeting house, and that there be a couple set over the pulpit."

|| Oct. 22d. Fast was observed for the perilous condition of the Colony, and to beseech the Lord for his protection. This Fast was ordered by the Court of Assistants 10th ult. because news had come, that the Charter of Massachusetts was to be forfeited. The High Court of Chancery decided for the King, June 18th, against the Governor and Company of Massachusetts ; and their Charter was declared null, on condition, that they appeared next term for another trial, but if not, then the decision to stand.

Nov. 6th. Questions as to the baptism of children, situated as follow, were proposed to the church here by the Elders:—1. Children of those, who had scrupled the baptizing of any infants. 2. Children of other churches, who live here, and their children also. 3. Children of Christians here, though not members of any church. Messrs. Higginson and Noyes advise, that parents, who have not been baptized, may have their children baptized, if they will consent to be examined.—* 25th. John Horn sen. deceased recently, Æ. 32. He left children, John, Symond, Joseph, Benjamin, Elizabeth Gardner, Jehoadan Harvey, Mary Smith and Ann Felton. He and his wife Ann were among the first Church members. He became free-man 1631. He had 75 acres of land granted him 1636. He was Deacon of the Church here over fifty-four years. He was a friend and confidant of Hugh Peters. He and Dea. Charles Gott were Mr. P's agents till his death. Mr. Horn died full of years and deserved respect.

* Jan. 6th. George Curwin died, Æ. over 74. He was born at Workington, Cumberland County, England, Dec. 10th, 1610. He settled at Salem 1638. He married Elizabeth, widow of Mr. John White, in England. She died 1668, leaving five children by Capt. Curwin, named Elizabeth, Abigail, Hannah, John and Jonathan. He married widow Elizabeth Brooks, sister in law to Governor Winslow, of Plymouth Colony, 1669, by whom he had three children, named Penelope, George, and Susannah. Elizabeth married Hon. James Russel of Boston. Susannah married Edward Lynde, Esq. of the same place. George died in infancy. Others of Capt. Curwin's children will be noticed in course. He left property over £5964. He was often Selectman and Deputy to General Court. He was frequently appointed by the Legislature, on military and other committees. He was in service against the Indians. His misunderstanding with Capt. Henchman was unhappy. But the sentence of the General Court against him, was all remitted, and he was restored to public favour. Capt. Curwin is an instance of what a good understanding, actively, honestly and patriotically applied, may do for succeeding in the world. He deserved esteem, and it was readily and largely granted him.—* 28th. Court of Assistants appoint March 12th, as a Fast day, on account of threatening difficulty in public affairs.

March 18th. General Court advise all the Churches to renew their Covenants, and seek divine aid for deliverance from impending calamities. W. Bartholomew and S. Gardner sen. are Deputies. Among instructions, given them by Salem, is the following:—“Especially you are to take heed in all things, wherein this General Court shall have to deal, relating to the affair, depending between his Majesty and this Colony, so as not to engage us in any unlawful action, if any such thing should appear, you are to express your dissent by all lawful means.”

April 2d. The Governor issues a proclamation, that there is a ship about 300 tons, cruising between “Martyn’s Vineyard and Cape Cod, whereof Christopher Goff is Captain, and John Salter, master.” This vessel was suspected to have been piratically taken from some of his Majesty’s allies in the West Indies. The Governor forbids those under his jurisdiction, to have any intercourse with her.—20th. As news had arrived, that Charles II. died suddenly, Feb. 6th, and Mr. Blaithwait wrote to the Governor that it would be well to proclaim James II, King of England, Scotland, Ireland and France immediately, this was done in Boston. The Governor, Deputy Governor and Assistants appeared on horseback with thousands of the people, a troop of horse, eight companies of militia, drums beating and trumpets sounding, volleys of the cavalry and discharge of seventy cannon; and Edward Rawson, Secretary, on horseback, proclaimed James II. amid the loud acclamation of the people, God save the King. This event led our fathers to expect deliverance from such oppressions, as they had endured from Charles II. He had arrived to despotic power, and, in its exercise, had violated the rights of corporate bodies in England, and nullified the Charters of his colonies. Shortly before his decease, he had appointed Col. Kirke Governor of Massachusetts, who was preparing to come hither, when the King died.

* May 8th. The Common against the front of Governor Bradstreet's pasture, is appointed as a place, in which persons may shoot at a mark.—† 11th. Mr. Ebenezer, son of George Gardner, deceased lately. He had married Sarah Bartholomew, who died before he did. He left considerable property to his relatives, and also £50 "to the poor honest people of Salem."

‡ July 7th. General Court, informed of pirates on the coast, order that forty volunteers be raised, to go out for taking them. They request the Elders, among whom was Mr. Higginson, to meet and give their advice on the public difficulties.—§ 14th. Fast day for drought, to ask the presence of the Lord with the new government (in Eng.) and the afflicted Church in the world.

Aug. 14th. Edmund Batter, merchant, had deceased recently, Æ. 76. He became freeman 1636. He and his wife Sarah, joined the church by 1635. He left a second wife, Mary, daughter of Daniel Gookin, Esq., of Cambridge, whom he married 1670. He left children, Edmund, Mary, Elizabeth and Daniel. He had sustained various offices in town. He was often of the Selectmen, and of Deputies to General Court. He was an intelligent, active and respectable man.

|| Sept. 28th. Stephen Sewall, of Salem, was appointed one of the two clerks for Essex, and Benjamin Gerrish to keep a record of births and deaths for this town. * A committee are to agree with John Baker of Boston, for a new bell there, or one already here.

† Oct. John Carson, being at the house of John Gedney, Vinter, of Salem, met Wm. Dyer, Surveyor General of his Majesty's Customs, and severely censured him. For such conduct, Carson made an acknowledgement, which was recorded.

‡ Nov. 24th. John Brown sen. deceased recently. He joined the Church 1637, and became freeman 1638. He left a daughter, Elizabeth, who had married, for her first husband, Joseph Grafton, and, for her second, Samuel Gardner, jr. He had lost a son James. He appears to have been one of the brothers, who were sent out of the Colony, for encouraging Episcopacy, 1629. He served as Elder of the Church for a time, but owing to his business, which called him to Virginia, he declined the office ; but afterwards resumed and held it, till his death. His life was desirable and his death lamented.

from James II. to Joseph Dudley and others as his Council, to administer the government of Massachusetts, New-Hampshire, Maine, and Narraganset. B. Gedney was one of this Council. General Court having considered the above commission, unanimously replied to those commissioned by the King, that they did not consider their assuming of the government as just; but if they deemed themselves bound to obey him, they might, and the Court would endeavour to act loyally. Thus were the Charter liberties of Massachusetts subverted. Such an event had been frequently dreaded by our ancestors; but none of them, from the first settlement of the Colony, had experienced it in operation. The advocates for the charter, did not entirely despair, but that, by persevering exertions, their former privileges might be restored. They hoped, that the government by a President and Council, chosen by the King, was merely temporary, and that it would be succeeded by a more lenient policy on his part. But they were soon to be sadly disappointed. The arm of royal displeasure was still raised, and was about to give them a blow more severe than ever.—* 28th. Rev. J. Higginson had taken a deed from Robert T. Mason, for 700 acres of land, granted by General Court, and bounded on Haverhill. Mr. H. was to pay him, or his heirs, 2s. a year for each house, afterwards built on his lot.

† May. A Fast was observed here, on account of worms threatening a famine.

‡ June 17th. B. Gedney was on a committee of three who issue an order respecting Narraganset Records.

§ Sept. 5th. There was a contribution of £26 here for distressed French Protestants, who had come to New-England. Similar contributions were made in all the towns, by order of government. The Protestants were obliged, when the Edict of Nantz, which protected them, was revoked, to the dishonour of Lewis XIV.,

the preceding October, to flee whither they could enjoy their religion undisturbed. Mr. Gerrish carried the money to Boston, and paid it to the persons, appointed to receive so commendable a charity. In connexion with what was raised here for the French Protestants, Mr. Higginson says: "As there had been a contribution some years ago for thirteen men, that suffered ship wreck, coming from Ireland, to whom was given £17."—7th. James Rumney Marsh, Æ. 50, testifies that the River, between Salem and Beverly, was called Naumkeag by the Aborigines, and that they called Forrest River, between Salem and Marblehead, Mashabequash. Other Indians gave similar testimony. * 27th. The President and Council were petitioned for a "Bank of Credit, Lombard and Exchange of Monies in New-England." The term Lombard seems to have reference to Lombards, or lending houses of private merchants, then existing in France and England. The petition states, that paper currency would be better, than silver of different species, brought into the country; and that nations in Europe had found paper currency promotive of trade and wealth.—† 28th. Wm. Downton, as keeper of Salem Prison, had £5 a year.

‡ Oct. 1st. The people of Salem Village had long indulged the opinion, that the village, petitioned for in 1629, to be planted by Ipswich River, was their village, and not a part of Topsfield. It appears, however, that Topsfield considered the grant, as made for them. Hence difficulty arose, and those of Salem village now empower a committee to defend their claim against the claim of Topsfield.—§ 11th. The Selectmen paid £40 to the Indian descendants of George Sagamore, who now lived at Chelmsford, and to other Indians, who lived at Natick, in full for their claims to the township of Salem. There can be little doubt, but that the first settlers of this town, according to depositions of Dixy and Woodbury, as well as the declaration of both the Rev. Messrs. Higginsons, had received their lands at the price of affording protection to the natives, who owned them, against their enemies, the Tarrentines. They were actually at more expense in defending the Indians, who owned Naumkeag, than would have purchased all its territory. The single expedition from Salem to Ipswich, though an advantage to the Colonists, to repel the Tarrentines, was of more worth to the natives here, than they would have asked for their land. Besides this, Mr. Endicott was empowered by Massachusetts Company to look up all claims of the Indians for Naumkeag land. If there were any claims he settled them. If there were none, but payment had been made in expensive protection, he had opportunity to ascertain, and his decision was an implicit settlement of the matter. Still it was well to afford relief to the poor descendants of the Sagamore, who owned Naumkeag, and thus get a particular deed so as to silence all future demands. Though Ipswich was purchased by J. Winthrop, jr. 1638, of Masconnomet for £20; yet in 1701, Topsfield paid £3 to one of his heirs, for the part, which was originally included by Ipswich. This shows, that a claim's being brought against Salem for its territory, by descendants of its former owner, does not decide, but that every such claim was, at first, considered by both parties as settled.—* 14th. John Marston and Benjamin Gerish are ordained Deacons by the two Elders with prayer and imposition of hands according to Acts, 6 c.

Nov. 25th. Salem village ask leave of the Church here, to settle Mr. Lawson, who had preached for them two years. The Church consent.

† Dec. 20th. Sir Edmund Andros landed in Boston, and published a commission from the King, which empowered him to govern the whole of New-England, with advice of a Council. Among the members of this Council, were B. Gedney and Wm. Brown sen. of Salem.—‡ 22d. The Governor and Council meet. B. Gedney was with them. They order, that all members of the Council assemble in Boston the 29th. Neither Mr. Brown nor Gedney were present at the latter session. It was moved, that proclamation be made, that all officers, both civil and military, should be continued in their offices, and that the laws, according to those of England, should stand during his Excellency's pleasure.

* Feb. 7th. Wm. Brown sen. gives to the school here the remainder of a farm, which had been granted him by Salem, but not laid out.—20th. Dr. George Emory died. His wife, Mary, had deceased 1673. He was granted land 1636, and joined the church here 1648. For years he was useful and respected in his profession.

† May 9th. Richard Leach died recently. He left wife, Sarah, who joined the church here 1648. He left children, John, Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Collins, Mary, wife of Benjamin Johnson, Hannah and Rachel. He had lost a daughter Sarah, wife of Joseph Herrick. He had been a Selectman. He commanded the company at Salem village. His will, written beautifully on parchment, instead of being approved by County Court, as usual, was approved by Sir Edmund Andros, and also, bears the signature of his Deputy Secretary, John West. Hutchinson remarks: "It was a great burden on widows and children, who lived remote, to be obliged to come to Boston for every part of business, relative to the settlement of estates." Francis Collins, who had lived here fifty years, requests permission to keep a house of entertainment. Wm. Driver desires license to distil and sell liquor here.

Aug. 9th. Wm. Gerrish died here. He came from Boston the 6th for his health. He was buried 11th in his brother Walter Price's tomb. He was born Aug. 19, 1627. He was a merchant at Bristol, England. He settled first at Newbury. He had several children, among whom was Rev. Joseph, of Wenham and Benjamin, Collector of Salem district.—* Government required each town to choose a commissioner, as formerly, to join the Selectmen for assessing taxes. This requisition was resisted in some places, as contrary to the law of the land, which stated, that no taxes should be assessed, without consent of the Assembly, chosen by freeholders, and as infringing on the liberty of free born English subjects. The Governor commanded about thirteen, who opposed his order for taxes, to be imprisoned in Boston and heavily fined. The most of them belonged to Ipswich. Nothing but the fear of consequences, kept the people from rising together, and do as these sufferers had done.

† Sept. 24th. Jas. Thomas, as Captain of the ship John, presents a petition to Governor Andros, which stated, that he and other French Protestants had arrived at Salem Sept. 9th and that the ship was seized the 14th. He desired, that her trial might come on, and that if judgement should be given against her, enough might be allowed to pay the seamen, and relieve himself from distress.

‡ Nov. 17th. By agreement of churches, Thanksgiving was observed for a good harvest, health and peace, and for the King's confirming to the Colonists their title to their property, and for his Act of religious toleration. The royal confirmation of our fathers' claim to their possessions, which they feared might be disregarded, as their Charter was gone, and as Andros had tried to have them pay quit rents, must have been a source of high satisfaction to them. The King's act for religious toleration, though contrary to what they had been accustomed, was a relief to them in their present circumstances. Andros did all he could to promote Episcopacy, and put down Congregationalism. Randolph, his prime agent, had written to the Bishop of London, desiring him to send over able Episcopal ministers, and said, "but one thing will mainly help, when no marriages shall hereafter be allowed lawful, but such as are made by ministers of the Church of England." Indeed, Andros and his coadjutors seemed to take pleasure in striving to overthrow the civil and religious institutions, around which the affections of our ancestors were entwined.

1688.

Jan. 20th. Wm. Brown sen. died, aged 81. He was the youngest son of Francis Brown of Brandon, Suffolk, England. He and his first wife, Mary Young, came to Salem 1635. She died 1638. He married Sarah, daughter of Rev. S. Smith of N. Yarmouth. He kept store 1639, and was then granted 80 acres of land. He and his wife Sarah became members of the Church 1648. He sustained various offices in town. He was often Selectman and Deputy to General Court. He was an Assistant under the Charter, and at his decease was nominally of Governor Andros' Council. It appears, that, however he was more for surrendering the Charter to Charles II. than having it nullified in a Court of law, yet he was too much of a patriot to countenance the arbitrary measures of Andros. Randolph indirectly compliments Mr. Brown, in our view, by the remark, made May 1687: "His Excellency has to do with a perverse people. There is none of the Council at hand, except Mr. Mason and myself, Mr. Brockholt and Mr. Usher, who appear lively for his Majesty's interest." Mr Brown became one of the commissioners to try small causes, 1678, and Judge of the County Court, 1679, and so continued for years. He paid 1-10th of the expense for the meeting house, finished 1673. He gave £100 to Harvard at its foundation, and left for it £150 more. "He gave besides £100 for poor scholars," probably to the same institution. He left £50 to the poor, and £50 to the Grammar School of Salem; £50 to Charlestown school, and "other sums for pious uses." Two sons, William and Benjamin, and a daughter Mary, wife of Wait, son of Governor Winthrop, survived him. He had lost a son Joseph, preacher at Charlestown. The deeds, influence and character of Mr. Brown were such, as to have rendered his life desirable, and his death much lamented.

* May 3d. Mr. Lawson appears to have ceased preaching at S. Village. He settled in the S. Society of Scituate, whence he took his dismissal 1698.

† June 12th. The Town Cage and Stocks are to be repaired.

Sept. 18th. A house is to be repaired "for the entertainment of the poor of the town."

‡ Aug. 5th. Jacob Allin and wife, for attending the meetings of the Friends, and professing themselves to be of their denomination, are dealt with, but their excommunication delayed. John Gedney sen. died, Æ. 85. He was admitted an inhabitant 1637. He and his wife Mary joined the Church the same year. He was granted 80 acres of land, and became freeman 1638. His second wife was Catherine. He had children, John, Bartholomew, Sarah, Eli, and Eleazer. He served as selectman. He was of a reputable character.—§ 24th. Gov. Andros, who had been commissioned to unite N. York to his jurisdiction, issued a proclamation from that Colony, for Thanksgiving to be observed there Sept. 2d, and in other parts out of N. York, Sept. 16th, for the birth of a son to James II. The birth of this prince was the signal in England, for resisting the despotism of the King. His subjects generally concluded, that they would bear with his policy, as long as he lived; but to think of having such policy prolonged by his son, was too much for them. They invited the Prince of Orange over to take the throne. He landed in England Nov. 3d.

Oct. 17th. Nathaniel, son of Increase Mather, died here. He was born July 6, 1669; graduated at Harvard 1685. He was a noted scholar for his age. He had begun to preach privately.

† Feb. 28th. Thomas Maul proposed, that a monthly meeting should be held at Lynn. This proposal was accepted.

‡ March. Sir. Ed. Andros, Attorney General Graham, Sect'y West, and Judge Palmer called on Rev. Mr. Higginson. Gov. Andros was on his way to Boston from Pemaquid, where he had been to suppress Indian hostilities. His soldiers had suffered much from the cold. He asked Mr. Higginson's opinion on this question:—Whether all the lands of N. E. did not belong to the King. Mr. H. answered him, after being solicited, in the negative. He stated two reasons, by which the colonists owned their lands; 1st, By right of just occupation; 2d, By right of purchase from the Indians. Here he remarked, that our ancestors, having lived sixty years in Massachusetts, took care to treat with the Indians, and satisfy them with valuable considerations for their land. He said, that he himself had certain knowledge of such a fact; that having learned the Indian language when young, he was employed by government and various Plantations, as an interpreter in treating with Indians about their lands; and that this being done, the townships and particular persons' land were settled by General Court. Mr. H. then proceeds, "therefore I did believe, that the lands of N. England were the subjects' property and not the King's." Sir. Edmund contended with Mr. H., that the lands were his Majesty's, because he had given them by Charter on conditions, which the colonists had violated. He then appealed to those with him, to know if what he said, was not law. Mr. H. replied, that the King had no other than a Popish right to N. England territory ; that the Pope had granted the West Indies to the Spaniards ; but that Protestants denied the validity of such a grant. Sir Edmund said at last, with much indignation, “ either you are his subjects, or you are rebels,” intimating, that, if the people would not yield their lands to the King so as to take a Patent and pay rent for them, they should be treated as rebels. The foregoing was the testimony of Mr. H., as requested by General Court, after Sir Edmund was displaced.

*April 8th. News having arrived, that the Prince of Orange had landed in England to put down the authority of James II., an insurrection took place in Boston and adjacent towns, against Gov. Andros and his supporters. Mr. Bradstreet and several Magistrates, who were put out of office, 1686, and other principal men, advised the Governor to give up his authority and the fortifications, lest the people should assault him and his friends. Among the Magistrates, who gave this advice, were Wm. Brown and B. Gedney.—19th. Some require, according to the order of Sir Edmund, that John Pipon surrender the Castle, as the Fort had done. 20th. Mr. Bradstreet, some Magistrates and others resolve themselves into a Council of Safety. Messrs. Brown and Gedney were of this Council. Others, invited to be of their number, among whom was John Hathorne, approved the advice given to Sir Edmund. The Council appointed Simon Bradstreet their President and Wait Still Winthrop to command the militia. They also dismiss some officers, who commanded the Eastern forces.—22d. The Council order the Rose Frigate to send her sails ashore. They provide a room in the castle for the persons, who were made prisoners. 23d. A committee of four, of whom was Mr. Gedney, are raised to search into any designs, injurious to the public peace. Mr. Gedney is appointed Colonel of Essex Regiment. The Council authorize Capt. John Higginson to receive of Thomas Offley, Collector of Salem, two bbls. of powder and the public money. 24th. Col. Gedney is instructed to dispatch a messenger to Pennicook to ascertain the number and situation of the Indians there; to concert measures for securing Hope Hood and other hostile Indians.—26th. A committee are raised to examine Thomas Dudley's papers. This gentleman was seized at Narraganset. He was brought to Roxbury 29th, and confined to his own house. That he might be attended by a physician, he came to Boston 30th, and was guarded in the house of John Eyre.

May 2d. The inhabitants of every town are desired by the Council of Safety, to send one or two discreet persons to Boston the 9th, to give advice in present exigences. Boston was allowed to have four delegates for this occasion.—7th. The Council observe a Fast for direction.—9th. They and delegates from the towns assemble. Messrs. Brown, Gedney and Hathorne were of the Council; and John Price and Jona. Curwin were of the delegates from Salem. Messrs. Price and Curwin were chosen here the 7th, and then received instructions from this town, which say: "Do humbly present their desires, that the Honoured Governor, Magistrates and Deputies, chosen 1686, would (having always respect to our dependance on the Crown of England, and the obligation we lay under by the late declaration, before surrender of last government) re-assume our Charter government, by taking their places and forming a General Court, as soon as possibly may be, unto which we shall readily and cheerfully subject ourselves, and be always assisting to the utmost of our power, with our lives and estates as formerly."—10th. The Delegates approve the measures of the Council. They vote that the persons, who composed the General Court in 1686, and were dissolved by the King's commission to Mr. Dudley, shall constitute the government of Massachusetts, till another election. There were nine, of whom was J. Hathorne, who dissented from this vote. The reason of such dissent was in part, because the delegates did not include those, who had been lately associated with the magistrates of 1686. The delegates informed of this dissent, resolve, that the whole Council of Safety stand till 22d, when Representatives from all the towns, would take further measures on the subject.—* 16th. Fast is kept according to order of the Committee of Safety, for the unsettled state of colonial affairs.—† 20th. The Council address their Majesties, William and Mary, and excuse the part, which they had acted, as not intended to thwart their royal pleasure, but as necessary in the circumstances of the Colony.—22d. Delegates from 54 towns meet in Boston. They wish to have the Charter resumed. The greater part of the Council, though desirous to comply with their wish, deem it not prudent for the present.—24th. The Magistrates of 1686, declare their willingness to hold their offices, according to Charter laws, until an order shall come from England, to settle the mode of government in Massachusetts.—‡ 26th. A ship arrives with advice to proclaim their Majesties.—29th. King William and Queen Mary are proclaimed in Boston, with greater parade than had been on similar occasions.

§ June 6th. The Council and Representatives address the King and Queen. Both bodies agreed, that their government should be according to the Charter. Still, as they knew not the exact policy, which their Majesties would pursue in reference to them, they acted with fear, lest their conduct should subject them to evil. 11th. B. Gerrish is appointed Clerk of Writs at Salem.—13th. A vessel is ordered with forces to the eastward, and there to scour the coast for pirates.—14th. Simon Willard of this town, is made Marshal of Essex.—|| 18th. The people of S. Village vote Rev. July 1st. Three hundred men are to be raised for defending the frontier towns. Essex Lower Regiment is proportioned 70, and Essex Upper Regiment 60. Capt. John Price is to aid in raising them.—6th. Of W. Salem Company, B. Gedney is confirmed Captain, S. Sewall Lieut., and Edward Flint Ensign. As Capt. Gedney declined, Lieut. Sewall was promoted to his office on the 12th, and Robert Kitchen took the place of Lieut. Sewall. A Fast is ordered to be observed the 25th, for war with the Indians.

† Aug. 5th. Capt. Benjamin Church writes to the Council, that he arrived at Newport, R. I. last night, and found Gov. Andros seized, secured and guarded by the inhabitants. He states, that it is not safe for Andros to continue where he is, and that a guard should be sent to bring him to Boston. It appears from this, that Sir Edmund had made his escape from Boston.—

‡ 19th. The Council, having been informed, that Thomas Hawkins and others were acting as pirates, order the sloop Restitution with forty men, Joseph Thaxter, master, to go after them. These pirates took the Ketch Mary, Capt. Hellen Chard, of Salem, the 9th, three leagues from half-way Rock. They captured the brig Merrimack of Newburyport, Capt. John Kent, on the 22th, in "Martin Vineyard Sound." In this sound, the same pirates fought the sloop Mary of Boston, Capt. Samuel Peas, who had also been commissioned to search for them. They killed him, and wounded some of his crew; but were taken by his Lieut. Benjamin Gallop, and in Oct. brought to Boston, where four of them belonged. They were condemned to die, but were reprieved.

Aug. Six hundred men are to be employed against the Indians. Essex upper Regiment's proportion was 94, and Essex lower 108. Simon Willard is appointed *Sept 17th. The Ketch John and Eliza, Ezra Lambert Captain, Ketch Margaret, Daniel Jeggles Captain, and on 18th Ketch Dolphin, Isaac Woodbury, Captain, all of Salem, are taken by French ships of war, part of a fleet from France. A petition is forwarded to the Council, soon after 17th, by merchants of Salem, which states, that several of their vessels had not returned with their last fares, that six of their Ketches and 30 men had been taken and carried in Port Royal by two French frigates. The petitioners further say, that they are discouraged from sending their vessels next spring, and desire, that a suitable person may be sent to see about the captured Ketches and their men.—19th. Fast for war with Indians and public difficulties.—† The people of S. Village request to be set off. The next March, Salem voted not to give them leave.

‡ Oct. 11th. Samuel Gardner, merchant, died recently, Æ. 59. He was son of Thomas. He married Mary White, who deceased 1675, and who was daughter in law of Capt. George Curwin. He left children, Abel, Hannah, and Jonathan. He had lost two daughters, Margaret, wife of Deliverance Parkman, and Mary, wife of Joseph Henfield. He sustained various offices. He was Selectman and Deputy to General Court. He was a worthy townsman.

§ Nov. Capt. Willard writes from Salem to the Governor, that his men at Casco Bay, needed supplies; that the parents of his soldiers were much displeased, because they had not returned, as was promised. He proposes, that Dr. Harraden be encouraged to visit the soldiers at Casco, and take care of them.—|| 5th. The Council and Representatives meet. Of the former were J. Hathorne and J. Curwin. Twenty-five persons are dismissed from the first church, to form the church under Rev. S. Parris. This was done by consent of Magistrates and neighbouring Churches.—15th. Mr. Parris was ordained. Messrs. Gedney, Hathorne, and Curwin, with the Pastor and Teacher, attended.—†26th. Jonathan Curwin first sits as Judge of the Court. Richard Croad had died lately, Æ. 61. He was from Hampton, England, where he had an estate, 1684, and where his father Richard lived and died. He left a wife, Frances, and children, Hannah, Richard, William, John and Sarah. He had lost two daughters, one married to a Neal and the other to a Bridges. He was a respectable man.

‡ Dec. 3d. The Council and Representatives meet. Of the former were J. Curwin and J. Hathorne and of the latter J. Price and J. Higginson. They assemble to consider two letters from the King. One of these letters approved what had been done, as to ordering the government here; and recommended, that it shall be so administered, till further instructions. This tended to lessen a prevailing dread, lest the King would send over a Governor. The other letter required, that Sir Edmund Andros and his friends should be sent over to England for trial. It was ordered, that, as Capt. Samuel Peas had been killed by pirates, a collection should be taken in each town, for the relief of his widow and four children, and, also, for two of his crew, who were wounded.—7th. Thanksgiving was to be 19th, because the Indians had been checked; William and Mary had come to the throne, and thus the Protestant religion is likely to be defended. War was to be declared 20th, in Boston, against the French.—20th. An embargo is laid on all vessels, bound to Europe, that they may not be captured by the enemy.—§ 30th. Six * Jan. 1st. As Capt. S. Willard was in active service, his Lieut. Wm. Wormwood, is allowed to sign certificates for Capt. Willard's soldiers, who had been with him against the Eastern Indians.—10th. On a committee, to consult about an expedition to Port Royal, was Col. B. Gedney. They report in favour of such an expedition, and, also, of reducing Nova Scotia. 20th. It was agreed, that the Convention should be called General Court, as before the Charter was annulled.

Feb. 12th. General Court sit. J. Hathorne is an Assistant. Messrs. Higginson and Price are Deputies. Fast day is to be kept March 6th. on account of small pox, fever and war. Capt. S. John Peach of Marblehead, Æ. 77, testifies, that Richard Hollingworth sen. formerly of Salem, shipwright, deceased, owned two ten acre lots, "lying on Darby fort side so called in the township of Marblehead." Richard More sen. of Salem, Æ. 78, testifies, that R. Hollingworth had land "on Darby Fort side, which is now Marblehead." Several other aged people gave similar testimony. Such evidence settles the question, which once excited considerable attention, as to the location of Derby Fort. The received opinion was, that this Fort was on Beverly side. But the evidence, now adduced, makes it to have been undoubtedly on Marblehead side.

‡ Aug. 28th. Fast is observed for a blessing on the Canada expedition, on William and Mary, and for a lasting peace. The expedition, here mentioned, proved unsuccessful.—§ Dr. John Barton of this place is allowed £25 0 5 for medicine, supplied to some of the Canada forces.

The Selectmen of Salem state, that sick and wounded men, lately disbanded, were brought hither; and that many of them did not belong here. They remark, that the necessitous of this town are more, than can be comfortably provided for; and ask what they shall do for the suffering strangers.

§ Dec. 10th. General Court raise a Committee to issue Bills of Credit. They had calculated too much on the capture and booty of Canada to satisfy their soldiers. When their defeated forces returned, they were unable to answer their just and pressing demands. They were compelled to issue paper money—a measure convenient at present, but distressing to many of the poor in future.—|| 19th. The country rates for Salem were £953 18 4; for its fortifications £150; for its poor and other charges £182 18 10. These sums made a heavy burden for the people here, because the war had both increased them and lessened their ability to pay them. They and the rest of the Colonists were called to endure severe trials.

both of S. Village and Sarah Churchwell. Others confined here for witchcraft are Rebecca Jacobs, Sarah Proctor and Mary Withered, all of S. Village, Sarah Bulkley, Sarah Peas, both of Salem. Rebecca was mother of Margaret Jacobs, and also wife to George Jacobs, jr., who, being accused of witchcraft, had fled. 25th. Elizabeth, wife of Nathaniel Cary, of Charlestown, is imprisoned at Boston as a witch.—31st. John Aldin of Boston, and Sarah, wife of Nicholas Rice of Reading, are confined in Boston jail for witchcraft. Rev. Henry Gibbs, of Watertown, writes in his diary : “ Spent this day at S. Village, to attend the public examination of criminals, and observed remarkable and prodigious passages therein. Wonders I saw, but how to judge and conclude, I am at a loss.” Up to this time fifty-one persons had been imprisoned on the charge of Witchcraft. There were others accused of the same crime, and examined ; but they were cleared. Both the committed and cleared were tried at S. Village, because there the afflicted, so called, had their residence, and there they were charged by such afflicted ones, with injuring them by their spectres or spirits. The place for examining them, was generally at the house of Nathaniel Putnam. The examinations took place, for the most part, before Judges of the County Court, who belonged to Salem.

* June 2d. A Court of Oyer and Terminer, commissioned by the Governor, sit at Salem. B. Gedney was one of its Judges. The Court arraign Bridget Bishop on the indictment of witchcraft. The Jury bring her in guilty. She had been tried on a similar charge 1680.—6th. Ann, wife of Capt. Wm. Dolibar of Gloucester, is to be apprehended as a witch. She was daughter of Rev. Mr. Higginson. Thanksgiving is to be kept on July 14th, “for the safe arrival of Governor Phipps and Rev. I. At first the Jury could find no verdict against her. Even on their second return to the Court, they had not found her guilty. When, however, they were in their places, and she stood at the bar, they agreed on a verdict against her, because she made no answer to some interrogations about an expression, which she had uttered. She left a husband, Francis, and children, John, Sarah, Rebecca, Samuel, Francis, Mary, Elizabeth, and Benjamin. Sarah Good left a husband, William. R. Nurse and S. Good both be-

Aug. 3d. Court of Oyer and Terminer convene here. They try George Burroughs, John Proctor and wife Elizabeth, John Willard, George Jacobs sen. and Martha Carrier, who are all brought in guilty of witchcraft.—19th. These persons, except E. Proctor, who plead gestation, are executed. G. Burroughs was once minister of S. Village, whence he went to preach at Falmouth. From this place, he was driven by the Indians 1690, and then appears to have preached at Wells, where he lived, when charged with witchcraft. He had three wives. His last was sister to John Ruck of Salem. She survived him. He left children, George, Jeremiah, Rebecca, Hannah, Elizabeth and Mary. He met his untimely end with Christian fortitude. Though his accusers charged him with deeds of murder, as was common for them to do in reference to others, yet he appears to have been a worthy man. Mr. Proctor and wife sustained excellent characters, before they were charged with witchcraft. Their neighbours at S. Village, spoke decidedly in their favour. Many of his acquaintance at Ipswich, where he was born, and whence he moved to S. Village, thought highly of his reputation, and petitioned for his reprieve. His wife was E. Basset of Lynn. He was Æ. 58, at the time of his execution. He left children, John, Benja., Elizabeth, Martha, Mary, Wm, Joseph, Sam'l, Thorn-dike, Sarah and Abigail. J. Willard was a conscientious and respectable man. At first, he believed, that some, charged with witchcraft, were really guilty. He even took an active part against them. But convinced that he was wrong, he confessed his mistake, and strove to lesson the mania, which raged around him. A consequence of this was, that he was soon accused of witchcraft. He fled, but was speedily apprehended and suffered the evil, from which he endeavoured to escape, He left a wife, Margaret, who married a Town. G. Jacobs was a reputable man. He left a wife, Mary, and children, George, Anne and Margaret. Messrs. Procter, Willard and Jacobs belonged to S. Village. M. Carrier left a husband, Thomas, and belonged to Andover.—It appears from the testimony of P. English, that his goods at Salem, amounting to £1500, were seized by G. Curwin, Sheriff. The reason for this seizure was, that Mr. English and his wife Mary, being imprisoned in Boston for witchcraft, fled to New York, as the only means of preserving their lives.—* 28th. A Fast is kept “for the afflicted state of things here” and in England.—† 31st. Sarah, wife of Peter Cloyce, had been removed to Ipswich prison, as a witch.

‡ Sept. 9th. Court of Oyer and Terminer sit in Salem. They arraign Martha Cory, Mary Easty, Alice Parker, Ann Pudeater, Dorcas Hoar and Mary Bradbury. The Jury bring them in guilty. Giles Cory was also arraigned, but he refused to put himself on trial. For thus standing mute, he was sentenced to be pressed to death.—§ 14th. Martha Cory is excommunicated from S. of the sixteen lately condemned, are executed; viz.—M. Cory, A. Parker, M. Easty, M. Parker, M. Pudeater, M. Scott, W. Reed, and S. Wardwell. Of those condemned the 9th, and not executed, were D. Hoar of Beverly, who married a King, and M. Bradbury of Salisbury, who had a husband, and sons, Henry and Samuel. M. Cory as well as her husband met death with christian consolation and firmness. They left children, Elizabeth and Martha. M. Easty of Topsfield was sister to R. Nurse, and left a husband, Isaac, and seven children. A. Parker left a husband, John, and A. Pudeater was widow of Jacob Pudeater. They both belonged to Salem. Of those condemned 17th, and not hung, are the following. A. Faulkner was spared on account of gestation. She and M. Lacy and A. Foster were of Andover, and all of them had families. R. Eames was of Boxford. A. Hobbs was daughter to William and Deborah Hobbs of Topsfield. They who were sentenced at the same time and hung, are as follow. M. Scott was of Rowley. W. Reed was of Marblehead and left a husband, Samuel. M. Parker and S. Wardwell were both of Andover, and left families. During July, Aug. and Sept. many persons of Andover were examined, and committed for witchcraft. The distressing scene spread thither from S. Village. The Court of Oyer and Terminer, after their last judgment Sept. 17th, dissolved. They thus afforded the public mind a better opportunity to consider the means of counteracting<sup>r</sup> the calamities, which supposed witchcraft was scattering in various directions.

Of these, who survived him, was Henry. Few men belonging to Salem, had more frequently sustained its offices or more faithfully performed them. He was often of the selectmen, and, also, a prominent Deputy to General Court. He did much to promote the interests of this town. He deserves to hold a place in the grateful remembrance of its inhabitants.

Wardwell, widow of Samuel, who had been executed. The Court clear her daughter, Mary, and Sarah Hawkes, both of Andover.—11th. Elizabeth Johnson, jr., of the same town, and Mary Post of Rowley are brought in guilty. Mary wife of John Osgood, Sarah Bridges, and Mary wife of John Bridges, all of Andover, and Hannah Post of Boxford are acquitted.—13th. Mary Lacy, jr. of Andover is cleared. During the session Richard Carrier and Stephen Johnson, both of Andover, appear to have been acquitted. Thus closed the trials in Salem for witchcraft. The three who had been condemned were reprieved. The Supreme Court held other sessions to try those, charged with witchcraft. One was at Charlestown Feb. 1st, when they acquitted Mary Toothaker of Billerica, Mary Taylor, Lydia and Sarah Dasting, all of Reading, and Sarah wife of John Cole, of Lynn. Another was at Boston in March, when John Aldin was discharged. A third was at Ipswich 2d Tuesday of May, when Susannah Post, Eunice wife of John Fry, Mary Bridges, jr., Mary Barker, jr., and Wm. Barker, jr., all of Andover, are cleared. The Governor ordered all others, accused of witchcraft and not tried, to be discharged. Thus terminated one of the most surprising and afflicting scenes ever witnessed in New-England. Twenty had been put to death and 11 condemned for witchcraft. Rev. J. Hale, of Beverly, informs us, that about 50 confessed themselves guilty; that the same number of other persons were afflicted; and about 100 accused. Mr. Calef makes the last number double, and says that 150 besides were imprisoned. Mr. Hale was probably more correct than Calef. The attainders which existed, according to law, against families of those executed, and also of those condemned but reprieved, were reversed by General Court in 1711. At the same time, it was enacted, that no person should be prosecuted for what he did legally in reference to those, charged with witchcraft. They who suffered in their estates, on account of this crime, were partly remunerated by General Court 1712, either in person, or in their heirs. Witchcraft, as exhibited at S. Village and adjacent places, was no new thing. Previously to its taking place, several persons had been executed, and others arraigned for such an offence, in New England. It so prevailed in England and Scotland, 1542, a law was enacted under Henry VIII. making it felony without benefit of Clergy. When Elizabeth began to reign, 1558, Bishop Jewall remarked in a sermon before her: "It may please your grace to understand, that witches and sorcerers, within these four last years, are maliciously increased within your grace's realm." According to Reginald Scot, witchcraft prevailed alarmingly, 1584, in the same kingdom. It also spread dismay there in 1603. Soon after this a new Statute was enacted under James I., making witchcraft punishable with death. At Chelmsford, England, 30 were tried for this offence, 1645, before Judge Coniers, 14 of whom suffered death. Besides these, 100 more were imprisoned, at the same time and in the same country, in Essex and Suffolk. Sir Matthew Hale sentenced some to death, 1664, on a like accusation. Nor were other parts of Europe free from such an evil. It had brought death upon 100 persons in the Subalpine Vallies, and 900 in France. In addition to these facts, English jurists of eminence, such as Keeble and Dalton, had described Witchcraft as though it could be discovered, and should be punished, like other capital offences. Such things had confirmed both young and old, on this side of the Atlantic, in the sure belief of Witchcraft, and opened the way for securing its prevalence. Did they appear to us, as they did to our ancestors, we should not be so much surprised, that these ancestors gave any countenance to so gross a delusion. The chief mistake, which prevailed here, was confiding in established precedents, which could stand neither the test of sound philosophy nor of Scripture. The public had cherished the persuasion, as confirmed by the law and practice of the mother-country, that no one could think he saw the resemblances of other persons afflicting him, unless these persons were either witches or wizards. Mr. Parris was of their number. Had he been of a different opinion, and discouraged his daughter and niece from crying out against their neighbours, as if inflicting pain upon their bodies by spectral appearances, the probability is, that the tragic events, which followed, would never have been known. He, however, was firm in the general impression, and prompted these children rather to proceed, than to stop in their accusations. Upon them and many others, who declared themselves afflicted, reflection rests the most heavily. They were much excited. Wonderful relations were expected from them. Their minds were ready to account common things as supernatural. They had the highest authorities in men and books, to continue the part, which they had begun. They dreaded to retract, lest, as the consequence, they should bring on themselves the charge, which they laid to others. Indeed, they were strongly tempted to wish all their testimony true, and then to deliver it as their conscientious persuasion. But the fact appears to be, that, whatever their unchecked, flattered, and disordered imaginations might perceive, they did accuse persons of crimes and thus occasioned their execution, of which crimes there is no evidence, that these persons were guilty. There was, also, another class, who confessed themselves to have practised witchcraft. They were females of respectable standing. They were directly accused. The testimonies against them were believed by their Judges. They perceived that the public voice spoke severely of them. What almost every one said and believed of them, they feared might be true, though their own consciences taught them differently. They saw no alternative between a confession and the gallows. They chose the former. They afterwards declared themselves innocent. They said, that what they had allowed to the contrary, was drawn from them, when their minds were so agitated as scarcely to know either their thoughts or words. Of those who were put to death, it must be said, that they fell innocent victims of well-intended but ill-directed zeal. When we look back on them—consider them wrongly accused and condemned—cruelly hastened to execution and destroyed, as the outcasts of God and man, we feel an agonizing wish, that they might have been saved, and lived long to have manifested their dying integrity. Hapless is the land, which refuses to learn wisdom from such direful events.

“ The baleful charms
Of superstition there infect the skies,
And turn the sun to horror.”

With respect to the Judges and Juries, concerned in the trials for witchcraft, the Rev. John Higginson appears to make a true remark. This is as follows : they “ proceeded in their integrity with a zeal of God against sin, according to their best light and law and evidence ; but there is question whether some of the laws, customs and privileges, used by Judges and Juries in the trial of Witches in England, which were followed as patterns here, were not insufficient.” We would add to his opinion, that as there has been time for the public mind to examine the grounds, upon which the Judges and Juries here made up their decisions, so it is convinced, that such grounds were untenable. Thus we have taken a view of those, immediately concerned in one of the most remarkable calamities, which ever fell on this part of our country. One benefit, divinely educed from such a calamity, is, that it has long kept the community vigilant against its being repeated. For its past prevalence we regret. For its suppression we are thankful. For the perpetual prevention of its recurrence we hope and pray.

It is ordered, that, for the benefit of trade, six instead of eight per cent. interest, should be taken on money loaned. About this time, a petition was sent to the Legislature by the principal men of Salem. It stated, that the people here had paid £500 for their Fort and had maintained, in 1692, a Scout Shallop, which cost £60; and that they had been at considerable charge for block houses and other town fortifications. It desired, that, as only a small allowance had been made to Salem for these things, the expenses of the Fort and Scout Shallop, might be paid by the Province.

Thanksgiving was appointed to be Dec. 21st, for preservation of his Majesty; for support of Protestant cause; for stop put to mortal sickness; for good harvest, and submission of Indian enemy. The sickness, here spoken of, was taken at Boston from the fleet of Sir Francis Wheeler, who arrived, June 11th, from the West Indies, with most of his men dead. It was probably the Yellow Fever. In reference to the Indians mentioned, it appears, that after two defeats at the Eastward, they made peace Aug. 11th.—17th. B. Gedney is on a Committee, from the Assistants, to join a Committee of Deputies, to consider the best means for enabling the Treasurer to collect arrears of rates and pay the public debt. J. Curwin is on a Committee to consult with a Committee of the Deputies, about a new establishment of Chancery.

Dec. 6th. B. Gedney, as one of three Commissioners for managing the War Department, is to receive £100 a year, conditionally subject to some deductions. *26th. Nathaniel Sharp is to be keeper of the jail and house of correction in Salem. He was son of Elder Sharp. Persons, refusing to pay Mr. Parris' salary for 1691-2, are ordered by the Court to be sued. Expenses of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which had sat on cases of Witchcraft, in Salem 1692, were £130. This sum is to be assessed on the County. Salem's part of it was £40 10.

* Sept. 5th. B. Gedney is on a Committee to propose measures for a vigorous prosecution of the war; and for limiting friendly Indians, that they need not expose themselves, nor alarm the English, by their straggling. This war was begun against the French and Indians, because a party of them fell upon Oyster River, a village of New-Hampshire, July 18th, took and killed about 100 persons and burnt 20 houses.—18th. As His Majesty's Council had desired, that a ship load of Pitch, Tar, Rosin, Plank and knee timber, might be sent to England, it was voted to comply with their request within a year. On a Committee to see this vote effected, was B. Gedney.

Nov. The Supreme Court did not meet in Salem the 2d Tuesday, "because of sickness and other weighty occasions of the Province."—17th. Sir Wm. It seems, that Mason was pilot for the Dragon and another vessel, which were cruising in company, and the crew of which were to share in each others prizes. He sailed on board of the latter vessel, called the Dolphin. He thought what he had received for his part of prize money, was not enough. He was awarded over £87. § 29th. General Court assemble. Wm. To prevent clandestine marriages, it is enacted, that none but a Justice or an ordained minister, shall perform the marriage service. The Justice is required to marry none out of his county, and the minister none out of the town, where he is settled. It becomes a law that if a church choose a minister and the parish will not agree to their choice, the church may call a council from neighboring churches, and, if the council advise them to settle their elected minister, they may do it, and the congregation be obliged to aid in maintaining him. If the council decide differently, the church shall seek for another Pastor.

* Aug. 5th. Cesar, a negro servant of Mr. Josiah Walcott, of Salem, was tried for attempting to poison Hannah Gardner. He confessed that another negro, who worked with Mr. Hunt, and who had poisoned his own wife, advised him to do the same to her. He, therefore, lest she should tell his master, that he had stolen money from her, got some ratsbane and put it into her milk. He was sentenced to pay costs and have 39 lashes.

† Sept. 1st. John Ruck in granting a homestead to his son, Thomas, before witnesses, took hold of a twig in the garden and said,—“Here, son Thomas, I do, before these two men, give you possession of this land by Turffe and Twigg.”

Nov. 16th. Thomas, son of Thomas Gardner, died. He was born May 25, 1645. He married Mary Porter 1669. She died the 27th, a few days after his decease. They left children, Mary, Thomas, Habakuk, Joseph and Hapcott. He appears to have resided at the Eastward 1675, and sustained some of the chief offices in the county of Devon, then existing there. He seems, however, to have returned by 1684. He was a worthy merchant.

* Dec. 12th. General Court order, that Thomas Maule, of Salem, "should be brought before the Lieut. Gov'r and Council the 19th, to answer for his remarks in a book called 'Truth held forth.'" They require G. Curwin, sheriff of the county, to search his house and the shops of booksellers, and seize all the copies of his book, which could be found. The book which T. Maule wrote, contained severe reflections on the Government for their treatment of his denomination, the Friends, and held up, that one of the judgments for such conduct, was the witchcraft lately suppressed. Mr. Curwin immediately secured him in Salem prison, and discovered 31 of his books.—† 31st. Each Justice of the Gen. Sess. Court, is allowed for his attendance 4s. a day, and when attending out of his own town, is paid for one day's travel.

‡ Jan. 16th. Thanksgiving for success granted to the arms of His Majesty and Confederates. This refers to the retaking of Namur from the French.

Feb. 26 & 7. It was cold and stormy. The roads were blocked up with snow. There was no travelling.

§ April 23th. Rev. Thomas Barnard, of Andover, marries, for his second wife, Mrs. Abigail Bull, residing in Salem. He graduated at Harvard College 1679; was settled colleague with Rev. Francis Dane 1682; and died Oct. 13, 1718. He was ancestor of the Messrs. Barnards, preachers of this town.

May 14th. John, son of Rev John Emerson, of Gloucester, marries Mary, the daughter of Edmund Batter, deceased, of this town. He graduated at H. C. 1689. He preached at Manchester a few years; then at New-Castle, where he was ordained; and was installed at Portsmouth, 1715, after preaching there about three years. He died in the ministry, at the last place, June 21, 1732, in his 62d year. He left six daughters. He was highly esteemed.—* 27th. General Court sits. Among the nominated Assistants are B. Gedney, J. Hathorne, J. Curwin and W. Brown. Benjamin Marston is Deputy.—29th. J. Hathorne is on a committee to adopt measures for securing the frontiers, prosecuting the war, attacking the French, and driving them from their settlement on the River St. John. Thanksgiving is appointed to be June 18th, for the preservation of His Majesty and his kingdom from invasion and insurrection. This referred to endeavours made by James, with the aid of the French, to recover the crown of England, and, also, to conspiracies formed against king William.

† June. B. Gedney is on a committee to settle difficulties with Enfield, Suffield and the Connecticut jurisdiction, because some heads of families had been impressed to serve in the King's ships.

‡ 25th. Mr. Parris notifies his people, that he shall preach for them no longer than the remaining Sabbath of the month. He continued to live at the Village till the latter end of 1697. His congregation, after much difficulty, paid him his due, according to the decision of arbitrators. His well intended, but mistaken exertions, about witchcraft, were the chief occasion of the separation between him and his people. In 1704 he resided at Concord; and 1711 he preached at Dunstable. Here his salary was partly paid by the Province. In this and many other instances, the government took a wise precaution for aiding to maintain the Gospel, where it could not be entirely supported by the inhabitants.—Mr. Parris was son of Thomas Parris of London, and was born 1653. He was a member of H. College, but did not graduate. He was a merchant before he entered the ministry. He was a person of good talents and worthy attainments in Theology. Though severely tried, the principle of piety sustained and enabled him to pursue his course with the commendation of respectable men.

* Oct. 11th. Wm. Way and his wife Persis, Aaron Way and his wife Mary, with their children, are dismissed from Village Church to the Church lately gathered in Dorchester, and transferred to S. Carolina, whereof Joseph Lord is pastor.—12th. It is voted by those of S. Village, that Mr. Bailey, their former minister, preach for them one month.—27th. They agree to observe a fast, Nov. 5th, for divine direction as to the obtaining of a Pastor.

† Nov. 10th. T. Maule, who had been imprisoned since his first commitment, is reheard before the Superior Court in Salem. The Jury clear him.—‡ 17th. A committee of the Society at S. Village are chosen to treat with Simon Bradstreet, who preached for them the previous Sabbath, to tarry with them six months. This person seems to have preached at Medford. He was grandson of Gov. Bradstreet; born Nov. 16, 1669; graduated at H. C. 1693; settled at Charlestown 1698; and died Dec. 31, 1741.

§ Dec. 8th. J. Hathorne is allowed £30, and B. Gedney £15, for commanding forces against the enemy at St. John's. Col. Hathorne had been dispatched by water to take the command of forces, which were returning from the Eastward under Col. Church. He attacked the enemy's fort, Oct. 7th, and after two days skirmishing, found his troops insufficient and ordered them back in transports to Boston. Col. Gedney had been by land with 500 men, to secure the Eastern frontiers. Finding the enemy gone, he strengthened the garrisons, which were not taken. He also arrested Pasco Chubb for surrendering Pemaquid Fort, while under his command in July, and had him brought to Boston. Here Capt. Chubb was confined, till it was decided, that he should lose his commission and not be eligible for any other. This unfortunate man, with his wife Hannah and three others, were killed by the Indians at Andover Feb'y 22, 1698.

† Feb'y 4th. Eleazer Gedney and his wife, Anna, had recently moved from Salem to "Momorimack," West Chester County, N. Y.

March 27th. Simon Bradstreet died here. On the 30th, the Legislature say, "In consideration of the long and extraordinary service of S. Bradstreet, late Governor, who is now deceased," they "vote £100 towards defraying the charges of his interment." He was son of a clergyman in Lincolnshire, and was born at Horbling, March, 1603. He was one year at Emanuel College. For his first wife, he married in England, Ann, the daughter of Thomas Dudley, Deputy Governor. She wrote and published a volume of poems, which she dedicated to her father. For his second wife, he married Ann, the widow of Capt. Joseph Gardner, of Salem, and sister to Sir George Downing. He came over to Massachusetts 1630, as one of the Assistants and was thus continued till 1673. He was Secretary of the Colony from the first year of his emigration to 1643. He went as an agent with Mr Norton to England, 1662, and returned 1663. While Connecticut, Plymouth, and Massachusetts continued their union as colonies, he was frequently one of the commissioners. Mr. Bradstreet was chosen Deputy Governor 1673, and so continued to 1679, when he was elected Governor. He sustained the last office till May 1686, when the Charter of Mass. was made void, and Joseph Dudley was commissioned by the King to have jurisdiction over this colony and other territory. He was named among the Council of Mr. Dudley, his kinsman, but he declined serving. Thence he held no office till the Revolution of 1689, when Sir

Edmund Andros and friends were deposed by order of the people. At this time Mr Bradstreet was chosen President of the Council of Safety, and soon after was elected Governor, and so continued till 1692, when Sir Wm. Phipps, appointed by his Majesty, came and took his place.—Thus closing his public life, he moved to Salem, where he was buried. He left children by his first wife, who were useful and respected.—A translation of the epitaph upon his tomb, gives a correct idea of his character:—“He was a man of deep discernment, whom neither wealth nor honour could allure from duty. He poised, with an equal balance, the authority of the King and the liberty of the people. Sincere in Religion and pure in his life, he overcame and left the world.”

* April 9th. The town vote £100 to repair their fortifications. There was a great dread here and elsewhere of being invaded by a powerful French fleet. Besides this the Indians were attacking the frontier towns. They had fallen upon Haverhill, March 15th, burnt six houses, killed and taken about 40. Among their prisoners, was the noted Hannah Duston.

12th. George, son of John and grandson of George Curwin, had died recently. He was born Feb. 26, 1666. He had two wives, Susannah and Lydia, both daughters of Hon. B. Gedney. Lydia survived him, and died Dec. 23, 1700. His mother was Margaret, daughter of Gov. Winthrop. He left a son Bartholomew, who moved to Amwell, N. J. about 1731. He was a Captain under Sir Wm. Phipps in the expedition against Canada, 1690. As sheriff of the county, he was obliged to take an active part in seizing persons, accused of witchcraft, and also their property. Such a discharge of his duty, was the cause of much trouble to him. He was respected in life and lamented in death.

† May 26th. The Assistants proposed and accepted, were the same four as last year. The Deputies are Sam'l Gardner and Sam'l Brown.—27th. Messrs. Gedney and Hathorne are on a committee, who report, that the militia be ready to repel and pursue the enemy in case of invasion by sea or land.—* About this time, the following instructions are given to the soldiers of Fort William in Salem.. On seeing two ships standing into the harbour, they shall give an alarm. They shall suffer no vessel to leave the harbor without a pass from the captain of the fort, except fishermen and coasters. If any ship, bound in and above Johnson's Haste, should not lower her topsail, they shall fire on her. They shall order every vessel, going out or coming in, to send a boat and be reported at the fort. Five soldiers shall watch day and night, and two of them shall constantly walk on the walls.

† July 29th. Rev. Mr. Noyes has Thatcher's Island, containing about 40 or 50 acres, and lying E. of Cape Ann, conveyed to him by James Davis of Gloucester for £15.

‡ Aug. 31st. The ketch Exchange, Capt. Tho's Marston, was taken by a French ship the 6th, off Block Island. She belonged to T. Lindall of Salem. She was ransomed for about £260, and came into this port. James Lindall, his son, was supercargo of the Exchange, and was carried as a hostage to Placentia, and was to remain there till the ransom was paid.

§ Sept. 14th. Nath'l Rogers, who began to preach at S. Village in Feb'y, receives a call to settle there. He gave a negative answer. He was a native of Ipswich, and son of John, who became President of H. College. He was born Feb. 22, 1670; graduated at H. C. 1687; settled at Portsmouth, 1699; and died there Oct. 3, 1723.

|| Oct. 15th. Thanksgiving is to be observed Nov. 11th, for health, good harvest, and preservation from feared invasion. It is enacted by the Legislature, that persons, guilty of blasphemy or denying the Canonical Books of the Bible, shall be imprisoned, not above 6 months, or be set in the pillory, be whipped, or have their tongues bored through with red hot iron, or sit on the gallows with a rope about their necks.—Not more than two of these sorts of punishments, were to be inflicted for one and the same offence.

* Nov. John Barton, physician of Salem, had died lately. He left a wife, Lydia, and children. He was intelligent and useful in his profession.

† Dec. 10th. The peace made at Ryswick between France and England with her allies, is proclaimed in Boston. ‡ 14th—"It is ordered that hereafter when any corpse, belonging to this town, is to be interred, the sexton or bell-ringer, shall, in two hours after the first bell's ringing, ring the second bell, giving the relations first notice thereof; at the ringing of which bell all persons, with the corpse, are to move and walk orderly two and two;—if a man is buried, the men follow first; if a woman, the women first;—no person shall presume to run or go before or abreast with the corpse or the relations."—§ 28th. Stephen Sewall, Clerk of the County Court, is confirmed as Register of Deeds, according to a late law, which required that the person, holding the former office should hold the latter.

Feb. 28th. Bartholomew, son of John Gedney, dies. He was baptized July 14, 1640. He married Hannah Clark 1662, who died Jan. 6, 1697, aged 52. He left children:—Samuel, a physician; Hannah, widow of Joshua Grafton; Bethiah, Lydia Curwin and Deborah Clark of Boston. He practised physic. He was often Deputy and Assistant in General Court. As a political man, he had much to do with public concerns, and was frequently on important committees of the Legislature. He was Judge of the Quarterly and General Sessions Courts. He held a commission as Colonel and was several times in active service against the French and Indians. He was an eminent member of the first church. Though elevated by men, yet he bowed in reverence and faith at the cross of Christ. As judge, he was called to take an immediate part against those, charged with witchcraft. He, like other worthy men thus engaged, undoubtedly altered his views and regretted the mistaken principles, on which he had acted with reference to so great a delusion. He was cut off in the midst of extensive usefulness and growing respectability.

* March 7th. Col. S. Sewall accounts for £10, which he had received of his brother for the poor of Salem, being part of a contribution, given by Connecticut Colony.

April 25th. Benja. Gerrish, Town Treasurer, is allowed 3d. per £1, on all monies which he shall receive and pay.

† May 25th. General Court sits. Among the Assistants are J. Hathorne, W. Brown, and J. Curwin. Samuel Brown and Samuel Gardner are deputies. N. Noyes preaches the Election sermon, which is prefaced by his senior colleague, J. Higginson.

§ Oct. 24th. Roger Derby, merchant, had died lately. He married Lucretia Kilham 1668. Their first child was Charles, which was born in Topsham, England, 1669, whence they came to Ipswich 1671. They had moved to Salem 1681. She died May 25, 1689. He had a second wife, Elizabeth, who survived him. He left children, Experience, Samuel, John, Richard and Lucretia, by his first wife, and Elizabeth, Margaret, Ann and Martha, by his last. He had lost three of his first wife's children. He was great-grand father of Elias Hasket Derby, the eminent merchant of this town, who died 1799.

|| Nov. 10th. Joseph Green is ordained over the Church at Salem Village. Churches of Salem, Beverly, Wenham, Reading and Roxbury are represented on

* 30th. As Daniel Epes is about to leave the Grammar School, a successor to him is to be sought. £50 are to be raised to purchase stock, hire a house and an overseer, for the poor.

† Dec. 6. Timothy Lindall dies, aged 56 yrs 7 mos. He was born at Duxbury, N. E. His father was James, who came from England. He married Mary, daughter of Nath'l Veren. She died Jan. 6, 1731, aged 83. He was admitted an inhabitant 1661; joined the Church 1677. He left children, James, Timothy, Nath'l, Abigail, Sarah, Caleb, Rachel and Veren. He was a merchant. His estate was £1740. He frequently acted as selectman and commissioner to receive votes for magistrates and assess taxes. He was Deputy at General Court. He was worthy of both private and public confidence.—† 15th. Thanksgiving for health, good harvest, check given to the Indians; continuation of civil and 'religious liberty, "while the faithful in France, Piedmont and other places, are suffering horrible persecution."

§ About this time, John, son of Thomas Ruck, dies, aged 71. He married Hannah —, by 1652, who died 1660; then Sarah Flint 1661, who died 1672; and then Elizabeth, widow of John Croad and daughter of Walter Price, the same year. She survived him and died 1705. Of his children, were John, Elizabeth and Samuel. He was a respectable merchant. He was often selectman and deputy to General Court. He lived usefully and died lamented.

May 24th. Tho's Putnam died. He was son of John and Priscilla, formerly inhabitants of Abbotaston, Buckinghamshire, England. He married Ann, 1643, daughter of Edward and Prudence Holyoke, formerly of Tamworth, Warwickshire, England. His first wife died 1665. She had children, Ann, Mary, Tho's, Edward, Deliverance, Elizabeth and Prudence. He married Ann Carver 1678. She died the next month after he did. He was of the 25 who helped to form the Village Church. He was a useful and respected man.

* 31st. Benj. Brown and Josiah Wolcot are Deputies to Gen. Court.

June 1st. W. Brown, J. Curwin and J. Hathorne are accepted, as Assistants, by Earl of Bellamont, who for a year had been successor to Sir Wm. Phipps.—7th. J. Hathorne is chairman of a committee to report in reference to pirates and privateering and the post-office. 16th. He is on a committee respecting the regulation of Indian trade.

July 3d. The Legislature hear Capt. Wm. Kidd, from Madagascar, give an account of himself. 6th. They order him to be apprehended. 8th. They examine his crew.—They order, with usual exceptions, that persons of every town, from 16 and upwards, shall, either in person or substitute, take their turn to keep a night watch, and also a watch on the Sabbath.—† 25th, Sarah, wife of Capt. Kidd, confined in Boston for piracy, had come to him from New-York. Her plate and other property, having been seized, is ordered by the government to be restored. Capt. Kidd was, not long before, a respectable shipmaster. In 1691, the Gov'r and Council made proposals to him and Capt. Walkington, as to going on a cruise for the capture of a privateer, on the coast. Capt. Kidd and Capt. Joseph Bradish, with others, were sent to England, tried and executed for piracy.

in Salem was £50. Towards raising this sum the town had the following rents:—Ryal's side, £22 5 6; Baker's Island, £3; Misery Island, £3; Beverly Ferry, £6; and Marblehead Ferry, 18s. Besides these rents, interest on £50, given by Wm. Brown, £3; and on £50, given by Joseph Brown, £3. If there were 20 scholars, each of them paid 3s. a quarter; if 30 and over, 2s.; if 40 and upwards, 1s6. The surplus of such income was to be put in the town treasury.

Dec. 15th. A contribution of £51 15 is divided among the poor of Salem.—18th. It is voted, that 20 buckets, two iron hooks and poles, for pulling down houses in case of fire, shall be provided.—* 30th. Messrs. J. Higginson and N. Noyes send a long letter to the authors of the declaration, who call themselves undertakers of the new Church erected in Boston. This is Brattle Street Church. Messrs. Higginson and Noyes complained of such a declaration, because they considered it too lax in doctrine, in the ordinance of baptism, and also in admission to communion. They desire the authors of the declaration, not to be the beginners of schism.

† March 13th. J. Hathorne is on a committee of the Legislature, to consult about the combination of the Indians at the Eastward, and for raising forces to oppose them.—16th. It is ordered by General Court, that 145 soldiers be impressed; 90 of whom are to be of Essex Regiments. Of the Essex troops, 30 are to be posted at Wells; 15 at York; 15 at Kittery; 10 at Amesbury; and the rest at Haverhill. Fast is appointed to be April 25th, because of troubles from the Indians. A report had been circulated, that the Indians were about to unite and fall upon the English Colonies. It excited much alarm; but afterwards appeared groundless.

May 29th. General Court assemble. Besides the maintained by the towns, where they lived, an act is passed, that they shall not be considered as manumitted, unless their masters give security to pay whatever charges may accrue for assisting them. As great disorders had been occasioned in the night by Indian, negro and mulatto servants and slaves, they are forbidden to be out after 9 o'clock at night.—27th. As the Governor had rejected five of the Assistants proposed, S. Gardner is on a committee to nominate others, who are accepted.

July 29th. News that French and Indians are about to attack the frontiers. Two companies, one of Essex, are ready to march against them.

* Aug. 11th. County tax is £200. Ipswich pays of it £35 8 6; Salem, £30 6 8; and Newbury, £26 8.

† Sept. Her Majesty's letter of April 8th, is read to the Assistants. It required, that an honourable salary be granted to the Governor.

Oct. 4th. Mrs. Mary, wife of Samuel Phillips, dies. He was son of Rev. Samuel Phillips, of Rowley. She was daughter of Rev. John Emerson, of Gloucester, and grand-daughter of deputy-governor Symonds. They were married 1687. She left a son, Samuel, settled in the ministry at Andover, and other children. Her husband married Sarah Mayfield 1704. She was a worthy woman.

1704.

‡ March 8th. It is agreed, that, on each public fast-day, there shall be a contribution for the poor.—§ 16th. J. Higginson is on a committee of the Council, to consider a bill from the House, about hiring vessels for war, and meeting expenses of officers and men and of transports. This was done in reference to the expedition of Col. Church against the French and Indians at the Eastward.

|| April 27th. The Governor orders a Fast to be Thursday, May 18th, on account of troublesome wars in Europe, and her Majesty's interest in them, and their influence on the people here; to pray for her Majesty, that her forces and those of her allies, and of this Province, may prevail, that the sea coast and inland frontiers be protected, and that there be a "plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit of God for a thorough reformation of all evils."—15th. An embargo is laid on all outward bound vessels.—24th. Thomas Povey, deputy-governor, issues a proclamation for the seizure of John Quelch and crew, charged with piracy.—* 31st. General Court sit. Five Assistants, or Counsellors, are from Salem as last year. J. Wolcot and S. Brown are Deputies.—As persons had forged the Province bills, it is enacted, that such criminals shall pay treble of what they counterfeit and be branded with F on their right cheek.

† June 9th. Maj. Stephen Sewall, Capt. John Turner, and 40 other volunteers, embark in a shallop and the fort pinnace after sunset, to go in search of some pirates, who belonged to Quelch's crew and who had sailed in the morning from Gloucester.—11th. Major Sewall brought to Salem, a Galley, Capt. Tho's Larrimore, on board of which he had captured seven pirates and some of their gold, at the Isle of Shoals.—12th. Two more of the pirates, found at Gloucester, are put in Salem jail.—13th. Maj. Sewall carries the pirates to Boston under a strong guard.—30th. Capt. John Quelch and five of his crew are hung. About 13 of his ship's company remained under sentence of death, and several more of them had been cleared.

‡ August. The ketch Repair, belonging to Philip English, and commanded by Nicholas Andrews, is chased ashore at Barbadoes by a French privateer and lost.

§ Oct. 11th. Dr. Anthony Randell, aged 69, died lately. He had practised his profession for a considerable number of years in this town. He was a Frenchman. He had a brother in Holland,—another, Stephen, and sister in France, and a third brother, Samuel, in Guernsey. He left most of his property to Ann Collyer, the mother of his wife Mary, who was 18 when he was 58. He appears to have been a respectable physician.

* Jan. 22. Fast appointed to be March 1st, because of great troubles in Europe, wherein her Majesty and confederates are engaged against the common enemy; and of troubles here with French and Indians; and to pray that her Majesty's arms be prospered, the designs of the Savages be defeated, exposed plantations be preserved, and captives in Indian hands be returned.

Feb. 3d. The Eastern Post arrives at Boston, and says "there is no travelling with horses, especially beyond Newbury, but with snow shoes."

† May 30th. General Court assemble. The same five Assistants from Salem as last year. S. Brown and S. Gardner are Representatives. The House choose a speaker, who is negatived by the Governor. They decide, that he had no authority to do this.—From regulations enacted, it appears, that tar, pitch, turpentine and rosin had been and were manufactured and exported in various places of Massachusetts. Surveyors, gagers and searchers of these articles, are to be chosen annually for each sea-port. White persons are forbidden to marry coloured persons. A duty of £4 is required for every slave, landed in the Province.

‡ Manasseh, son of John Marston, merchant, had died recently, aged 70. He married Mercy Pearce 1667. He was selectman, commissioner for rates, and Representative to the Legislature frequently. He was an active, useful and highly respected townsman.

§ June 22d. As a great storm and tide last winter had made a passage through Gloucester, so as to save doubling the Cape, and the channel, thus formed, was filling up with sand, the Legislature instruct Capt. Coit, of that town, to have the passage cleared. They empower him to make a swing bridge, and charge 2s. for each vessel going through, which was not of Gloucester, and 7s. a year on each vessel which was. For some reason, he did not immediately comply with their request, and they called on him, in Oct'r, for an explanation. It appears, that such a passage had been long desired and was probably made many years before. Mr. Endicot, in 1638, sent "men to view Cape Ann, whether it may be cut through." Gloucester Records of 1643 say:—"Mr. R. Blinman, Pastor, is to cut the heath through and to maintain it, and hath given him three acres of upland, and he is to have the benefit of it himself and his forever, giving the inhabitants of the town free passage."

July 30th. Nathaniel Felton dies in his 91st year. He came to Salem 1633; made a voyage to England 1634; and returned 1635. He became a member of the Church 1648. He testified, 1705, that North River was called Naumkeag by the Indians. He left children, John, Nathaniel, Elizabeth a widow, Ruth and Hannah. He was a man of good faith and judgment. He was frequently called to give his testimony about litigated estates.

* Aug. 21st. An Association of Ministers meet at Salem to consider the following question:—"What further steps are to be taken that Councils may have due constitution and efficacy in supporting, preserving and well ordering the interests of the Churches in the country?" In giving their reply to this question, they state, that as a minister is not inducted into office without a clerical council, so he ought, when parting from his people, to be dismissed by such a council. The Association took up the question, by recommendation of a General Convention of Ministers in Boston, May 30th, who then considered another question, viz:—"In case a person, censured by a particular church, complains to elders and churches of the neighbourhood, that the Church doth wrong him; how ought those Elders to consider the complaint of such a person?" The Association at Salem deputed Messrs. Gerrish and Cheever to present their result to the General Convention, who were to meet in Boston Sept. 13th, and who, when in session, gave valuable instructions for rendering councils efficacious.

* Sept. 2d. The first Quarterly Meeting of the Friends, which was held in this town.—† 7th. The House are charged by the Governor with disobedience to her Majesty's letter, as to aiding in repairs on Piscataqua fort and building Pemaquid fort, and settling fixed salaries for the Governor and his Deputy for the time being. They appoint a committee to wait on him, of whom was S. Brown. The committee state to him, that her Majesty had been misinformed, and that the House wished for a longer time to consider her instructions. His Excellency found the Council of the same mind with the Representatives. Many prejudices existed against him for his former adherence to the policy of Gov. Andros, which partly prevented him from carrying his purposes into effect.—14th. J. Hathorne is chairman of a committee, who report an address to her Majesty.

Nov. 28th. General Court order money to be paid, which had been advanced to Rev. John Williams, in Quebec, where he was a prisoner. Mr. Williams was minister of Deerfield, and was taken when that place was destroyed by the enemy.

Dec. 5th. The Legislature order two pamphlets, sent them by John Rogers and John Rogers jr., to be burnt by the common executioner near the whipping-post in Boston.

1706.

† May 29th. General Court convene. J. Hathorne, W. Brown, J. Curwin, and J. Higginson are of the Counsellors and so continue till 1713. J. Wolcot and B. Lynde are Representatives.—31st. J. Higginson is on a committee to report best means of defence against "powerful enemies in America." These enemies were French and Indians, who, in the course of the year, had killed and taken a number of the English in different towns.

* June 24th. A considerable debate takes place here in town meeting, about repairs on the Fort, as the Governor had ordered. It is decided not to comply with His Excellency's instructions, and to give him the following reasons for such a decision. 1st. The fort here is the Queen's and ought to be repaired by the Province. 2. It is on an island upwards of two miles from the body of the town. 3. The Province had maintained block houses on Merrimack River not further distant from settlements, than the fort here. 4. The fort here is of long standing and stronger than any except Boston's; and Salem is the first town of Massachusetts. 5. Very great danger exists from enemy expected by sea. 6. "We are at considerable charge for building a line of about 200 feet long, and two block houses, in which are several great guns; and we keep a constant watch there every night,—being more than a mile from the fort, nigh the end of the town; we design to set up 150 or 200 feet of stockades near the two block houses, if your Excellency thinks it proper;—our poverty and decay of trade is so great, occasioned by the war, we can do but little. 7. We desire your Excellency to have fort Ann repaired, lest it be ruined and thus dishonor the Queen and expose us, her loyal subjects, to be destroyed."—The town vote £60 to be expended for defence.

† July 31st. B. Lynde is on a committee to unite with the Attorney General, to draw up a bill of attainder against persons, who had carried on an illicit trade with the enemy.—The persons, here mentioned, had been to N. Scotia in a flag of truce to redeem captives, and used this opportunity to benefit themselves more than their country. Nathaniel, son of Rev. J. Higginson, and a merchant in London, united with others, and June 1707, presented a petition to the Queen for the removal of Gov. Dudley, as being secretly concerned with the said illicit traders. The General Court, however, passed a vote, Nov. 1707, expressive of their belief, that Mr. Dudley was innocent. He had granted a permit for those traders to carry some contraband articles to Port Royal. This was made the source of many suspicions unfavourable to him.

* Aug. 25th. Ann Putnam, who, in the witchcraft delusion, had accused several persons, confesses, that she was greatly deceived, and asks forgiveness of the Church, to which she is received.

† Sept. 30th. The county tax is £150. Of this Ipswich pays £27 0s. 6d.; Salem, £23 3s. 3d.; and Newbury, £19 17s. 5d.

‡ Nov. 26th. General Court order, "that a plate be forthwith provided and the eight several stamps or blazons, affixed to the bills of public credit on this Province, be engraven thereupon; and that the Committee for imprinting the bills, do forthwith imprint 3000 of them to be dispersed and transmitted to the several towns within the Province, proportionably to the sum they pay in the public tax, for the better information of her Majesty's good subjects of the different forms of the said stamps, and to which of the bills they respectively belong: the figure of the sum of the bill to be placed in the middle of the stamp; for discouraging and preventing the designs and endeavours of ill-men to alter and increase the sum of the bills."

November. Among the clergymen, who congratulate the Governor on the choice of John Leverett, as President of Harvard College, is Mr. Noyes of Salem.

* May 26th. General Court meet. J. Wolcot and Daniel Epes are Representatives. As England and Scotland became one kingdom, May 1, 1707, and were to be known as Great Britain, the Legislature vote, that the Royal style shall be altered to Queen of Great Britain, France and Ireland.

June 12th. Salem petitions that soldiers may be posted in fort Ann at Winter Island. The Council agree to do this, if the people here will repair their fort. But the House object, because they contend, that the Council have no right to grant money without their consent.—23d. Fast is appointed for deliverance from insects, which devour the trees.—26th. The Legislature send a congratulation to her Majesty for the union of England and Scotland.

July 1st. The Representatives ask the Governor and Council for redress, because the latter body had granted money without their consent.

† Aug. 29th. Maj. John Turner, Capt. John Gardner and Capt. Walter Price and men, from Salem, with other soldiers, pursued the French and Indians, who had surprised Haverhill.—After hard fighting, Maj. Turner and his troops, put the enemy to flight, who had nine killed and others wounded. John Gyles of this town, was at the battle of Haverhill, and lost the use of his arm by a shot. Having a large family, he received a pension from the Province.—The loss of property at Haverhill by means of the enemy was £1000. Of its inhabitants, Mr. Rolfe, the minister, and about 42 others were killed.

ted to examine rates for postage on letters, and to consider an alteration of the day for the Post's coming into Boston.—6th. General Court send a memorial to her Majesty, in which they vindicate themselves against the charge, that they were severe against persons of denominations different from their own.

Dec. 7th. Benjamin, son of William Brown, dies, aged 60. He married Mary, the daughter of John Hicks, a non-conformist minister in England, 1686. She came over this year in company with Rev. Mr. Morton, settled at Charlestown. Mr Brown's wife and two children died before he did. He left a large property. Dunton, in his journal, says, that he was worth £30,000. He bequeathed the following legacies in current money:—£200 to Harvard College, the income of which was to assist poor scholars there from Salem; £50 to the First Church, half of which was to purchase a bason for baptizing, and income of the other half to supply the Lord's Table; £60 to the Grammar School, the interest of which was to help in making it a free school; £70 towards building an Alms House, and £30 for supplying it with stock. He gave largely to the children of his sister, wife of Wait Winthrop; to his neices, Mrs. Sarah Woodward, living in England, and Mrs. Mary, wife of Benjamin Lynde; and to his two nephews, Samuel and John Brown. He sustained various offices. He was selectman, commissioner for rates, representative, a counsellor of the Governor, and Justice of the Court of Sessions. He lived to be useful. He was an ornament to his town and country.

9th. Rev. John Higginson dies. Cotton Mather preached his funeral sermon, to which was annexed an elegy on his decease, by his colleague, Mr. Noyes. He was son of Francis and Ann Higginson, and born at Claybrook, England, Aug. 6th, 1616. He joined the Church here at 13 years old. His father died, and left his mother with him and seven other children. He was assisted in getting an education by the chief magistrates and ministers of the Colony, for whom he ever cherished feelings of gratitude and esteem.

1636—Having become acquainted with the Indian language, he is one of three commissioners to wait on Canonicus, about the murder of John Oldham. He is employed as chaplin at Say Brook fort. He continued here above four years. 1637—He is scribe of the Synod, which sat at Newton. 1641—He teaches a school in Hartford, and privately assists Rev. Mr. Hooker, with whom he pursues his theological studies. He was thus employed in Hartford about two years. 1643—He moves to Guildford and is settled in the ministry, as colleague with Henry Whitfield. 1647—Mr. Higginson transcribes nearly 200 of Mr. Hooker's sermons, who was his friend and benefactor, and who had died recently. Having thus written off these sermons, he sent them to England, where about half of them were printed. 1651—His father in law goes to England and leaves him to carry on the ministry alone. 1659—He, being on his passage for England, is unintentionally brought into Salem. He is persuaded to say, that he will preach one year. Before this time was out, he received an invitation to settle, which he did 1660. Thus connected with the First Church, which his father helped to found, he was called to take part in the controversy, then existing between the Congregationalists and the Friends. He, like almost every eminent man in the Colony, considered the religious opinions and practices of the Friends, as dangerous to both Church and State. For the agency, which he took in excommunicating some of his church, who joined them, they severely reproached him. 1663—He preaches the Election sermon, highly recommended by two noted clergymen. 1669—He is active in forming the old S. Church of Boston. He with Mr. Thatcher of this Church recommends Morton's Memorial. 1673—May 18—Mr. H. preaches at Wenham and returns P. M. to Mr Newman's house, who had died lately. The room, where he and others sit conversing, has lightning pass through it and go up chimney, killing one of the company and a dog under his chair. Mr. H. is much tried about Mr. Nicholet, his assistant in the ministry. He did not think so favourably of him, as the majority of his people did. 1686—He publishes a “Treatise of Peace in Christ,” prefaced by Rev. S. Willard, and dedicated to the people of Saybrook, Guildford and Salem. 1689—At his own house, Mr. H. maintains an ingenious argument against the position of Sir E. Andros, who contends, that the Colonists had forfeited their lands to the King. This argument was forwarded to General Court, at their request, soon after Sir E. Andros was deposed. 1692. Mr. H., though taking no active part in the transactions of Witchcraft, did not feel so confident of their incorrectness as to oppose them. He appears to have coincided with Mr. Noyes, his colleague, in the excommunication of G. Cory, who had been condemned for witchcraft. Such a consent is by no means surprising, when we reflect on the prevalent views and laws of that period. 1697—Mr. H. writes an interesting attestation to Mather’s Church History. 1698—He publishes a long and excellent sermon, entitled, “New-England’s duty and interest to be an habitation of justice and holiness.” 1698—He writes a candid Epistle, prefixed to Rev. John Hale’s remarks on Witchcraft. 1701—He and Rev. Wm. Hubbard of Ipswich, publish “Testimony to the order of the Gospel in the Churches of N. England.” 1702—Mather says, in his Magnalia, “Mr. J. Higginson and Mr. W. Hubbard have assisted me and much obliged me with information for many parts of our history.” 1705—Mr. H. writes advice to his children, called his dying testimony. 1708—He has his name to a preface of Tho’s Allen’s “Invitation to Thirsty Sinners.”

Mr. H. was frequently upon councils. His judgment was sound, well informed, exercised discreetly, and when expressed, had great weight. An agent from England, supposed to be Edward Randolph, writes home about 1677, that Mr. H. is one of three, who are the most popular divines in Massachusetts. John Dunton visited Mr. H. 1686, and remarks of him: "all men look to him as a common father, and old age for his sake is a reverend thing; he is eminent for all the graces, that adorn a minister; his very presence puts vice out of countenance; his conversation is a glimpse of heaven." Cotton Mather says of Mr. H. 1696, "this good old man is yet alive; and he that from a child knew the holy scriptures, does at those years wherein men are to be twice children, continue preaching them with such a manly, pertinent, judicious vigour, and with so little decay of his intellectual abilities, as is indeed a matter of just admiration."

Mr. H. discharged his duties as a son, husband and father, as a member of the community, and a minister, with more than common fidelity. He bore with pious fortitude the various trials of his profession, and duly balanced them with its consolations, so as not to be driven from the course of duty. Such were his talents, attainments, and virtues, such his aims and exertions, in particular for this town, and in general for New-England, he deserves to be remembered by the people of Salem with sentiments of high and lasting esteem. We take an interest not only in the individual concerns of a person, like Mr. H., but also in his family. His first wife was a daughter of Mr. Whitfield, with whom he was colleague at Guildford. She died before 1678, when he married Mary, a widow of Boston, who died March 9th, 1709, and left two daughters, one, Anna, married to Jeremiah Dummer, Esq., and the other, Mary, to Mr. John Coney. Mr. H. left children by his first wife, John, Nathaniel, Thomas, and Anna. He had lost Francis, Henry and Sarah. John, of the Governor's Council, lived in Salem. Nathaniel was born at Guildford, Oct. 11, 1652, and educated at Harvard. He went to England, 1674; was with Lord Wharton about 7 years, as steward and tutor to his children. He was employed in the mint of the tower 1681; and went, 1683, in the Company's service to Fort St. George, E. Indies; was member and secretary of the Council, and afterwards Governor of the Factory at said fort. He married Elizabeth Richards, 1692, returned to England with his wife and 4 children, 1700, and established himself as a merchant in London, where he died 1703. Thomas went to England, learnt the Goldsmith's trade, came home, embarked for Arabia, and was never more heard off. Francis went to his uncle at Kirby Stevens in England, was educated at the University, and died of small pox in London, Æ 24. Henry was brought up a merchant, went to Barbadoes as Factor, and there died of small pox, 1685. Sarah was married to Richard Wharton of Salem, and Anna to Capt. Doliver, of Gloucester.

1709.

* Feb. 19th. If either of the commissioners, appointed to attend Lord Lovelace to New-York, should fail, J. Higginson is designated to supply his place.—† 23d. The Legislature order, that the duties "on a cargo of Bibles and paper, &c., lately arrived from the Society for propagating the Gospel in New-England and parts adjacent in America, be remitted."—The House require "that information be sent to several towns in this Province, that the sheep on the Islands and Necks in or near Boston, have an infectious disease, called the Scab, lately brought from beyond sea, so that all persons may endeavour to keep their sheep from the infection."

‡ May 9th. According to Mr. Noyes' request, the Church vote to have George Curwin, as colleague with him. The town did not immediately comply with this vote.—§ Instructions are voted by Salem for their Representatives to General Court next session:—"1. That you do your utmost, that such measures and methods may be taken, as may be effectual to cause the money to pass currently and universally throughout this Province, conformably to and in obedience to her Majesty's proclamation and act of Parliament referring thereto, which may be a means to prevent confusion and mischief, which will otherwise immediately ensue. 2d. That you industriously bring forward, encourage and use all suitable means to facilitate the expedition, which her Majesty is forming against the common enemy, for the safety and benefit of her subjects here, in these northern parts of America. 3. In general, that you do what may be proper for the good and safety of the Province and her Majesty's subjects therein and dominions adjacent, and, in particular, for this our town of Salem, as occasion may offer."

* May 25th. General Court assemble. J. Wolcot and John Brown are Representatives. † A number of the inhabitants in Salem, petition the Legislature, that they, as children of some executed for witchcraft, may be relieved, from the disabilities, to which they are liable in consequence of a bill of attainder, which had existed against them. They, also, petition, that they may be remunerated for damages, sustained by their parents on account of prosecutions for witchcraft. P. English joins with these petitioners as to damages, which he incurred by having his property seized, when he and his wife were falsely imprisoned for the same offence.—‡ 30th. A resolve is passed by the Legislature to go against Canada.

July 13th. J. Higginson is on a committee to consult with the Pilots for Canada expedition about the charts in reference to the River (St. Lawrence) and correct the errors in them, and draw up a suitable chart for the fleet.—15th. The chart prepared is ordered to be engraved on copper. The contemplated expedition against Canada failed, because forces, expected from England, were sent to Portugal to reinforce an army of English and Portuguese, which had been defeated by the French in Estramadura.

Sept. 1st. John, son of Jeffrey Massey, dies, Æ 79. He was among the first children born in Salem. Though in humble life, he was an upright man.

Nov. 2d. On a petition of those, living in Salem without the bridge, for 10 acres of land towards the support of the ministry, the Assistants are equally divided. Still their petition is granted.

‡ Dec. 26th. "Ordered, that Col. J. Higginson and S. Sewall do draw and prefer a petition to the next Sessions of the General Court, in the name of the Justices of this Court and County, for obtaining a bridge to be built over to Noddle's Island to the main at N. East side, or if it cannot be granted them, that there be three boats kept plying betwixt Winisimet and Boston, under such regulation, that the Queen's subjects may not be so long detained to their great detriment and hindrance, as now too often they are." It appears, that only one ferry boat had been used to convey passengers from this way, over Charlestown River to Boston. General Court orders, Oct. 1711, that there shall be three boats.

* 20th. A committee report to the Legislature, that a light house shall be erected at the entrance of Boston harbor, on the S. part of Beacon Island. A report was before the same body, June 17th, for taking fees of vessels, which should pass this light house. Such a house was the first of the kind in Massachusetts.

April 19th. Ann, relict of Governor Bradstreet, dies, Æ 79. She was daughter of Emmanuel Downing, and was born in London. Her first husband was Capt. Joseph Gardner, slain by the Indians at Narraganset. She had an excellent education, and what is more, a principle of deep piety, which rendered her talents, attainments and possessions, blessings to society.

† 24th. Benjamin Gerrish dies. He was son of Wm. Gerrish of Newbury, and was born Jan. 13, 1653. He had three wives, Hannah Ruck, Anna Paine, and Elizabeth Turner. The last survived him. He left six children, including his oldest son Benjamin. He was deacon of the first church and collector for Salem District. He had served as selectman and town treasurer, and clerk of county court. He was a worthy man. In his decease the community suffered a loss.

‡ May 27th. General Court assemble. Wm. Browne, J. Curwin, and B. Lynde are Counsellors. John Brown and Francis Willoughby are Representatives.

§ June 25th. According to request, 13 males and 26 females are dismissed from the First Church, to constitute a Church at the middle precinct, now S. Danvers.—|| 29th. The Commoners of Salem meet and choose J. Higginson, S. Gardner, J. Turner, Jona. Putnam, and S. Sewall for their Trustees. They grant

Elders impose hands. C. Mather gives the right hand. Mr. Gerrish makes the concluding prayer. Mr. Curwin pronounces the benediction.—The salary of Mr. Curwin was £90.—† 26th. General Court sit. J. Curwin, J. Higginson and B. Lynde are Counsellors. Peter Osgood and John Pickering are Representatives.—It is enacted, that persons, guilty the second time of counterfeiting Province bills, shall suffer death.

‡ June 7th. The people of Salem petition the Legislature to man Fort Ann, which mounted 20 guns. They, also, petition that the grant of a Plantation to them at Pennicook 1661, may be confirmed to them. They state that some of them had erected a trading house there 40 years since. They give as reasons for having the grant confirmed, that, since it was first made, they had been embarrassed by Indian wars; that their boundaries were now reduced to four miles broad, and seven long;—that they had met with great losses; suffered much in the late war, and needed a settlement for part of their population.

§ July 13th. The Friends in this town agree to pay one third of the expense for land, adjoining to a meeting house of their denomination in Boston.

ter a house for the entertainment of Elizeus Burges, the expected Governor. Col. Burges did not arrive, though his commission, as Governor, was published in Boston Nov. 9.—Mr. Dudley wrote to several governors in order to prevent the introduction and vending in this Province, of Indian captives from Carolina.—In answer to a memorial of clergymen, leave is granted for a Synod of Churches in the Province.—9th. Increase Mather appeared in Court against granting a Synod.—17th. D. Epes is on a committee to inform the Council, that the House intend to choose an Attorney General, if they will not concur.—20th. The House choose Thomas Newton for such an officer, though the Council decline to act with them.

July 20th. J. Higginson is among commissioners to go and treat with the Cape Sable Indians, who, it was reported, had taken vessels, and murdered some of the English;—but he appears to have declined the appointment.—The Court enact, that a Register of Deeds be annually appointed in every county;—and that towns, voluntarily without ministers, shall be prosecuted for such deficiency.

Oct. 26th. Rev. Joseph Green, of S. Village, dies, aged 40. He graduated at Cambridge 1695. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Mr. Gerrish, of Wenham. She survived him, and married Rev. Wm. Brattle of Cambridge. He left a mother Champney, and children, one of which was about to be educated at College. Mr. Green was highly esteemed, and his death was much lamented.

Nov. 14th. Deliverance Parkman, merchant, dies. He had four wives, Sarah daughter of Hilliard Veren, whom he married 1673; and who died 1681; Mehitable Wait, of Malden; Margaret daughter of Samuel Gardner; and Susannah, widow of John Gedney jr. who survived him.—He left children, of whom was Mehitable, married to Rev. George Curwin. He was a useful and respected man.

Feb. 1st. William Brown dies in his 78th year. He was son of Hon. Wm. Brown, who died 1688. He married Hannah, daughter of George Curwin 1664. She died 1692 aged nearly 43. Their surviving children were Samuel, Mary, Sarah and John.—Mr. Brown left a second wife, Rebecca, who had been a widow Bailey, and who had a son John. He bequeathed to his relict £1000 in silver, £40 a year current money, and some real estate.—He gave £100 to her son: £10 to Rev. Mr. Curwin, and £25 to Mr. Noyes: £20 to the First Church, to be expended in plate or in supplying the communion table: £40 to the poor of the same church and parish: £50 towards the Alma House, which is partly built, including what he had already given. He gave £100 towards making the Grammar School free, requiring only the interest to be spent: £100 to Harvard College, the interest of which is "to help support his grand children or their posterity while students there, and if none such, to help poor Salem scholars, that may live at College." He left £100 to his niece, Sarah Woodward in Great Britain: £50 to his niece, Anna Lechmore: £100 to each child of his sons, Samuel and John: £250 to each of his daughter Mary Lynde's two children. He gave to this daughter, £500 in silver: the land at Castle Hill, about 25 acres, which he had bought of Erasmus James, and other valuable estate. He willed £2000 in silver to his eldest son Samuel, and other valuable property: and £1000 to his son John. His wealth was great for the period in which he lived. He had held the chief offices of the town. He was Representative to General Court and a member of the Governor's Council. He was Justice of the Court of General Sessions and of Common Pleas. He died full of years, usefulness and honours. He was an ornament to his town and country.

* March 5th. The Congregation at S. Village vote to defer an answer to the petition of their neighbours at Wills Hill, who desire to be set off to build a meeting house and have preaching by themselves.

† April 25th. The First Church is represented in the Council for ordaining Edward Holyoke, pastor of the new Church at Marblehead. He was born in Boston, graduated at Harvard, became President of this College 1737, and died June 1769, aged 30. He was father of the highly esteemed E. A. Holyoke, M. D. who has lately deceased.

‡ May 30th. General Court meet. John Pickering and John Gardner are Representatives.

§ June 26th. Francis Willoughby of this place is requested to provide the King's arms for the Court House, and to have those there altered.

July 17th. F. Willoughby having declined being a Commissioner for the County excise. Daniel Epes is appointed in his stead. || 18th. The First Church of Salem is represented at the ordination of John Barnard, as Colleague with Mr. Cheever, over the First Church of Marblehead. Other churches represented, were the 2d and 4th of Boston, church of Lynn, and the 2d of Marblehead. Mr. Curwin prayed. Mr. Barnard preached. Dr. C. Mather offered the ordaining prayer. Mr. Coleman gave the right hand. Mr. Barnard had a settlement of £150: a salary of £110, while single, but £130 when married. He was born in Boston; graduated at Harvard, and died June 24, 1770. in his 29th year.

** Sept 27. Neighbouring clergymen meet at Mr. Prescott's about forming an Association, for mutual help in discharging their ministerial duties. The articles of this Association were signed, in about a year, by S. Cheever, N. Noyes, J. Gerrish, T. Blowers, R. Brown,

Court of Sessions, of the Court of Common Pleas, and of the Supreme Court. He was in active service as Colonel, against the French and Indians. His official trusts, were many, various and important. His faithful discharge of them should lead us to remember him, with sentiments of high respect and esteem.

* 29th. General Court sits. T. Lindall and P. Osgood are Representatives.

† June 5th. Peter Clark is ordained at the Village. The Churches of Beverly, Wenham, Reading and Topsfield are represented on this occasion. He had £90 settlement, and a salary of £90 and the Parsonage.

‡ July 22d. Doct. Bartholomew Brown had died lately. He married Susanna, daughter of Thomas Maul, 1693. He left children, of which was John, his eldest son. He appears to have been a respectable physician.

Nov. 1. Wm. Hirst, merchant, dies. He married Mary Grove 1674. She died April before he did. He left children, of which were Grove, and Elizabeth, wife of Maj. Walter Price.—His clear estate was over £2534. He had been Selectman, Representative to the Legislature, and Justice of the Court of General Sessions. He was a useful and respected inhabitant.

23d. Rev. George, son of the Hon. Jonathan Curwin, dies. He was born May 21, 1683, and graduated at Harvard 1701. He married Mehitable, daughter of Deliverance Parkman, 1711. She died Nov. 13, 1718. They left children, Jonathan, Samuel, and George. Mr. Barnard, of Marblehead, gave the following character of Mr. Curwin: "The spirit of early devotion, accompanied with a natural freedom of thought and easy elocution—a quick invention, a solid judgment and a tenacious memory, laid the foundation of a good preacher—to which his acquired literature, his great reading, hard studies, deep meditation, and close walk with God, rendered him an able and faithful minister of the New-Testament." The portrait of Mr. Curwin shows, that he had a very interesting countenance. With a prospect of eminent usefulness, he was called to rest with his worthy predecessors.

Dec. 13th. Nicholas, son of Nicholas Noyes, of Newbury, dies. He was born Dec. 22, 1647, and graduated at Cambridge 1667. He lived a bachelor. Before his preaching here, 1682, he had been settled 13 years at Haddam, Connecticut. John Dunton, having visited him, 1686, writes,—“he is all that is delightful in conversation; it is no lessening to his brother Higginson to say, that he is no ways inferior to him for good preaching or primitive living.” Mr. Noyes erred in opinion and action, as to witchcraft. But he confessed his mistake, and strove to make all the reparation in his power. His talents were good, his literature general, his acquaintance with theology extensive, his attachment to the ministry strong, and his life both useful and desired. His printed productions are few. He gave an account of his uncle James Noyes, as contained in the Magnalia. He published an Election sermon, 1698; a poem on the death of his colleague, Mr. Higginson, 1708, which was bound with a sermon, preached by C. Mather on the same occasion; and another poem on the death of Rev. J. Green, 1715.

* May 28th. General Court convene. T. Lindall and P. Osgood are Representatives. 29th. The Governor in his speech says, "In several preceeding sessions, I have mentioned to you how extremely necessary it was for us to find out some means to advance the sinking credit of our public bills; and also for encouraging products of this Province. The ill consequences of our not giving due attention to these weighty affairs are every day increasing, and they will inevitably end in our utter destruction, if not timely removed. If you would reflect a little upon the miserable state of your neighbours at Carolina, it would awaken you."

July 1st. John Higginson, of this place, and eighty others, petition for leave to settle a township between Dunstable and Lancaster. This petition was left, Dec. 1st, to a Committee of both houses.

9th. Jonathan, son of George Curwin, dies. He was born Nov. 14, 1640. He married Widow Elizabeth Gibbs, of Boston 1676. She died Aug. 20, 1718. Her mother was Margaret Thatcher of Boston. Rev. H. Gibbs of Watertown, was one of her children. Mr. Curwin left a daughter Elizabeth, wife of James Lindall. He had been Selectman, Representative to General Court, and long of the Governor's Council. He had been Judge of the Court of Sessions, of Court of Common Pleas, and of the Supreme Court. He belonged to the First Church.—In his several relations, as a member of society and a christian, he richly deserved the confidence, which was extensively granted him.

† 14th The First Church and Congregation worship in their new meeting house, which was raised May 21st. This house continued till March 13, 1826, when it was

Half of the cost of the building is to be paid by the county and the other by the town.

Oct. 8th. Samuel Fisk is ordained over the First Church. Mr. Blowers prayed. Mr. Coleman preached from II Cor. 4th chapter 5th verse. Mr. Fisk prayed and was received into the Church. Mr. Gerrish prayed and gave charge. Messrs. Rogers of Ipswich, Coleman and Blowers, imposed hands. Mr. Rogers gave the right hand. Mr. Fisk pronounced the benediction.

† Nov. 14th Some members of the First Church, being thirty-six, request to be set off for settling Robert Stanton, as their minister, in the east part of the town.

‡ Nov. 20th. B. Lynde and T. Lindall are on a Committee to draw up instructions to "the agent on present emergencies of government." 27th. J. Higginson is on committee to facilitate the better settlement of new townships in the Province.

§ Dec. 11th. Thanksgiving is observed, and, according to the Governor's order, a contribution of £26 2 is gathered here for propagating the Gospel. £5 is collected at the Village for the same object and paid over to Edward Bromfield, Esq. 15th. As Simon Williard had resigned the office of Deacon in the First Church, Peter Osgood is chosen to succeed him. 25th. The brethren and sisters at the east part of the town, are dismissed according to their request. Their meeting house was built by this time.

Stephen Sewall is chosen Notary for Salem by the Legislature. Before this there had been no Notaries in N. England except such as were commissioned by the Archbishop of Canterbury.—17th. J. Gardner is on a committee to visit the settlement made by James Mac Gregor, James Mac Keen, and James Gregg, about 14 miles from Haverhill and in New Hampshire. It appears, that these persons were of a company from Ireland, who had leave to settle a township at the Eastward, but who preferred the place, which they had occupied in an informal manner.—21st. A message is sent from the House to the Governor desiring him to obtain the release of Robert Leighing, who was servant to Thomas Picket of Milton, and who had been pressed a month before, from Boston Long wharf, for his Majesty's ship Shark. They represent, that such an impressment is a great breach on the rights of the Provincials.—23d. The House raise a committee to draft a bill to prevent the inhabitants' being forcibly taken and detained on board of any vessel. They are informed, that the men of the Shark Frigate had abused the crew of a Boston vessel. They vote, that his Excellency order the commander of Castle William to stop this frigate, till satisfaction be given by her captain.—25th. S. Brown is on committee, as to prohibiting trade with Cape Breton and levying soldiers for service, because the French are said to have promoted the disaster, which took place, August 7th, at Canso, where several were killed and a loss of £20,000 sustained.

Dec. 8th. A resolve passes the House, that 100 men be sent to "Norridgwog," and arrest Sebastian Ralle, and bring him to Boston, for stirring up the Indians against the English; and that a Missionary be sent to instruct the Kennebeck Indians at a salary of £150. Samuel Moody is chosen for the Missionary. 12th. J. Gardner is on committee to address his Majesty. * 21st. A deserter from his Majesty's service is sentenced to be tied at a cart's tail with one end of a halter and to have the other end around his neck; be whipped 39 stripes through the public street in Salem, on Wednesday next immediately after the lecture.

† March 21st. The House insist on an emission of £100,000, though opposed by the Governor and Council. T. Lindall is Speaker this session. 31st. It is enacted, to emit £50,000 in bills, after much debate between the House and Council.

‡ April 22d. It is voted, that "a watch be kept at Winter Island until all the vessels, now expected from Barbadoes and Tortudas, are arrived to prevent the infection of the small pox." Some families in town had this disease the past winter. It is agreed that the price of wheat shall be 8s. a bushel.

§ May 31st. General Court meet. B. Lynde, S. Brown and John Turner are of the Council, and so continue till 1728. D. Epes and J. Gardner are Representatives. During this session the Governor and House have a serious misunderstanding on several subjects.

June 9th. J. Gardner is on a Committee to desire an explanation of the Governor about his instructions from England, as to the emission of bills in this Province.—19th. The House request the Council to unite with them in appointing a Fast on account of small pox in Boston. After some delay the request is granted.

* July 3d. Measures are taken to prevent the small pox's spreading to Salem from Boston. A house is appointed for those, who should take this disease.—†13th. Fast is observed here because of the small pox, which prevailed in Boston and "threatened the whole land." This disease was brought into Boston by the "Saltortugas" fleet about the middle of April. Dr. Z. Boylston began to inoculate by recommendation of C. Mather. It is well known, that Dr. Boylston, for his enterprise and perseverance on this occasion, was shamefully threatened and abused.—‡18th. Of a county rate, £150, Salem pays £19 8 2, Ipswich £20 17 3, and Newbury £17 8.

§ Aug. 4th. T. Lindall having been chosen Representative with D. Epes, declines, and P. Osgood is elected in his stead.—This new choice of Representatives was because the Governor had dissolved the House the 19th ult. and issued writs for a new one to meet the 23d inst. ||23d. A Fast is observed in the first parish meeting house, by four Congregations of the town,—because of excessive rain "whereby the hands of men have been sealed up and the fruits of the earth and the treasures of the sea (fish having been greatly wasted and endangered)."

¶ Sept. 4th. "Whereas there are many families of the Irish people, that were affrighted from their new settlements in Eastern parts, come into this town," it is ordered, "that their circumstances be inquired into and how many persons of them there are, and whether they intend to move hence or not."

Oct. 12th. Salem's proportion of the Province loan, £50,000, is £1330, which they agree to take. They choose T. Lindall, J. Wolcott, and William Bowditch as Trustees of this sum, to let it out at 6 per cent on real estate or personal security, and to allow no person to have less than £10 nor more than £50. The Trustees were to have one-sixth of the interest, and the remainder was for defraying town charges.

† April. The Association of ministers meet at the Village and consider the unhappy difficulties of Lynn.

‡ May 30th. General Court sit. J. Wolcot is present as Representative. William Bowditch had been chosen by the town as the other.

June 8th. A ship with 100 men, Capt. Peter Papillon, is ordered to sail on the morrow, to take a piratical brig on the coast.

19th. John, son of John Pickering dies, aged 64. He left wife, Sarah, and children, Theophilus, Timothy, Lois Orne, Sarah wife of Joseph Hardy, and Eunice. He was Selectman and Representative to the Legislature. His decease was a loss to community.

26th. The Legislature vote to have £500 worth of 1d, 2d, 3d, bills struck off for small change, The 1d bills are to be round, 2d square, 3d sex-angular.

§ July 2d. A nightly watch is to be kept at Salem fort because of “ the rumor of a pirate’s being near the coast.”—|| 6th. Major J. Turner is on a committee to visit the Eastern Indians, and inquire of them the reasons for their late hostilities, and to propose an exchange of their hostages in Boston fort, for the English prisoners, whom they had taken.

¶ 18th. Capt. John, son of Samuel Gardner, died recently. He left wife, Elizabeth, and children, Elizabeth, Hannah, Bethiah, Ruth, Lydia, John, Daniel and Samuel. He gave one-tenth of his real estate to the poor of Salem. He served as Selectman and Representative to General Court. He was in the battle at Haverhill. He was highly and justly esteemed.

10th. B. Lynde is on committee "to consider what is proper to do upon the proceedings of the Council of N. York, in the affair of the Five Nations." This Committee "are of opinion that the goods already sent to Albany, as a present to the Five Nations, being made up to £500, be delivered to them at the Treaty, which is to be there made this month by two Commissioners:—and that the commissioners be instructed to renew the covenant chain with the Five Nations and engage them to be no way assisting the Eastern Indians in their present rebellion against His Majesty King George."

Oct. 1st. John Putnam died recently. He left wife, Hannah, and children, Samuel, Priscilla, Jonah, John, Joshua, Amos, Abigail, Sarah, Rebecca, and Elizabeth Poelpe. He had often been Selectman and Representative to General Court.

Nov. 13th. Daniel, son of Daniel and Elizabeth Eper, of Ipswich, dies. He was born March 24, 1649, and graduated at Harvard 1669. He married Martha, daughter of William Boardman of Cambridge, 1672. She died 1692. Mr. Eper was married again to Widow Hannah Wainwright of Ipswich 1693. She survived him. He left children, Daniel, Samuel, Elizabeth, Mary, Ruth, Margaret and Martha. He came to teach the Grammar School here 1671. While thus employed, he preached occasionally. He was an exemplary member of the First Church. He held the chief offices of the town and was Representative to General Court. He was Commissioner of Excise in Essex and a Justice of the Court of General Sessions. He was eminently useful. Dunton remarks in his journal, "I must remember the great civilities I met at Salem from Mr. Epes, the most eminent school master in New-England. He hath sent many scholars to the University. He is a person of solid learning. He does not make so poor a use of the world as to hug and embrace it."

* Exchange is £270 in bills for £100 sterling.

† Jan. 1st. As Gov. Shute saw, that the House refused to grant him a sufficient salary,—denied his power to negative their speaker,—appointed fasts and thanksgivings and adjoured to a distant day without his leave, and assumed some of the military power, which was claimed by him,—he unexpectedly sails for London, with an intention to return in the fall.—4th. J. Wolcott and another are instructed to "go up to the Board and inquire whether they have passed on the vote of the House refering to Col. Walton and Maj. Moody." These officers had been posted at the Eastward to act against the Indians, and were charged with not conforming with their instructions.—The House maintained, that they ought to be dismissed without compensation. The Council and Governor took the opposite stand.—William Dummer, Lt. Governor, by advice of Council, granted Col. Walton and Major Moody pay for their services and discharged them from office.

‡ Feb. 21st. Fast is appointed to be March 14th, to pray for the defeat of conspiracies in favour of the Pretender and against the King and Royal family. It was reported that a plot had been discovered to destroy them on Sabbath while at Church,—to fire London in three places,—and to massacre all dissenting Congregations.

* July 2d. Thomas Maule died lately. He married Naomy Linsey 1670. He left a second wife, Sarah, and children, of whom was John. He came from England to Barbados, when twelve years old, and thence to New England. After being in this country three years, he moved to Salem, and united himself to the Friends.—For his adherence to this denomination and the maintaining of their principles,—he was imprisoned, fined and whipped several times.—He kept a store and traded considerably.—The book, which he published, called “Truth held forth,”—and the pamphlet, intitled “the Mauler mauled,”—show him to have possessed more than a common share of intellect and information. He was highly respected by his own denomination.

† Aug. 12th. The English surprise Norridgewock and kill Ralle, the Jesuit, with eighty Indians. This Priest had been the subject of frequent remarks in General Court,—who had offered a reward several times for him, either dead or alive, because he actuated his Indian followers to hostilities against their frontiers.

‡ Oct. 5th. Price of wheat this month 10s.

§ Nov. 11th. The Legislature enact that no more scarfs shall be given at funerals,—because a burdensome custom.—30th. Col. S. Brown's account for billeting soldiers at Salem, is allowed.

The Trask here mentioned, belonged to Salem Village,—and had been redeemed from the Indians by Monsieur Castin before July 9th, when he was taken away by the crew of an English bark.

* May 26th. General Court sits. T. Lindall and D. Epes are representatives. 27th. Congregational ministers, met in Boston, petition the Legislature for a Synod. This petition was opposed by Episcopal clergy. It was put over for consideration. Orders came from England forbidding it to be allowed.—Mr. Dummer recommends voluntary enlistments instead of impressments.

† June 7th. Rev. John Rogers of Boxford, agrees to compensate the Selectmen of Salem for whatever assistance may be rendered to his parents, who were inhabitants of this town. ‡ 10th. T. Lindall is on committee to draft a memorial to the King. 16th. Josiah Williard, captain of a company at the Westward, has his accounts allowed.

§ July 23th. The Act, passed May 26th, requiring Congregations to make up the salaries of their ministers, according to the difference between bills of credit and specie,—is read before the First Parish. Clergymen were suffering greatly by having their salary paid in Province paper money, which had fallen much below par.—|| The east parish petition the first parish to have the ministers of both parishes, supported by a general tax. The reasons of the east parish were, that they were impoverished,—that their lowest rate was 9s. while the lowest rate of the first parish was 2s6,—that their principal men, except Col. Samuel Brown, were taken away,—several of them having gone to a Marblehead Church and others moved to the first parish for the sake of a less tax.

The inhabitants of Salem at Wills Hill, united with some of Andover, Boxford and Topsfield, are incorporated as a town by the name of Middletown.

July 24th. General Court meet. Gov. Burnet, who arrived the 13th, addresses the House. He lays before them one of the royal instructions, which requires them to afford him at least £1000 salary. As there had been several duels lately, it is enacted, that persons concerned in a duel, whereby is no death, are to be carried publicly in a cart to the gallows with a rope round their neck and sit one hour on the gallows, and then be imprisoned a year and give bonds to keep the peace for another year; that a person, who kills another in a duel, shall suffer death, have his body buried without a coffin, with a stake driven through it, at or near the place of his execution. The body of a person, killed in a duel is to be buried in the same manner.—As the duty on negroes of £4 a head, is often evaded, the masters of vessels, bringing them, are to enter them on oath to the town clerk, where they arrive and to pay him the duty. If any negro die within a year after he is imported, the duty on him is to be returned.

* Sept. 24th. The vote of the House, as to the Governor's salary, is lodged with T. Barton, town clerk, to know the minds of the people here. The selectmen, being informed by B. Lynde, jr. that the House, since the 11th, had added £1600 to the £1400 first allowed Mr. Burnet, advised with gentlemen of the town about the vote, but did not call the inhabitants together. Mr. Burnet had not objected to the amount of these two sums, but to their not being granted as the King required.

would not comply with the royal injunction as to his salary. Hutchinson relates, that Mr. Burnet said, when about to order the Court here, "there might be a charm in the names of places, and that he was at a loss whether to adjourn the Court to Salem or Concord." * To accommodate the Legislature, "the new Town and Court House was fitted up."—Salutes are fired at the coming of the Governor into town. He informs the House, that the reason why he removed them from Boston was, that the people there endeavoured to influence Representatives from other places against granting him a salary and thus to rule the country.—The House remark, that however they apprehend, that they cannot be removed from one place to another without their own consent, they "do not refuse meeting his Excellency at this critical juncture."

Nov. 1st. The House send up their opinion, just mentioned, to the Governor, and desire him to order the Court to Boston.—6th. His Excellency ordered the Court to meet again at Salem the 12th.—14th. The House state to him, that they are greatly concerned at his dissatisfaction with them, that they had not acted from disloyalty to his Majesty, that they had not been influenced by the people of Boston, but by reasons, which would prevail with them every where, and that they still believe it irregular for them to be kept from sitting in Boston.—19th. A memorial is to be prepared for His Majesty, "setting forth the reasons why the House cannot settle a salary on the Governor for the time being."—22d. B. Lynde, jr. is on committee to desire the Governor, that he will adjourn the House. His Excellency refuses their request, because they refuse his.—23th. As the House had done no business for two days, the Council advise them to, lest it "be resented by His Majesty and have a tendency to endanger our happy constitution."

* April 2d. General Court meet in Salem. The Governor renews his call on the House as to fixing his salary. He assures them, that all expectation of his deviating from the King's instruction will be fruitless. He concludes, "as I kept you together in the Fall that you might avoid His Majesty's displeasure, until you put it out of my power to excuse you, by sending home a declaration that must have been highly offensive to him, so now I give you an opportunity, which this House will never have again, of retracing and retrieving so unhappy measures, and of showing that your professions of duty and loyalty to His Majesty are more than words."—4th. The question, "whether the House will come into any further consideration of settling a salary on the Governor at this session," is put and decided in the negative.—10th. A committee of the House, chosen Dec. 20th, to report on the message of the Council of the 10th of the same month, regret, that the Council have taken a stand against them by taxing them with mistaken views about the Court's being moved to Salem and with endangering the Constitution and ill-treating His Excellency. 12th. The Council inform the House, that they non-concur with the vote of 10th inst. for £300 sterl. to be paid Messrs. Wilks and Belcher for presenting and advocating the memorial of the House to the King. The Council say that their reasons for this are,—that the House would not give them a copy of their memorial and that they had incorrectly stated in the memorial, that the Council were opposed to a fixed and definite salary for the Governor.—16th. Rev. S. Fisk is allowed £10 for officiating as chaplain to the Council and House the last and present session.—The House return thanks to William Foy, William Clark and John Alford, of Boston, and others, for subscribing money to compensate the Agents in London for proceeding with their memorial to His Majesty, and also promise that they will endeavour to have the sum, thus raised to be paid in season.

17th. "A petition of Francis Gahtman, of Salem, Chyrurgeon, shewing, that by order of this Government, 1704, Capt. Larramore and others were sent to England to receive their tryals, as accessaries to Quelch's piracy, he was sent over with them, and in his passage was taken and carried captive into France and lost his cloathing, books, chyrurgeon's chest and instruments, to a considerable value, praying for such relief as the Court shall think proper. Referred to next May session." 18th. The Governor informs the House, that his proceedings had been approved by the Lords Commissioners, that he had not ordered them any pay, because they had refused to do business one third of their sessions and to compensate him, as the King required; and that "what has been hitherto done may be charged on this House of Representatives only; but the Country will now have an opportunity by a new choice of showing their loyalty to His Majesty as well as faithfulness to their own Constitution." already passed both Houses this session for that purpose," and they decide it in the negative.

* July 17th. Of eleven churches, invited by members of Mr. Fisk's church, who were dissatisfied with him, ten are represented in a Council, which sit here. It appears, that so long before as Dec. 15, 1718, a regular vote was passed by brethren of First Church to see about having a lecture preached, which as they remark, had been ever since the formation of their Church. This lecture was suspended at the decease of Messrs. Curwin and Noyes. On Dec. 25th, the brethren met, and some thought it would be well to have a lecture begin, and others to have it delayed. Upon what was said, Mr. F. recorded a vote, either at the time of its being passed or afterwards, in favour of reviving the lecture.—About two months after this meeting, Mr. F. began his lecture and continued it till Feb. 1726, when he discontinued it,—assigning as a reason, that it was very thinly attended. His doing of this produced dissatisfaction among his people. Some of them endeavoured to have the lecture revived. March, 1728, Mr. F. preached on vows to God and the sin of breaking them, and then referred his hearers to the vote of Dec. 25, 1718, as a vow, which had been broken.—April 1st. A majority of the Church met about this sermon.—10th. A committee of them waited on Mr. F. concerning its doctrine, as applied to them, and stated to him, that they considered what was said at the Church meeting nearly ten years before, about a lecture, was not sufficient for him to put down the vote, with respect to it, as he had. From this there were various means proposed by Mr. F. and his friends, and by the persons dissatisfied with him, for settling their difficulties.—1732—March 16th. Fourteen brethren exhibited charges against Mr. F. as to the vote and sermon.—23d. Mr. F. wished to know if they had brought all their charges against him.—27th. They said they had not mentioned some things, because they were only requisite to explain or prove their charges. Hence, Mr. F. declined to call a Church meeting, as they proposed, till they should present every particular which they had against him.—Nov. 8th. Ten brethren who had withdrawn from communion with Mr. F., sent a committee to advise with Boston ministers.—20th. These ministers desired the brethren to examine themselves and see whether they had done right in withdrawing, and to strive for healing their divisions.—1733. April 23d. The Pastors of seven churches in Boston informed Mr. F., that they had been applied to by part of his Church to assemble in Salem, as a Council, July 17th—At this date, as previously stated, these seven and three other churches, having formed themselves into a Council, received a letter from Mr. F. wherein he disclaimed the need of their session and their right to settle the troubles of his Church. They, however, proceeded in their examination of the complaints against him; and, on 20th, gave their result. This result justified the brethren, who called the Council; but advised them to become reconciled with their Pastor, and use endeavours for union in his Church.

* Aug. 15th. The Governor remarks to the House, that His Majesty's Order in Council, as an answer to their address, and the order of the House of Commons, as an answer to their memorial, were so full as to their supplying of the Treasury, as to leave them no excuse for their delay. In reference to this subject, General Court had petitioned the King, that he would so alter his instructions to their Governor as not to have the royal consent necessary before their acts for raising a revenue could be legal. In reply to them the King remarks: "His Majesty doth declare and signify his high displeasure at these repeated applications upon points, which have been already maturely considered by His Majesty in Council." The instructions, about which the Legislature had petitioned the King, had been given, because as his Majesty's Council remark:

• Prov. R.

“ A pernicious practice had prevailed in several Plantations of America for issuing bills of credit instead of money, to pay public debts. Hence great inconveniences arose in depreciation of bills. His late Majesty sent instructions to all his Governors in America, and among them Gov. Shute, in 1720, to order them not to give their assent for printing and issuing bills of credit, unless the act for them have a clause to denote, that it is not valid without his Majesty’s consent, excepting acts for raising and settling revenue to pay charges of government.”—16th. “ Whereas this Province is under the manifest tokens of Divine displeasure, particularly with respect to the difficulties, attending the public affairs at this time,” the House desire the Governor to appoint a day of prayer and humiliation.—21st. The Council propose, that a Fast be kept on Friday in their chamber by the whole Court. The House decline to comply with their proposal.

Oct. 5th. On the question, whether the House will conform with His Majesty’s order, as to supplying the Treasury, they voted in the negative.—19th. The Council send the following to the House: “ This Court being informed, that a number of merchants and traders of Boston are engaged in a project to emit bills or notes on their own credit, to the value of £110,000, and that the Colony of R. Island are making a very large emission of bills, whereby it is apprehended the public bills of this Province, which are already too much depreciated, may be affected, and it being the duty and interest of this government by all means to keep up the value of the bills of credit by them established,” voted, that a committee of their body join a committee of the House to report what is proper to be done.—22d. The Council vote to send and inquire of William Wanton, Governor of R. Island, as to the large emission of bills of credit on that Colony, which are feared, as tending to depreciate the bills of Massachusetts.—30th. The House vote to supply the Treasury with £76,500 in bills of credit, for discharging public debts. Twenty-five Representatives are against and fifty for this act. * William Fairfax, of Salem, is a receiver of the duties for the support of the Royal Hospital, at Greenwich. These duties appear to have been assessments laid on seamen. Every fisherman paid 6d. a month for the Hospital.

† Nov. 2d. The Governor, having the opinion of the Council, that the late act of the House, for supplying the Treasury, might be considered as agreeing with his Majesty's order, remarks to the House—"How much strife had it prevented and how great a change, and how happy had it been for this Province, if former Assemblies had come into the same wise and just way of thinking you are now fallen upon."—He recommends to the House, that they vote such a sum, as was justly due Gov. Burnet, to his children. He observes to them, that a step of this kind would tend to establish them "in the Royal grace and favour." They accordingly vote £3000.

‡ The Episcopal Church of Salem is built this year. The land belonging to it, was valued at £120. P. English and children, with other family connexions, who were owners of the land, gave £95 of its worth, and, for the rest, they took a pew.

1734.

§ Feb. 9th. A memorial of the officers, soldiers and heirs of persons deceased, who belonged to Essex and were in public service in 1690, under Sir William Phipps, is presented to the Legislature, praying, that they might be compensated for their "great misfortunes and fatigues, which they underwent in the expedition to Port Royal."—23th. The Legislature agree to celebrate Queen Caroline's birth day on the morrow.

|| March 18th. As the inhabitants of S. Village stated, that a chief reason why they had requested to be set off as a town by themselves, was that they had trouble about getting money for a school, it is voted, that two schools be kept within the bridge, one at the middle precinct, and one at S. Village, and also one at Ryal Side.

* April 11th. As the Governor informed the House, January 25th, that a universal war in Europe was expected and that fortifications, on the sea-board, should be repaired, they order, that as soon as Salem shall thoroughly repair Fort Ann, mount fifteen cannon, and provide suitable carriages for them, and other warlike materials, £600 in bills shall be granted towards the expense of such things.—15th. The House are informed, that the King had nullified their act of April, 1731, for paying the members of the General Court, which raised each Counsellor's pay to 10s. and each Representative's from 4s. to 6s. a day, while in session.

May 28th. General Court meet. B. Brown and D. Epes are Representatives.

† June 4th. Caleb Pickman is killed by lightning, while standing at his mother's door in main street. He was son of Benjamin and Abigail Pickman, and born June 10th 1715.—‡ 5th. B. Lynde, senior, is on committee to draft an address to the King, congratulating him "on the marriage of the Princess Royal with His Most Serene Highness the Prince of Orange."

§ July 16th. A council, called by some a synod, and by others the grand council, meet in Salem, with reference to the difficulties of the First Church. To understand the object of such a session, it is requisite to mention some particulars not yet stated. May 3, 1733, Mr. Fisk informs the brethren of his church, who were dissatisfied with him, that if they will prove their accusation against him, he will give them satisfaction; but if they cannot prove it, they shall give him satisfaction; and if he and they could not agree about the sufficiency of proof, he was ready to ask the opinion of others. He states to them, that this is the only method of issue, in which he will consent to join.—Dec. 20th. Twenty-one brethren of Mr. F's church write to second church of Boston and invite them to deal with his church, according to Cambridge Platform, because they would not settle their differences, and, therefore, walked disorderly.—1734, Feb. 6th. The second church of Boston admonish the First Church here, and desire them to confer with their messengers on 20th.—13th. Brethren, friendly to Mr. F., being eighteen, write to second church of Boston, and express to them their surprise, that they should be giving heed to their other brethren respecting difficulties of First Church here. 14th. Mr. F. also writes to the second church of Boston, disapproving of their interference.—20th. Joshua Gee and Samuel Mather, of the second church of Boston, wait on Mr. F. and his friends, who decline to hear them as delegates of an offended church, because they had no voice in calling them.—21st. These delegates leave a letter of admonition to First Church, as the leading step of discipline according to Platform. April 23d. According to second step with an offending church, the second church of Boston, having invited the third church there, the church of Rumney Marsh, and first church of Gloucester, to sit in Council at Salem, holds a session here with these other churches.—25th. This Council leave an admonitory letter for the First Church, which Mr. F. and his friends decline to receive.—May 27th. The brethren, calling themselves aggrieved, write Mr. Cheever, of Rumney Marsh, as Moderator of the late Council, that their other brethren had given them no satisfaction, and that they wished further means used for such an object.—June 19th. The churches which composed the Council, that sat here April 23d, inform Mr. F. that they had sent letters to twenty-seven other churches, having thirty ministers, to sit in Council at Salem, as a third way of discipline. The Council, having met, as before mentioned, was composed of delegates from nineteen churches, from which there were seventeen ministers. They vote, that each Elder shall have but a single vote, and that a majority of their body shall decide any question.

The four churches, which had called the Council, desired them to say, whether they had injured Mr. F. or any of his church; and, if not, to join with them in convincing him and them of their error; and bear testimony against his and their refusal to unite with the other brethren in an attempt to settle their difficulties. 17th. Mr. F. and his church being desired by Council to attend their session, he answered "that as he had always declared against the third way of communion and therefore had all along refused to have any thing to do in this way, so he still declared against it and refused to have any thing to do in this matter." As a majority of the Council voted, that it was inexpedient to have laid before them the proposal of Mr. F., made to his dissatisfied brethren, May 3, 1733, and the proceedings of the Council the following July 17th, Rev. Messrs. Tufts of Newbury, Wigglesworth of Ipswich, Chipman of Beverly, Barnard and Holyoke of Marblehead, withdrew and declined to act with the Council. The delegates of these ministers appear to have withdrawn, except those of Mr. Holyoke. * Mr. Barnard informed his Church, that several other elders were discontented, because the documents requested, were not produced, but still continued to join with the Council. The Council decided, that the steps taken by the four churches, in reference to Salem Church, were according to the Word of God and acknowledged principles of Congregationalism. The delegates of the four churches were then invited to join with the Council in future proceedings.—18th. A committee requested Mr. F. and his church to confer with the Council at the Town House, 3 o'clock, P. M. They reported, that Mr. F. declined their invitation; that but one or two of his friends thought of appearing; and that the dissatisfied brethren would attend. Mr. Samuel Ruck, of Mr. F's supporters, requested the Council to have Mr. F's proposal for reconciliation, previously called for, considered by their body. They complied so far with his request, as to have it read, but voted to consider it no further.—20th. The Council voted to adopt a letter of advice to First Church and adjourn to 15th of Oct. This letter advised Mr. F. and both his friends and opposers to settle their difficulties, during the adjournment, on pain of excommunication from the churches composing the Council. It is signed by Nehemiah Walter of Roxbury as Moderator. * 31st. Corn 6s. 6d. to 7s., rye 7s. 6d., oats 3s., wheat 10s to 11s., beef 8d. to 9d., lb. and £4 to £4 10 bbl., pork £5 10 to £8 bbl., hay 5s. to 5s. 6d. cwt.

† Aug 16th. Twenty-four brethren, friendly to Mr. Fisk, propose to the other brethren, considering themselves aggrieved, that the lecture, which they used to have, should be revived.—20th. Seventeen of the aggrieved brethren answer, that they wish to settle their difficulty about the vote recorded by Mr. F., as to the suspended lecture, before they unite in its renewal.—29th. The brethren, favourable to Mr. F., state to the other brethren, that, until they bring a plain accusation against him and lay it before him in writing with proof, they consider them as preventing a reconciliation in the Church,—they declare it as their serious opinion, that their reasons for withdrawing from communion, are unwarrantable; and concluded, “we expect you will not write to us again in this affair, until you have complied with our Pastor’s proposals, which we think are reasonable and scriptural.”

Oct. 15th. The Ecclesiastical Council meet, according to adjournment, in Salem Town House. Jeremiah Wise, Pastor of Berwick Church, is chosen Moderator. The Council inquire whether their committee had delivered their letter to Salem Church. The committee answer, that Mr. F. and Dea. P. Osgood declined to receive the letter, but that they left it with the dissatisfied brethren.—The Council invite Mr. F. and his friends to attend on their deliberations, but they decline.—18th. The Council declare to all the churches through the Province that the First Church in Salem (i. e. the majority who had favoured Mr. F.) have forfeited the privilege of communion with the churches, represented in their body. They, however, delay to pronounce sentence of non-communion against said Church for three months; but if, after this delay, the said Church refuses to hearken, they advise their own churches, which should accept their result, and all the churches of the Province to declare the sentence of non-communion against said Church.—The Council recommend to the communion of their own and other churches in the Province, twenty-three of the brethren, who were dissatisfied with Mr. F. Mr. Prescott, and his delegate dissented from this result. The Council remove to the Meeting House of First Parish and have their result read to a numerous auditory; and order copies of it to be delivered to the several parties concerned.

* Dec. 4th. Fast is observed in the First Parish on proposal of Mr. Fisk, for revival of religion in the world, this land and neighbourhood, and particularly on account of his Society's difficulties.—A. M. Mr. Warren prayed. Mr. Fisk preached from 80th Ps. 14 verse. P. M. Mr. Champney prayed. Mr. Clark preached from Jer. 32 ch. 39 verse. On this occasion there was a large assembly.—† 31st. "As wars in America between French and English had been carried on barbarously by surprising men, women and children at their lawful business, contrary to all methods of war both ancient and modern," the Representatives vote that the Governor agree with the French Governor of Canada to preserve a neutrality, or, if war, to carry it on less inhumanly, and, also, that he propose this subject to other Provincial Governors. A petition of Salem is presented to the Legislature, through their Representatives, stating, "Whereas Salem is a most ancient town of Massachusetts Province, and very much straightened for land, its inhabitants pray, that a tract of land may be given them at the head of the main branch of Swift River, southward of the new township of Paquoig." Their petition is granted on the conditions, that one lot for the first settled minister, one for the ministry, and one for a school, be reserved; that each grantee give a bond of £25, that he will be on the spot, and have a house seven feet stud, and eighteen square, at least, seven acres laid down for English grass so as to be mowed, help build a meeting house and settle a minister, within five years; and each grantee to pay £5 on his admission to be of the settlers, towards the expense of surveying the township. A considerable number of townships had been granted on similar conditions.

* March 10th. Persons of the First Parish here, disaffected with Mr. Fisk, vote to use endeavours for his exclusion from their meeting house and for employing another preacher.—† 17th. Gardner and Gatchell have leave to build a mill on Forest River, provided they give a good way through their own land, make and maintain a suitable cart bridge over the River at their own expense.

‡ April. As persons belonging to New Hampshire, had issued promissory notes, payable in bills of New-Hampshire, Connecticut, R. Island, and Massachusetts, or in gold, silver and hemp, "at the unknown price they may be in Portsmouth 1647," the Legislature forbid them to be taken in trade, on penalty of the sum received and also treble its value.—§ 18th. The brethren, opposed to Mr. Fisk, vote to dismiss him and hire Samuel Mather of Boston to supply their pulpit.—27th. The same brethren and part of the Congregation assemble in the meeting house on the Sabbath to worship. Mr. Fisk and a number of his friends also meet there. As he is going to enter his pulpit, he is told that if he persists he will be prevented. After some time, he withdraws and requests the audience to follow him.

In the afternoon, he appears in the meeting house with his supporters, and tries to enter the pulpit, but is hindered. He then desires silence and begins to pray, but such is the confusion, he stops. Perceiving himself not allowed to conduct the worship, he retires.

May 6th. Mr. Fisk gives bonds for his appearance at Court to answer for attempting to preach in his pulpit. James Ruck and Timothy Pickering, members of his church, are his sureties.—* 28th. General Court meet. D. Epes and B. Brown are Representatives.

† Sept. 1st. Walter Hamilton in a contest with Cuffee, a negro servant of John Clark, merchant, of Salem, so wounds him with shot from his gun, that he dies in a few minutes. Hamilton was tried for murder, but cleared.

‡ Oct. 31st. Beef 8d., veal 9d., mutton, lamb and pork 8d., wheat 12s., rye 8s., corn 6s. 6d., oats 3s., flour 48s. bbl., cyder 10s. bbl., hay 5s. to 5s. 6d. cwt., butter 18d. to 20d.

§ Nov. 10th. The Province tax of Salem is £930 11 4. In reference to this tax, the people here pass the following:—“Whereas there is an additional sum of £200 laid on this town above and beyond their equal proportion of the land tax, on account of the proposed impost's being lowered—Voted, that D. Epes and B. Brown be directed to make a just representation of the great decay of the fishery, and the grievous burthen on the W. India trade, by reason of the late act of Parliament, imposing a heavy duty on the goods imported from the Islands, called foreign; and the great sums drawn from us towards the support of the Greenwich hospital; the growing charge on account of the increase of the poor among us; together with the great uneasiness among the tradesmen, farmers and other inhabitants not immediately concerned in maritime affairs, nor advantaged by it more than the inhabitants of the neighbouring towns, that pay but their equal proportion of the land tax, and are not burthened as this town is; therefore, they petition General Court for liberty to draw the said £200 out of the public treasury, or such other relief as the equity of the case doth require."—Dec. 8th. A committee of the Legislature visit Salem and hold a session of three days in the town house, concerning the new meeting house, which Mr. Fisk's supporters had begun for him. The Committee find that the frame was placed only twelve perches and eleven feet from the First Parish meeting house; and their report, presented Jan. 1st, and accepted, requires that the meeting house of Mr. F's friends shall not stand nearer to the other than forty perches.—20th. D. Epes is empowered by the Legislature to call the first meeting of the Salem grantees of the new township for transacting business.

was not known, now apply to the Society for a minister, through Rev. Mr. Mac Sparran, and promise to pay the minister, whom they shall send, £130.

* Aug. 5th. Twenty-one brethren, who left Mr. Fisk, meet and renew their covenant. They vote to have John Sparhawk as their minister.

† Nov 4th, A bachelor of this town, aged 80, dies. He had appeared miserably poor. A week before his decease, he begged of the selectmen something for thanksgiving. No person knew of his having any property, except a woman, to whom he had offered a certain sum, if she would marry him. When he was sick, she told his relations of this offer, and they pressed him to inform them where his money was. He signified to them, that it was under the cellar floor. After his death, they searched and found silver coin and gold dust to the amount of £500.—‡ 29th. Samuel Ropes is chosen deacon, and Benjamin Lynde, senior, and John Nutting, ruling elders of the Church, which had seceded from Mr. Fisk. J. Nutting accepts his appointment May 17th.

Dec. 8th. A Council meet to ordain Mr. Sparhawk. Ministers present with their delegates, were Messrs. Prescott, Holyoke, Appleton, Chipman, Clark, Hobby and Champney. Messrs. Warren and Wigglesworth were invited, but did not attend. The Council being formed, received a remonstrance from Mr. Fisk and his friends against Mr. Sparhawk's ordination. They voted, that "Whereas the Council met at Salem, Oct. 18, 1734, did (after they had censured the First Church) advise those brethren, who have now called Mr. Sparhawk, that, in case they should withdraw from their own church and offer themselves to another, they might be received into it as if they had been regularly dismissed from their own church, yet we apprehend not that such advise (nor their constitution in the seventh article referred to) did at all oblige the said brethren to seek communion with any other church, provided they would settle Gospel ordinances among themselves." Mr. Appleton of Cambridge preached the sermon from Prov. 11 ch. 30 verse.—Thus were the persons of Mr. Fisk's church, who had withdrawn from him, fully separated from his charge. * He left the congregation, who adhered to him, in 1745. His church and Mr. Sparhawk's had a long disagreement with respect to land and plate, and, particularly, to the name, First Church. But, in 1762, they amicably divided the land and plate, and agreed, that the church, formed by seceders from Mr. Fisk, should be called first.—† 23d. The precincts of Salem and Beverly petition, that they become a town. Their petition is not granted.

‡ 27th. Dea. P. Osgood having withdrawn from Mr. Fisk's church and joined Mr. Sparhawk's church, is recommended by the latter for communion to those churches, which had excommunicated the first church. Mr. Sparhawk's church vote to have the Scriptures read, as a part of public worship.

† April 20th. B. Brown is of a committee to report on the following clause in the Governor's speech:—
 "There are lately come from Canada some persons, that were taken by Indians from Groton about thirty years ago, who (it is believed) may be induced to return into this Province on your giving them some encouragement. It would be not only an act of compassion to reclaim them from their savage life, and errors of the Romish faith; but their living among us might be of great advantage to the Province."

May 30th. General Court assemble. William Brown and Thomas Lee are Representatives. Peter Clark, of S. Village, preaches the Election Sermon.

June 12th. A committee of the Ministerial Convention, which met 31st ult., wait on the Legislature in reference to a litigation about land, granted 1668 by proprietors of South Kingston, to aid in the support of a Congregational or Presbyterian minister. It appears, that Rev. Mr. Mac Sparran, an Episcopalian, claimed this land from Rev. Joseph Torrey of S. Kingston, and that the case had been decided in favour of the latter minister. Mr. Mac Sparran had made his second appeal to the King. The committee petition the Legislature to support "so public a cause," by granting assistance to Mr. Torrey.—21st. This petition is opposed by Timothy Cutler, Ebenezer Miller, and Addington Davenport, the only Episcopal ministers in the Province. Besides these, however, there were Episcopal preachers, called Missionaries, because coming hither under the patronage of the Society in England for propagating the Gospel.

Sept. 19th. The Governor informs the House of a Royal order for commissions of Marque and Reprisals against Spanish vessels. He says, that, according to a statement of the Lords Commissioners, April 11th, the Massachusetts Government had issued in 1714—16—20 and 27, £260,000 in bills of credit; that 60 or £70,000 were not yet redeemed, though one emission ought to have been twenty years ago; and that 6s8, the value of one ounce of silver, was worth more than 20s. of the old bills.

Oct. 5th. T. Lee is on committee of the House to inform the Governor, that his late message contained some things, about their bill last year for an emission of £60,000 in paper, which affected the free exercise of Legislative power. The Governor declined to see the committee.—9th. He remarks to the Representatives in reference to the Treasury, which they had not supplied, “Whether owing to me, for my strict obedience to the Royal order, or to the disregard of your House to the King’s honour and his people’s safety,” judge ye.

Gen. Isaac Putnam moved from Salem to Pomfret, Conn. He was born Jan. 7, 1718, and baptized at the Village Church Feb. 2d. He was son of Joseph and Elizabeth Putnam. His father was son of John, who was son of John, who had two brothers, Nathaniel and Thomas, whose parents were John and Priscilla, of Abbotston, Buckinghamshire, England. He married a daughter of John Pope, by whom he had ten children, seven of which were living in 1818. She died 1764. After her decease he married a widow Gardiner, of Gardiner Island. He died of an inflammation at Brooklyn, Connecticut, May 19, 1790. His name will be long associated with the conquest of Canada, capture of Havana, the battle of Breed’s Hill, (commonly called Bunker Hill,) and other events of the Revolution.

The committee report, that they receive 2s. for each porpoise taken, on condition of delivering “the middle part of the tails to the town clerk, and that he has burned up the same.”—10th. As war had been declared Oct. 23d, against Spain, the Council desire to consult the House about what shall be done. The House non-concur.

March 4th. The Governor remarks to the House : “I have laid before you the defenceless state of the Province, the danger and injustice of an empty Treasury.”—*10th. A committee is raised in Salem to preserve deer as the law directs.—†17th. Phillip English had died recently. He was son of John, of the Island of Jersey, and was baptized June 30, 1651. He married Mary Hollingsworth, 1675, and Sarah Ingersoll, 1698. He left children. He had been an enterprizing merchant, Selectman and Representative to General Court. He and his first wife suffered considerably in their property and persons, from being prosecuted and obliged to flee on the charge of witchcraft.

‡ May 28th. General Court convenes. B. Brown and T. Lee, are Representatives. Besides J. Turner and B. Lynde, jr. of Salem, as Counsellors, William Brown is one of two, who were chosen for the same body, to act for inhabitants or proprietors of land in any part of the Province.—30th. B. Brown is on committee to consider his Excellency’s speech, relative to the enlistment of soldiers for an expedition against some part of Spanish W. Indies.

June 23d. The Governor says to the House, that the sea coast is unguarded, that there are loud complaints of public officers for not receiving their due ; that money is needed to pay the bounty of soldiers, engaged to go an expedition against Cuba, because they had delayed July 2d. Daniel Epes is Collector of Excise for Essex.—4th. J. Turner is on committee to consider measures in reference to the reported temper and conduct of Eastern Indians. The Legislature agree to supply the treasury with £100,000 in bills.—9th. £900 are granted for fortifications at Salem.

Sept. 10th. The House provide for the transportation of five companies, under Capt. John Winslow, which were part of 1000 men voted, August 20th, to be raised for the expedition against Cuba.—* 19th. George Whitefield preached in the First Church of Salem and took a collection for his orphan house in S. Carolina. His sermon, from John 17 ch. and 3 verse, was very interesting.

† Nov. 22d. The Governor says to the House in his message, "There have been for some time past two schemes going forward for circulating a great quantity of private notes of hand to pass in lieu of money; and I am told the notes are now getting out among the people." The first of the companies, here referred to, was John Colman and three hundred and ninety-five others. The second was Edward Hutchinson and one hundred and six others. It appears, that, June 19th, the Representatives voted on the question, whether these companies should emit their notes, and fifty-nine were in favour of such an emission, and thirty-seven against. Of the latter were B. Brown and T. Lee of Salem. The House, however, afterwards agreed with the Governor, that these notes should be suppressed. He and the Council require the stockholders of the two Companies to give bonds for redeeming their notes so as to prevent fraud. He further remarks, "As for the scheme of forming the Land Bank, it appeared to him and Council to be big with so many mischiefs to the people, that they thought it their indispensable duty to bear public testimony against it (as they have done) and so to save unwary people from the injuries they might otherwise suffer by taking notes for money, which have no honest or solid foundation." He proposes to the House, that they pass a law to prevent such a Bank. He states, that the King and Parliament had been petitioned for its suppression. The House, however, as a body, took no measures to oppose, but rather encouraged the Land Bank.—26th. T. * 25th. John Turner for Salem and D. Epes for Dan. Dist.—Rep.

June 8th. D. Epes presents a memorial for incorporating Danvers Dist. into a town, which was granted next day.—Hutchinson states “by the King’s instructions to the Gov., he was strictly charged to consent to no act for making a new town, unless, by a clause in it, there should be a restraint of this power of sending Rep., and Danvers a few years before, when it had been separated from Salem, was made a Dist. and not a town, because Districts had not this power.” Thus Danvers is set off from Salem. Among the persons so taken from the community here, were the following. Daniel Gardner, who had been Rep. to Gen. Ct. d. 1759, left wife Anna and children. Daniel Epes, son of Daniel and Martha E., b. He sets out from Boston every Friday morning and from Portsmouth on Tuesday morning following. The above conveyance has been found very useful and now more so, as there is another Curricule improved by J. S. The Gov. replies, that it would be contrary to His Majesty's will to have such a petition granted.—22d. House decide to impeach Mr. Oliver for taking his salary, as the King had ordered. The Gov. states, on 26th, to the House, that their process against Judge Oliver is unconstitutional. The House are thus stopped in their purpose as to this matter. Judge Oliver, evidently a very conscientious man, had political views different from those of the House, and while he acted consistently with his views and they with theirs, he was placed in a trying situation.—† 25th. Two men of Marblehead, suspected of being concerned in burning the hospital on Cat Island, on the 26th ult., are committed to Salem prison. In the evening 4 or 500 persons from Marblehead rescued the two men and carry them back. Military companies are ordered out to prevent this, but to no effect.

March 1st. By order of the High Sheriff, his deputy in Salem assembles several hundreds of the people here with arms, for recovering the two prisoners and seizing the principals concerned in their rescue. In the mean while, 6 or 800 were prepared at Marblehead to resist this force. The proprietors of the consumed hospital, fearful that if these two bodies came in collision, lives would be lost, agree to give up the prosecution of their claims for satisfaction. Such an agreement being made known here, the sheriff releases the men, whom he had summoned to enforce the law. The causes of the hospital's being burnt,—were opposition with some in Marblehead to its being built,—the small pox had Paine, and that they have £500 for their expenses.—The proportion of this sum for Salem was £13 4 8.—The House resolve that the shutting of Boston Port is a measure, which threatens ruin to the liberties of British America. They recommend the distressed people of Boston to the charities of the Province. They advise the public to renounce altogether the consumption of India Teas, and, as far as possible, to dispense with the use of all goods imported from E. Indies and Great Britain, until the grievances of America shall be redressed, and to encourage domestic manufactures. The Gov. disapproving of these proceedings, sent his Sec’y to dissolve the House. The Col. orders a Capt. to face his company to a body of our townsmen, on an opposite wharf, and fire on them. An inhabitant immediately and resolutely said to the Col. and his soldiers,—“If you do fire, you will all be dead men.”—This appears to have prevented the execution of the Col's order. Some of our people scuttle one of two gondolas, and, while doing the same to the other, lest the British should cross in them, they are charged by a party of soldiers and are forced to retreat with one of their number slightly wounded. The Reg't having been on the S. side of the Bridge 1 1-2 hour, the Col. promises, that if he should be allowed to march his men over it 30 rods, he will wheel them about and leave the town. § April 15th. P. Congress appoint a Fast to be 11th of May,—to implore God that the Union of the Colonies, in defence of their rights, may be preserved and continued; that America may soon behold a gracious interposition of Heaven for the redress of her many grievances,—the restoration of her invaded liberties and their security to the latest generation.—The Ess. Gazette, being moved from Salem, is printed in Stoughton Hall of the College. It takes an additional name of New England Chronicle.—18th. Up to this date from Jan. 3d there were 131 vessels cleared from Salem and Marblehead. 19th. Benjamin Pierce is killed by the British at the battle of Lexington. Other persons from Salem rode to the place of the engagement. Besides these, there were 300 soldiers under Col. Pickering, who marched on as fast as they could so as to be fit for action, into which they expected to enter and for which they were prepared. But they did not arrive in sight of the enemy, till the last of them were retreating through Charlestown, and, then, the British could not be reached by our militia, so as to be attacked. Because the Salem soldiers did not perform impossibilities, they were greatly censured. But when their case was laid before Gen. Ct., they were cleared from blame.

APPENDIX.

* June 20th. John Endicott and his first wife and company sailed from Weymouth, England, in the ship Abigail.—According to Morton's New English Canaan, she died with many others in 1629.

Rev. Thomas Cobbet of Ipswich writes, in 1677, to Rev. Increase Mather, as follows. "About ye year 1628 when those few yt came out with Collonel Indecot and began to settle at Nahum-keick, now called Salem, and in a manner all so seek of ye journey, that though they had both small and great guns, and powder and bullets for ym, yet had not strength to manage ym if suddenly put upon it, and tidings being certainly brought ym on a Lord's day morning, yt a thousand Indians from Sugust were coming against ym to cut ym off: they had much adoe amongst ym all, to charge two or three of ym great guns and traile ym to a place of advantage where ye Indians must pass to ym and there to shoot ym off, when they heard their noise they made in ye woods, yt ye Indians drew near, ye noise of which great artillery, to which ye Indians were never wonted before, did occasionally (by ye good hand of God) strike such dread into ym, yt by some lads which lay as scouts in ye woods, they were heard reiterate that outcrie (O Obbomock) and then fled confused back with all speed, when none pursued. One old Button, lately living at Haverhill, (died there 1672) who was then almost ye onely hale man left of yt company, confirmed this so to me."

Among those who came to attend the formation of the Church, (page 28,) was Edward Gibbons. On this occasion, he was seriously affected and became one of the most useful men in Boston. Joshua Scottow, in his narrative, informs us, that Gibbons was "the younger brother of the House of an honourable extract;"—that "he had been one of the Merry Mount Society."

By the word fully (p. 28,) is meant, that the First Church did not have two ministers,—pastor and teacher,—after Mr. Williams left,—except when one was enfeebled by disease or age so as to need a colleague.

As to the office of Ruling Elder, as mentioned (p. 29) John Appleton was chosen Ruling Elder, as successor to B. Lynde, in the First Ch. 1732,—Richard Lang was appointed to a similar office in the Third Ch., as successor to B. Goodhue, 1783,—and the North Ch., having had Ruling Elders from their beginning, elected Jacob Ashton for a Ruling elder, Feb 7, 1826.

1680.

July 25th. Mr. Johnson, at Salem, receives a letter from Gov. Winthrop, which recommended a Fast here on August 1st, because of sickness at Charlestown;—and which proposes, that the professors of religion in Charlestown, Dorchester and Salem become distinct churches.

Rev. F. Higginson, whose death is mentioned (p. 42,) was son of Rev. John H. and was settled at Claybrook before he came to Salem. He left a widow, Ann, who was living at Charlestown, 1669. He left the following children;—John, who d. 1708, Æ 92;—Theophilus, father of Samuel, a physician,—d. Æ 37;—Francis, a school master at Charlestown for a time,—became a preacher and d. at Kerby Stevens, Eng., 1670, in his 55th year;—Timothy followed the sea, and d. unmarried;—Samuel, Capt. of a man of war in Oliver Cromwell's time, and afterwards Capt. of an E. India ship, d. Æ 44;—Charles, Capt. of a ship in the Jamaica trade, d. Æ 49;—Neophitus, d. Æ 25;—Mary, who m. Rev. Mr. Fitch, of Conn., and Ann, who m. Mr. Chatfield.

* Aug. 18th. J. Endicott m. Elizabeth Gibson.

Judge Lynde, who d. 1781, remarks in his notes in a volume of Hutchinson—"It is said that Lady Arabella (Johnson) was buried near where the present Church of England now stands."—† Mrs. Phillips, wife of the Rev. Geo. P., who came over with Gov. Winthrop, was buried near Lady Arabella.

1681.

Jan. 26th. Ann, widow of Rev. F. Higginson, writes a letter of thanks to Gov. Winthrop for "two kine and house and money in hands of Mr. Coddington."

‡ Houses here had wooden chimnies and thatched roofs.

April 18th. The Court of Assistants order, that "each man who finds a musket shall have ready 1 lb. of powder, 20 bullets and 2 fathoms of match." Match continued for a considerable number of years to supply the place of Flints in New England and Europe. "It is necessary, says Walhuysen, (in L'Art Militaire, printed 1653,) that every musketeer knows how to carry his match in moist and rainy weather, that is, in his pocket or hat. The musketeer should also have a little tin tube about a foot long so as to admit a match and pierced full of little holes, that he may not be discovered by his match, when he stands centinel or goes on any expedition." The suggestion of this writer was the origin of match boxes.

June. Rev. John Cotton preached in Salem. His text was Jeremiah 5 ch. 5 vs. He showed, that God's covenant with Israel extended to his people in every age. It appears from an address, prefixed to Mr. C's sermon, that he had written to the pastor of Salem Church on the following subject. Some magistrates arrived here when the sacrament was about to be administered. One of them had a child recently born, which had not been baptized. A question occurred whether this magistrate should commune with the Church here and have his child baptized. This question was decided in the negative. Mr. Cotton hearing of this decision, wrote to the Salem minister, that wherever godly magistrates came and found the seals of the Covenant administered,—such magistrates had a right to these seals both for themselves and their children. The pastor here wrote back an affectionate answer to Mr. Cotton.

The following relates to Hugh Peters, a notice of whom closes on p. 151.—† He writes J. Winthrop, jr., April 30, 1654, and remarks, that he gave him conditionally all his property in Salem; and had sent him a loadstone to keep, if he did not return to N. England. There was a loadstone left by Gov. Endicott, which seems to have been the same sent to J. Winthrop, jr.

Mr. Peters writes to Dea. Gott, of Wenham, (formerly of Salem) March 3, 1655, his disappointment in not receiving rent for his property in Salem. He states, that he had conditionally given his property here to J. Winthrop, jr. He mentions, that Emanuel Downing was in London and that he wished Mrs. Downing would come thither.

The following letter was written to Gen. Ct., 1653, immediately after the law (p. 188) forbidding any person to preach without consent of neighbouring Churches or County Court.

* Honored and beloved in the Lord, etc.—We humbly crave leave to represent unto you the ioynt desyres and requests of the Church of Christ here at Salem in a matter of great and general concernment to them and so all other the Churches of Christ in this wilderness. That whereas lately there hath an order passed the Courte and is confirmed for a law, that no gyfted man (be he never soe orthodox or godlye) shall be permitted (though chosen by the people) to exercise his gyft in publyck for continuance unless the approbacon of the fower next adjoining Elders or Countie Courte be first had but in default thereof shall be subjected to penaltie as the civil magistrates and Courtes of justice shall determine (for soe much the lawe in substance and intention will beare, there being no exception of any more than other in the condition thereof) That the Honored Courte would be pleased to take this matter into consideration againe and to weigh the inconveniences of such a course in this case; for altho wee question not the sincere intention and meaning of any, that might have a chief hand therein to prevent all erronee opinions and unsound doctrines to be vented in the Country (a case most needfull in these times and for which wee have cause to bless God in any of his servantes and to thanke them) yet in this waye of doing it, wee are not cleere nor can iudge it to be right and according unto the rules of Christ;—first, because it intrencheth upon the liberties of the severall churches, who have power (as is confessed by all the orthodoxe) to choose and sett up over them, whom they please for theyr edificon and comfort without depending on any other power and yf a breach be once made into these liberties, we knowe not howe farre it maye proceed in time, there being such a leading example as this:—secondly, there being in this order not only a caution against the unsound and corrupt in iudgment to suppress them (which is the maine reason pretended) but a peremptorye prohibition of any whatsoever (tho never soe orthodoxe and godly, as hath bene expressed) to medle or undertake without such leave or approbation, which hath the nature of a universall denyall of all such liberties of the servants of God in that greate case:—thirdly, because those companies of people in these parts requiring such healpes are most of them (yf not all) branches of churches, who watch over theyr members and have power to reforme any such doctrinall evils among them without calling upon theyre eldersor Courtes of justice to suppress them and make a stoppage of all togyther in that behalfe, soe making the remedye worse than the disease.—These are but some of the groundes wee have to intreat the repealing of this order for the present till better consydered and, further, that lawes made concerning churches in generall and theyre liberties might be with the consent of the churches first had and known therein. Thus craving leave for this boldness on such an occasion as this, and beseeching the Lord to direct you aright in all yr determinacons there, we humblie take leave and remaine yr servants in the Lord,

EDWARD NORRICE,

SAMUEL SHARPE,

* Feb. 19th. Chimnies in town are ordered to be swept once a month from the begining of 8th mo. to end of 1st mo. and once in two months from 1st of 2d mo. to the last of 7th mo., on penalty of 12d for every neglect. John Milke is appointed town chinney sweeper. If by neglect of sweeping a chimney, it burn out of the top, a fine of 10s. is to be paid.

March 2d. The town intended to grant leave for another mill to be set upon South River; but John Trask so engaged for his father to grind the corn of the inhabitants or have it ground at Lynn, as to have such intention suspended.

† June 6th. The following is the substance of a letter of this date, written by Rev. John Higginson to General Court. Having preached before the Legislature, he wished to present a few more things for their consideration. He considered, that the Civil Government, published by Cotton, was erroneous, because it did not notice the Patent,—did not speak of allegiance to the King, and represented persons, who were not members of the Church, as the unbaptized Corinthians were in Paul's day.—Mr. H. proposed, according to His Majesty's letter, that persons be made freemen, "provided they be orthodox in religion and of unblameable conversation;" that the Common Prayer book might be cited against the wicked as the Heathen Poets were by an Apostle;—and that presents to Kings were proper and a sign of allegiance.

In a P. S., Mr. H. has the following:—"I doe further entreate yt ye hon'd Court will please to consider what course may be taken for ye dissolueing of ye Quaker meetings here, which we have frequent and constant, without interruption a long time, strange Quakers often repaireing hither yt occasion may be given for others abroad to looke upon Salem, as a nest of Quakers, from hence to infect ye rest of ye country."

Nov. 9th. John and Samuel Gardner had leave to build the aforesaid mill.

Dec 5th. Paid for killing seven wolves £17 10.

22d. A committee to treat with the Selectmen of Marblehead about building a bridge over Forest River.

Josselyn, under 1663, says of Salem, "It hath two harbours, Winter and Summer, which lye within Darbie's Fort. They have store of meadow and arable. In this town are some rich merchants." He gives the following account of contributions in Mass. Churches. "On Sundays, P. M. when sermon is ended, the people in the galleries come down and march two abreast up one ile and down another until they come before the desk, for pulpit they have none. Before the desk is a long pne where the Elders and Deacons sit, one of them with a money box in his hand, into which the people as they pass, put their offerings, some 1s., some 2s. or a half crown, or 5s., according to their ability and good will, after this they conclude with a psalm."

* March 6th. "It is voted, that whoever kill any wolves within the precincts of this town, shall have 40s. each wolf, provided they bring the heads and nayll them on the meeting house."

† Aug. 18th. Gen. Ct. confirm Henry Bartholomew as Cornet of the Troop at Salem.

1666.

‡ April 21st. "The meeting house is to be the watch house until another be built." An agreement is made between Salem and Marblehead to have a country road leading from one of these towns to the other, to be laid out 24th. This road was altered from the old way.

The letter, containing the answer of General Court, as to the invasion of Canada, &c., (p. 228) was dated Sept. 11th.

1667.

§ Feb. 12th. As "John Norman hath reseved greate losses at sea, being taken by the Dutch, his rates are remitted."

|| In the beginning of 1667, some Dutchmen of war came to Virginia and plundered 18 or 19 sail of merchantmen and burnt a Frigate. John Brown, son of Elder Brown, was in one of the vessels so plundered. A Dutch captain told the said John, that, if they had not gotten so much booty at Virginia, they should have visited N. England, but that they should return.

1668.

June 10th. "The next Lecture day, what is given for the freight of the masts for his Majesty, is to be brought to the Selectmen."

1669.

Feb. 8th. Voted that each Deputy to General Court shall in future have 2s. 6d. a day while there.

April 19th. Several persons are fined for entertaining Thomas Maule and he is warned to depart.

**Sept. 16th. The Ketch Providencē, Capt. John Grafton, from Salem to W. Indies, was cast away on a rock in a dark and rainy night. The whole crew were ten, of whom six were drowned. The master, mate and a seaman, who was badly wounded, remained on the rock till morning. In the morning they arrived, with difficulty, to an island about half a mile off, where they found another of their company. There they continued eight days, sustained by salt fish, and also, the last four days by cakes made of a barrel of flour, which washed ashore. "After four days they found a peice of touchwood, which the mate had formerly in his chest and a peice of flint, with which, having a small knife, they struck fire." They framed a boat with a tarred mainsail and some hoops and then fastened pieces of boards to them. With a boat, so made, they sailed ten leagues to Anguilla and St. Martins, where they were kindly received. * Joshua Ward was one of these sufferers.

The meeting house to be built, (p. 238) was 50 feet wide and 60 long.

1670.

April 5th. "Ordered that if any house holder shall entertayne any stranger to dwell, as an inmate, from any other parts, above one week and not give notice to the Selectmen for the tyme beinge, he shall forfeite 20s. a weeke for the tyme afterwards."—"Thomas Oliver is chosen to goe from house to house aboute the towne once a month to inquire what strangers doe come or have privily thrust themselves into the town and to give notice to the Selectmen."

July 5th. Persons "to agree with Mr. Daniel Eppes for our schoolmaster, not exceeding £20 for one year, half pay from the inhabitants besides and whole pay from strangers."

Nov. 23d. Wm. Lord is appointed corder of wood and to have 3d. a cord, to be paid by the buyer.

|| March. Capt. Dove takes Phillip Ashton, of Marblehead, from a desolate Island, in the West Indies, and brings him to Salem. Ashton was one of the four, taken by the noted pirate, Low, as related under 1722. Ashton suffered much and was often in danger of losing his life, while among the pirates. They watched him so narrowly, he could not escape from them, till March 9, 1723, when he went on shore of the said Island with a boat's crew for water. He improved this opportunity to hide in the woods, so that his shipmates could not find him. He continued on the Island, suffering much from hunger, from want of clothing and sickness, till found by Capt. Dove.

¶ “Ordinarily the Psalm is read (in worship) line after line by him, whom the Pastor desires to do that service; and the people generally sing in such grave tunes, as are most usual in the Church of our nation. The afternoon benediction is preceded by the phrase,—‘Blessed are all they that hear the word of God and keep it.’”

March 23d. Last week two barns were burnt at Salem.

April 6th. Mr. Brown of Philadelphia is appointed Collector of the port of Salem and Marblehead in place of Benjamin Vining deceased.

Wm. Jennison (p. 413) married Abigail, daughter of James Lindall, May 15, 1730. † She survived him and died at Danvers about 1765, and left children,—William and Samuel Jennison, and Mary Giles.

Mr. Whitefield says in his journal, as to his visit here, (p. 419) “ I preached to about 2000. Here the Lord manifested forth his glory. In every part of the congregation persons might be seen under great concern. Mr. C—k (Clark) a good minister seemed to be almost in heaven.”

The following is a list of the original inhabitants of Salem, except those who were members of the Church, up to 1651,—so far as they are recorded. It is very probable, that some of them had resided here before the time, in which we have met with them, as first named.—The fact, that our Town Records up to 1635, are lost, and our Ecclesiastical Records, except those of members and baptisms, up to 1660, are destroyed,—shows how difficult it is for us to ascertain much about our primitive settlers.—The list will present names of persons alphabetically, according to the year, in which they appear, or are known to have begun their abode in this place.

The following is a list of the Members of the First Church up to 1651. Up to 1637, they are put down on the Records without any reference to the date, when they united with the Church. Prince informs us, that this Church began with thirty members. No doubt, a number of the names are omitted from among those, who joined the Church up to 1637. This mark (†) suffixed to the name of a man, denotes, that he was, or seems to have been, resident here at the year, before which such mark is placed. When this mark has no numerals following it, the year, immediately preceding, is to be understood. An account will be given of the members up to 1637,—and then the rest will be named under their respective years of professing religion.

1781. List of Privateers fitted out and chiefly owned in Salem and Beverly, from March 1, to Nov. 1, which was found among the papers of the late James Jeffry, whose accuracy was well known to those by whom he is remembered. At that period, privateering was the principal business of the town.

ADDITAMENTA AND ERRATA.

IN the preceding work there are more inaccuracies, than a person unacquainted with the difficulty of compiling it, would expect. But individuals, who have experience, as to such historical productions, will charitably allow,—that these inaccuracies are consistent with the careful investigation and collocation of facts.—The writer of this work would remark, that he is answerable for its mistakes, except a small proportion of them—made by the printer.—Some typographical errors are unnoticed here, because a reader of them can easily perceive how they should be. Though part of the succeeding inaccuracies, &c. have been previously printed, yet it is thought best to give them a collected place here.

In the following, f. will mean for,—l. line,—o. omit,—and r. read.

---

THE following Index contains most of the names, except the greater part of those in the lists, commencing page 548, and refers to most of the facts, comprised in the preceding Annals. When several pages, referring to the same person or subject,—are of the same ten or tens, hundred or hundreds, such figures will be expressed only once.—When a page is used without any subject before it, such page sometimes denotes the last subject mentioned and sometimes does not.—The subsequent abbreviations will be used :—f. for family,—d. for dead or dies,—and the word, here, will stand for Salem.
